THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

Decline in the Consumption of Butter—Eggs Are Firm

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

The outstanding feature in the grocery markets during the week was the decline of 60c per barrel in flour and the easier feeling in the sugar market. Millfeeds on the other hand have advanced and are likely to continue firmer, due to the new regulation of the British Government that the flour purchased for the use of the troops must have a higher percentage of shorts and middlings. It is estimated this provision will add about 10 per cent. to the available flour supplies. But it will decrease the supplies of millfeeds by an equal amount.

BUTTER STEADY.

Both live and dressed hogs have advanced again. Hogs now reaching the maples are of better size and dealers do not have to sacrifice them in order to dispose of them. Butter held steady during the week, with decline in the consumption noted. Eggs are firm with very few strictly new-laids reaching the market. Dressed ducks, geese and turkeys are firmer and have advanced slightly. Honey is also firmer, due to large consumption. Cheese on the other hand is slightly easier, due to the arrival of winter cheese on the market. All dried fruits are holding steady. Teas are firm. Boxed cereals in certain instances have advanced in price. Other advances in these are anticipated. Business has been fairly good during the week, but the trouble with shortage and freight deliveries continues to be a perplexing one.

The canned goods situation is still unsettled, and some wholesalers are quoting prices on canned tomatoes at lower figures than the canner's quotations. There has been a noticeable falling-off in the demand for canned goods, dut no doubt to the high prices asked. Fewor American lines have come in this week than in previous weeks. In dried fruits, the currant situation is the centre of attraction. The latest developments in Greece have upset all calculations of importers and in the present state of the market prices on currants are merely nominal.

NEW THRUST ON WESTERN FRONT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Latest report from General Haig, indicates new thrust on western front.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Twelve Men Reported Missing in the Big Quaker Oats Fire

Three Men Died in the Hospital and the Body of a Fourth Was Taken From the Ruins---Fire is Burning Itself Out in the Fireproof Warehouse---Many of the Girls Fainted and Had To Be Carried Out.

MANY NARROW ESCAPES

A smoking heap of ruins, outlined by a jagged edge of wall, is all that remains of the front part of the main building of the Quaker Oats plant. A trip to the scene of the catastrophe this morning reveals little change from last night. A large part of the fireproof warehouse on the east side of what was once the main plant, is still standing, while to the rear of the main building and close to the scene of many miraculous escapes stands a portion of the brick elavator. Farther to the rear and standing alone amid the debris is a battery of sixteen concrete silos. With the last named exception, the entire plant is a complete wreck. This morning brought little hope of a reduction in the list of missing. Last available figures places the number unaccounted for at about sixteen. It will be late this afternoon before a complete and accurate list can be compiled. Present indications point to a death list of between twelve and sixteen men. Three of these have died in the hospital, one body was recovered from the ruins and the remainder are reported missing.

FIRE STILL SMOULDERING.

The fire is slowly burning itself out. From ten o'clock yesterday a.m. it has been burning fiercely in the fireproof warehouse to the east of the main building. The building was filled with stock of all kinds and judging from present appearances not a vestige will remain. About six-thirty o'clock last evening a portion of this building collapsed, sending a huge shower of sparks over the city. The flames shot several hundred feet into the air and drove nearby spectators and volunteer workers to cover. It was one of the spectacular features of the fire. The falling snow probably saved the city from further damage, as the burning brands fell in every direction.

CAUSE OF THE FIRE.

Various rumors are in circulation as to the cause of the fire but the only one admitted by the officials of the Company is that the explosion was due to an accumulation of dust which as every miller knows is an ever present danger in the milling industry. One of the survivors claims to have been through two previous fires of a similar nature. Five minutes more and he would have passed into the drying room where so many men lost their lives. He had been repairing a machine and was about to return to that part of the building when he was lifted off his feet by the force of the explosion and thrown backwards. He is firmly convinced that the fire was caused by a dust explosion. The dust accumulates in the building and when it reaches a certain chemical condition becomes highly inflamable. The force of the explosion was terrific. It lifted two walls clean out of place and threw some of the debris across the river. This was followed by a huge volume of smoke and a few minutes later, flames shot out from the upper stories of the plant. A half an hour later some of the walls began to fall, which goes to show the terrific force of the explosion as the fire had not sufficient time to burn its way through.

BOILER ROOM SCENE.

The scene in the boiler room following the explosion were indescribable. Several engineers and a number of men were trapped by the falling walls as the engine room and a large portion of the mill was wrecked by the explosion. Close by was the drying room, bag-cleaning room both of which claimed a number of victims. On the sixth storey Dennis O'Brien was seen making his way toward an exit when the floor under his feet gave way and he was swallowed up in an abyss of death and destruction. Only one body as recovered yesterday, that was Edward Howley. He was lying a few feet from the wall of the building and apparently was caught by falling walls. Three others died in the hospital yesterday. They were Walter Holden, J. Fosoro and D. Martino. The last two are Italians. Several Italians are believed to be in the wreckage.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Percy Naish has had three narrow escapes in the last ten years. Ten years ago. He was trapped in the building then known as the oatmeal section of the Quaker Oats plant. He managed to escape and five years later was a survivor of the Turnbull disaster which cost several lives and wrecked a large departmental store. Yesterday's fire found Percy Naish located in the packing room within a few feet of the spot where several men met their death. Again he succeeded in making his escape. Had he been working in the drying room as he was up until a few days ago his chances of recording a third narrow escape would have been very slim. As it was he had barely time to assist a few of the two hundred and fifty girls to get out. Many of the girls fainted and had to be carried out. Mabel Powers who is employed in the office attempted to return and secure the pay-book of the packing department. When she finally made her way out her path was blocked by a couple of girls who had fainted, and a third who was attempting to bring them around. She believes she jumped over the three of them. There were no fatalities among the girls. Most of them lost their street wraps.

Tom Harrison hung suspended from the ledge of a window in the elevator several stories high. His removal, by means of ladders caused a manifest sigh of relief. He was all in when taken down. A gang of men started to work on the ruins this morning.

ALLIES PURCHASING FEWER GOODS IN THE UNITED STATES

Action Follows Decision of Britain and France to Withdraw Treasury Bills

SEE LARGER GOLD IMPORTS

Bankers Say Entente Governments Are Preparing to Send Vast Quantity of Precious Metal Here.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Since the British and French Treasury authorities decided not to offer Treasury bills in this country, out of respect for the opinion of the Federal Reserve Board, a marked decline has occurred in the volume of purchases made here by the Allied Governments. This fact was developed yesterday as the result of inquiries made in quarters where large orders have heretofore been placed by the foreign nations, both for war material and commercial goods.

Signs of this contraction of purchases will not be reflected in export figures o fthe country for some time, perhaps for six months. The orders placed of recent date were for the most part for future delivery, and as the mills and factories have long been choked with business, a great deal of the goods contracted for will be shipped later than would be the case in normal times. Arrangements have been made with local bankers for payment for all the supplies already under contract, and it is expected that the extent of additional orders will be governed chiefly by credit agreements to be made in the future between the authorities of the allied countries and American bankers and by the shipment of gold.

Another big consignment received at the Assay Office for account J. P. Morgan and Co. indicated that the gold movement is gaining impetus. The shipment amounted to $15,800,000 all from Ottawa and it was learned that upward of $20,000,000 more would come in next week. The total of imports this week now amounts to $50,000,000, and since Jan. 1 $575,000,000 gold has been received from all sources.

From information gained in banking quarters it appears as though the allied Governments are making preparations for the exportation of gold to us in vast quantity for many months to come. As official announcement has been made on several occasions that a part of the gold shipments were being applied directly to the purchase of supplies, it is assumed in some quarters that the allied buyers are preparing to use the precious metal on a greater scale than heretofore for this purpose. It is known that Great Britain, in co-operation with her allies, is speeding up the shipment of gold to Ottawa for distribution as the need arises, while a continuation of shipments from Australia and Russia direct to San Francisco is looked for.

While the inflow of gold expanded substantially, there was yesterday a sharp spurt in exports from this city to South America and Spain. A number of the leading banks and trust companies drew upon the Sub-Treasury for gold coin to a total of $9,110,000, the largest aggregate of outgoing metal for any day this year. Bankers took $5,700,000 for transfer to Buenos Aires, and it was assumed that withdrawals amounting to $3,550,000 more were also for Argentina. The gold coin for Spain amounted to $800,000.

Since Nov. 1 approximately $30,000,000 has been shipped to South America, chiefly for the correction of the trade balance which has been heavily in favour of countries of the southern continent for three months. The movement of gold to Spain is also for the purpose of paying for goods, remittances in this form being cheaper than through exchange channels.

A GOOD WINTER HABIT

Many people dread winter because the sudden climatic changes bring colds, grippe, rheumatism, tonsilitis or bronchitis. But thousands of well-informed men and women today avoid much sickness for themselves and their children by taking a few bottles of Scott's Emulsion to make richer blood, fortify the membranes of the throat and chest and create body-warmth to resist sickness. Soldiers at war receive cod liver oil; it will also strengthen you.

LLOYD GEORGE TOLD THE LABOURMEN THAT VICTORY LAY IN LABOUR'S HANDS

Daily Chronicle Prints Account of Conference—Entire Energies of Nation Must Be Utilized to the Full—State Will Control National Resources.

EVERYBODY IS CHEERY

LONDON, Dec. 12.—A Daily Chronicle account of the conference between Lloyd-George and the labour leaders says that Lloyd-George told his callers that the great task, a vigorous prosecution of war to a victorious conclusion, could only be achieved by utilizing to the utmost the entire energies of the nation.

The whole prospects of success, he went on, depended upon continued an increased output of munitions of war of all kinds, and that was why labour had such tremendous responsibilities thrown upon it at the present crisis.

The inquiries of the Labour representatives Lloyd-George outlined his programme, which, according to the Chronicle, "amounts practically to direct control by the state of the whole resources of the country." It is proposed to control all the industries and means of transport, both by land and by sea, so that the manpower of the nation can be directed into such channels as may be considered best—into the production of munitions of war or into maintaining that part of our export trade which is necessary to keep up the exchanges.

Increase Home Produce.

"It was suggested that every effort should be made to increase home grown food supplies by encouraging cultivation of waste land and improving methods of cultivating land already under tillage. To this end farmers are to be provided with the most modern machinery obtainable, and the direction of agricultural operations will be organized so as to dispense with superfluous labour. Food supplies and prices are to be rigorously controlled.

"An attempt is to be made to improve the position of the dependents of soldiers by revising the scale of pensions and allowances. Promise is given that the work of organizing the return of men to civil occupations after the war shall be pushed forward so that labour can be absorbed with the minimum amount of friction and suffering.

No Discrimination.

"The representatives of labour pressed Lloyd George on two points —conscription of labour, which is a ground of complaint, and conscription of wealth, which is asked for as complement of the former. It is understood that his answer to the first was that his policy would be in the direction of regulating the work of the whole manhood of the country so that no one class could complain that it was unfairly dealt with. As to the latter a scheme for the control of investments and savings on lines of that in existence in the case of certain American securities was foreshadowed. In addition there is likely to be a large extension of the war profits tax. All profits will be calculated on the average, taken in the three years before the war, and all in excess of this amount will go to the state."

Everybody is Cheery.

"Everybody cheery," ran a headline in Lloyd Northcliffe's Evening News, and undoubtedly within the last forty-eight hours there has been an extraordinary change in the public mood to judge from superficial manifestations. Doubts and depression have given place to confidence and good spirits.

Cattle prices yesterday reached high water mark for choice Christmas cattle. The market was unexpectedly strong, even for a record season of high prices, and some of the highest prices for a regular market, outside of special christmas fancy prices, were registered yesterday. A choice lot of four steers were sold at $11.50. Several straight loads sold up to $10 and $10.50. Good butcher loads were strong around $9. All grades were strong and the demand keen.

Hogs were steady, with last week.

The donor was Mr J. Goode, manager of the Stock Yards. The proceeds of the sale were for the benefit of the British Red Cross. The steer was led into the central office building, and Mr. George Rowntree acted as auctioneer. The steer was sold in sections, to be delivered after 'dressing.' Bids were lively and varied from $5 for the suet up to $50 for two inches of steak. The sale was proceeding at noon, and it was expected $1,000 would be handed over to the Red Cross.

Receipts at the Union Stock Yards were 120 cars, made up of 3,014 cattle, 174 calves, 761 hogs, 896 sheep and lambs.

MINERAL DEPOSIT IN HALIBURTON

A valuable mineral deposit suitable for the manufacture of armour plate and guns is reported from Haliburton. Strange to say the claim is owned by a Parsee Babon Hindu from the banks of the Ganges, India. Mr G. C. MacKenzie, Government representative of the Department of Mines and a brother of the Rev. Mr. MacKenzie, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church of this city has visited the location. Mr. MacKenzie reports extensive evidences of a deposit of molybdenite which largely enters into the manufacture of hardened steel products. Mr. McAvidy of the Munitions Board has also visited the bone. As yet, only surface workings have been made but in the opinion of experts who have visited the claim the indications warrant more extended operations.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

CHAPTER X.

Mary Burton made her way between tall hedgerows of box where an alley of shade ran to a side terrace, and when she had gained her own room her eyes were aglow with a new and rather radiant sort of smile, that also crept to the corners of her lips and hovered happily. It was a vague smile, but if the man who had enticed it there had seen it, he would have felt reassured. The threat of to-morrow's wreath would not have troubled him.

When Mary Burton, changed into bedroom attire, had dismissed her maid for the night, she still moved about with a restlessness which did not at once yield to the composure needed for the rigid self-analysis upon which she was resolved. She stood before her mirror and looked gravely into the glass.

With the lustrous masses of hair falling braided over her shoulders and the new glow of discovery in her eyes, she might have been a girl just budding into womanhood. She seemed in the last hour to have slipped back into the blossom time of her beauty and though it was a beauty which she had always realized she now felt a new happiness in its possession. Hereto fore her pride had been such as one feels for a means of conquest.

Now it was different. Her breast rose suddenly and fell to the excitement of a subtly powerful emotion. This beauty had a new value. It might be a prize worth surrendering proudly and as a gift to a man of her choosing. If this rainbow of promised love proved real she would wish herself even lovelier—for his pleasure. It was of course too soon to feel sure—and at that thought a sudden gasp of fear rose in her throat. At all events it was not too early to hope that the night had brought her the thing for which she had yearned—brought the commencement. She gave to the face in the mirror a friendly smile. "This afternoon I rather hated you," she announced gravely. "I gazed at you and a soulless little pig stared back but who knows?

Maybe down under your vanity and selfishness you have after all the cobwebbed little germ of a soul. If so we must dig it out and brush it off and put it to work."

Then she turned out the lights and sank down dreamily in the broad window seat. The moon rode high and bathed the hills in its limpid yet elusive wash of silver and blue and dove grays. Far off like a brush stroke from a dream palette ran the horizon's margin of hills and nearer at hand tapering poplars stood up like dark sentinels. The lights and music told of the dance still in progress and strolling figures occasionally crossed the silver patches between the shadows.

In her own mind she was reviewing all the men who with her had sought to throw off the mantle of the Platonic and invest themselves in the more romantic habiliments of courtship. One lesson had been taught her from the first and she had learned it thoroughly—too thoroughly! She was no ordinary girl to give way to pawing throbbing of the pulses. Her future must run side by side with brilliant things and brilliant men.

It takes experience to teach distrust to those frolicsome playmates, Youth and Buoyancy. She had met with that experience and had learned that fortune hunters are by no means mythical or extinct. When to the honey pot of wealth is added the lure of beauty how can one be sure that any proffered love is free from the taint of greed? Her brother was one of America's most brilliant money-getters. He gathered in and disbursed with a lavish magnificence. She had been called the most beautiful woman in Europe and her gem like brilliancy had been set in Life's gold and platinum of environment. When Cupid came to her what bill of health could he produce to prove that he was not a sneak thief in disguise? She had accepted the cynical conclusion that she might never be sure of any man's love and the tenderer little heart-nerves which govern impulse were growing numb. Under a naive freshness and girlish fragrance of personality lay masked batteries of distrust and hardness. The Duke de Metuan fancied himself genuinely in love with her. Of that she was sure, but should the Duke de Metuan learn tomorrow morning that she had overnight become penniless—she broke off and laughed.

And to-night had come the unwarned tumult of feeling against which she possessed no argument. Jefferson Edwardes had looked at her and his eyes were a guarantee of honesty beyond question. She did not even ask to see the Love God's passport. This man was a member of a great family of bankers; a family that had stood for generations among the richest in the country. Ham's magic control of the money tides could not even subconsciously influence his decisions.

It was wonderful to sit there in the window, adrift on a tide of elation and to know that the numbness of her heart was not a permanent paralysis—that she had a soul. It was absurdly delightful, too, to reflect upon the illogical swiftness with which it had all happened.

"To-morrow," she announced to herself, nodding her head very decisively, "I shall be furious with him. I shall refuse to speak to him. I shall let him realize that such lord and dumption brings swift retribution." Then, low and gaily she laughed. "After I have punished him I'll be very nice to him, unless—" her lips tightened as she added—"unless he says he is sorry he did it and apologizes. If he does that I'll never speak to him again."

While Mary was spending so comfortable and pleasant an hour with her reflections and while Jefferson Edwardes was tramping the hills several miles away, a small number of unattached men lingered near the punch bowl and cigars in the huge living room of the lodge.

One of these refugees from the zone of dancing activities was of more than ordinarily striking appearance. When he stood he towered and even when he sat as now, morosely lounging and taciturn, he bulked large and wore a countenance of such strength and determination as suited his giant body. In spite of his great physique he carried no superfluous flesh, but tapered to the waist and, notwithstanding his present detachment and a seriousness that verged on sullenness the face seemed more patterned for nature for the broad grin of good fellowship and clean mirthfulness.

Quite obviously Len Haswell, whose laugh ordinarily rang like a fog-horn over the chorus of conversation, would just now have preferred being elsewhere. When their customary joviality left those gray eyes, the man's immensity took on something of an ogre's power. He tinkled the ice in his high-ball glass—a process to which he had devoted himself with unaccustomed repetition this evening and, instead of mellowing into conviviality under his libations, his eyes narrowed a little and the small frowning [illegible] his brows decreased.

"The Big Fellow's having a growch sh, what? He's getting a bit squiffy, if you ask me," suggested Norvil Thayre to the group centred where the punch bowl was being administered. Norvil Thayre was not having a growch. If he had ever had a growch he had kept his secret well. An American by adoption, he was still aggressively British in speech, dress and assertiveness.

Norvil Thayre's chest was always thrust out as cheerily and as confidently as a cock-robin's, and his step was as elastic as though he had just come, freshly galvanized, from some source of exuberant energy. His clothing escaped the extremes of fashion by the narrowest margin of good taste and his mustache ends bristled up towards the laughing wrinkles about his wide awake eyes like exclamation points of alertness.

And, went on Mr. Thayre amiably, if he hungers for solitude I am the last chap in the world to intrude on his meditations. I jolly well know myself what it means to hang precariously on the fringe of plutocracy with only the beastly whisper of an income and by the Lord Harry I am a bachelor." Several auditors nodded their sympathetic understanding, but a tall youth with viking blond hair and vacant eyes which seemed to proclaim I am looking, but I see not," was less judicious. He lounged over and dropped into a chair at Haswell's side.

"That singularly frightful little ass, Larry Kirk, is going to cheer him up now," smiled Thayre. "Trust him to make himself a nuisance."

"Not dancing much this evening suggested Kirk by way of opening the conversation with the silent one.

"No." The reply was curt.

"I've been wanting to dance with your wife," persisted the other, "but she's as illusive as a wraith."

This time Haswell did not vouchsafe even a mono-syllable in reply, and the tactless Kirk assumed the double burden of the conversation.

"I call it rough treatment when the two truly beautiful women in society come to a dance and proceed, to all intents and purposes, to evaporate. Miss Burton, too, seems to have been converted into thin air. What' the use of struggling to keep up with the new steps?"

Len Haswell rose stiffly from his chair, and, tossing his cigar through the open window, stalked silently from the room.

The blond young man glanced uncomprehendingly after him, and Thayre's laugh broke in a booming peal.

"Rather gratuitous, son, wasn't it?" he suggested.

"What do you mean?" Larry Kirk put his question blankly.

"Nothing; except that you know, Len or ought to. He's the present day, Othello, sulking because he can't get a dance with his wife. It's barely conceivable that he's not aching to have it rubbed in."

"Can't get a dance?" repeated the empty—eyed youth perplexedly. "Why?"

Thayre snorted. "What chance has he—or any one else when Ham Burton's gifted pomeranian sequesters her in some shaded nook and whispers musical nonsense into her coral ear?"

"You mean Pa Burton? Gifted pomeranian fits him nicely . . . but why should any man be jealous of him?"

"A man may be jealous of any creature that all women pet. Paul Burton can play to them until their golden souls come soaring out to be playmates with his golden soul. You and I, having no wives, may be able to laugh at such things—but Len Haswell has a devilish pretty one—and a devilish foolish one."

To young Mr. Kirk the situation seemed simple.

"Why does not Len just take this pleasing minstrel by the scruff of his neck and say to him, 'Nice little doggy, run away'?"

"For two reasons. First, behind the pleasing minstrels and the Emperor—damn his magnificently audacious soul! Secondly when you chase a man who has access to the treasure of the Incas . . . you take a fairish chance of chasing the lady along with him."

"I'm sorry I made Len sore." The blond man spoke contritely. Then his voice snapped into animosity. "He's worth a dozen Paul Burtons, the vapid little piano player."

"Right-o!" Thayre stood with his feet well apart and his baldish head thrown back. "Even that profound gift for reading human nature which it pleased a Divine Providence to be stow upon me, could hardly have hit more jolly well on the peg." He paused, then added, "But be that as it may—in the habit which has become all prevalent among us money-changers in the temple, of damning the soul of Hamilton Burton—when he is absent—I think we overlook a few patent truths. We hate the man and all his breed simply because he outclasses us at our own game."

"You mean he outplunders us," contradicted Kirk.

"It comes to much the same thing, young son, though High Finance is a prettier name for the pastime. He gathers in millions to our thousands, not only because he is a naughty and wicked man, but because of his greater calibre and range. Brother Paul shines by some of this reflected glory—as it has become the fashion to damn Brother Paul, too."

It began to dawn on the fair-haired young man that he was being chaffed. His reply came sulkily.

"To my mind, Paul Burton is nothing but a hanger on."

"Quite true. So am I. So are you. So are all of us who produce nothing tangible. Paul is a hanger-on by better right than many others who depend directly or indirectly on the energies of this great producing pirate."

Child Was Nervous, Irritable, Tired Out

She Had No Appetite and Her Complexion Was Pale and Sallow

How many parents realize the strain which going to school means to the child who is naturally nervous and of delicate health?

You see them come from the schools daily with pale faces, many wearing glasses, and looking tired and worn. At home they are irritable, do not sleep well at night and are upset by a little extra excitement.

If they are to grow to healthy manhood and womanhood their systems must have attention now. Such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does wonders for children in this condition. We are constantly receiving letters from grateful parents telling what the Nerve Food has done for their children. This one is a fair sample:

Mrs. Stephen Hartman, Italy Cross, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes: "My little sister at eleven years of age became nervous, irritable and seemed all tired out. She had no appetite, was lifeless and drowsy and her complexion grew pale and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and have somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes, improvement was noticeable and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether and they cured her. She got fat and rosy and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

THE PARTNERS

By M. QUAD

Among the applicants answering the advertisement of Klein & Klippert for a stenographer was Miss Rose Wilhams of a suburban village. Both partners were old bachelors, and when the advertisement was inserted Klein said to Klippert:

"There will probably be a hundred girls come tomorrow, and as I know more about human nature than you do I will see them and pick out the one we want."

"But as I know more about stenography than you do it should be left to me," was the reply of the partner.

They wrangled over the matter for ten minutes and then agreed that both should receive and question the applicants. When Miss Rose entered the office each partner said to himself that she would do, no matter whether she knew anything about stenography or not. Each tried to impress upon her mind the fact that he was fatherly and kind hearted and wished to run an orphan asylum. Klein wanted to offer her $20 a week, and Klippert wanted to offer $3 more, but they finally settled on $15 to start with. When the terms had been settled and the applicant had departed, to reappear on the morrow, Klein hitched about on his chair for a couple of minutes and then said:

"As my room is rather the largest and lightest, I am willing to make a place for the young lady. Did you notice the lines of sorrow around her young mouth? I shall speak very gently to her."

"There is a fine, light space in my room for the young lady," replied Klippert, "and I will take her in there. There is a sad look about her eyes, as if she had some great grief, and I shall not expect her to do much work."

They disputed for half an hour over the point, and next day Miss Rose was given the hall between the office rooms of the partners.

At half past 1 o'clock Klein called the stenographer into his room and dictated a letter and then said:

"Miss Williams, your work has proved so satisfactory that your salary is raised to $18 per week."

She expressed her thanks and backed out, but scarcely had five minutes passed when Klippert called her in to ask if she was satisfied with her salary and to add before she could reply:

"You take hold of the work so well that I shall make your salary $20 a week."

Klein had been in the habit of leaving the store every afternoon at half past 4. On this occasion he hung about until 5. Klippert and the employees left at half past 5. Klippert sauntered after the new stenographer to see what car she took. He had just ascertained when he encountered his partner. They eyed each other suspiciously for a minute and then lied. Each had a ready excuse on his tongue. Next morning at the store the senior partner called the junior partner into his room and gravely said:

"Mr. Klippert, I should be grieved to know that you were following Miss Williams to the car, but the more I think of it the more suspicious your conduct appears."

"But what were you doing there?" was promptly asked.

"Business unconnected with the store called me to the spot."

"Same here."

Each one had been wondering how he could circumvent the other and invite the pretty stenographer out to lunch. The thing was finally settled by the senior partner, who said:

"I would suggest that neither of us ask the young lady to lunch. She might misconstrue our action."

"Just what I was about to suggest. We will go out together, as heretofore."

But things rankled in the mind of the senior partner. As a matter of fact, he had gone to the car half an hour ahead of the girl to make sure that she took the right one for home. The junior partner had come upon him and wronged him in thought. He did the only thing he could think of to get even. He called Miss Rose in and raised her salary to $22 a week.

The junior partner was not at all satisfied with the situation. He had followed the stenographer to the car to see that the bookkeeper, who was known to be a masher, didn't do the same. There he had met his partner and had been looked at distrustfully. In wronging him the partner wronged Miss Rose, and he called her in and dictated a fictitious letter and added:

"I am pleased to say that our work was never so well done before, and I wish to inform you that your salary has been advanced to $25 per week."

Miss Williams came to her place on a Wednesday. On Saturday afternoon there was a half holiday. On Saturday afternoon also Mr. Klein met Mr. Klippert in the village where the stenographer lived. Each wanted to ask the other what he was doing there, but he didn't ask. Klein finally took Klippert by the arm and walked him to the car, and when both were seated and headed for the city he said:

"Klippert, it's hard times in business."

"You bet!"

"We don't need a stenographer."

"Not in the least."

"We can save that $25 per week."

"Every cent of it."

And on Monday morning Miss Williams received a letter from the firm that owing to her inexperience her services would no longer be required.

KILLS PAIN

Gave Him a Christian Name.

Even the polyglot Swiss interpreter at the general postoffice admits that there are languages which would stump him. How would he have solved the problem once presented at the Hampstead Green postoffice and recorded in Baines' "On the Track of the Mail Coach?" Two ladies wanted to send a money order to a foreign tradesman in Oxford street. "What Christian name?" inquired the clerk. "He is a Turk and has none." "We must have a Christian name," the clerk insisted. "But you can't. His bill merely says 'Kotzenolien.'" "Oh, very well," decided the clerk. "That will do. Cut his name in two and make the order payable to 'Kotze Mollen.'" Solomon could not have done better.—London Chronicle.

The Parson's Soft Job.

"There is a prevalent idea among the criminal classes that the clergy have nothing whatever to do."

The authority for this statement is the Archdeacon of London, who has three large prisons in his archdeaconry. An old woman once said to a jail chaplain: "I wish you could find a job for my old man. He is not up to much and cannot do anything, but he wants a soft job like yours?"—London Globe.

THE ANSWER IS WEAR RUBBERS

Many People Will Don Goloshes Early This Season to Combat the High Cost of Leather Foot-wear

"Buy rubbers," says the shoeman, the dealer who plays fair with his customers.

Leather is up and shoes are up to such an extent that the buying of a pair of shoes is almost on a level with the acquiring of a new suit or coat. Shoes must be worn, but the economical person will don rubbers as soon as the weather gets the least bit "damp under foot"; not only for the protection to the health that the rubbers afford, but to save the costly shoes he or she wears.

There was never a problem in economics that was not solved sooner or later, and rubbers and overshoes seem to be the answer to the augmented price of shoes this winter. 24

FARM HANDS SCARCE.

And They Will Be Scarcer in England When War Is Over.

The Journal of Agriculture (Eng.) in a discussion on the English agricultural labor problem says it is estimated that 320,000 men have left the land in the United Kingdom since the beginning of the war, and to this figure will have to be added the number leaving between now and the end of the war; the number who will not go back to the land is estimated at twenty-five per cent. of the enlistments, or at least 80,000.

From examination of the means to be adopted, to meet this serious shortage the committee which has inquired into the matter are forced to the conclusion that unless the agricultural production and population are to be further reduced, a considerable number of ex-service men who were not employed in farm work on the outbreak of the war will have to be brought into English agriculture.

Referring to the possibility of the ex-service man settling in the Dominions, or in foreign countries, the committee think a great deal might be done, not only to bring home to him the comparative advantages of life in a more settled country, but to improve the conditions that have hitherto prevailed.

As a means of improving conditions it is suggested that small allotments of land be made near towns so that artisans engaged in industrial employment in those towns may provide at least a portion of their food supply in their spare time. It is further suggested, with a view of giving an added stimulus to general farming, that duties be placed on agricultural produce imported, which will be sufficient "to give the protection that is necessary to the farmer."

It is evidently the intention of those behind what is proposed to keep at home the prospective farm laborers it was hoped might be attracted to this country. It also appears probable, in addition to this, Canadian farmers may find, after the war, that the United Kingdom will no longer offer a free market for their produce.

Canadians Get V. C.

The Victoria Cross has been awarded to Lieut. Thomas Orde Lawler Wilkinson, North Lancashire Rifles, killed July 25, aged twenty-two. He was the second son of C. H. Wilkinson of Comox, B.C., and was a surveyor in Victoria when he enlisted originally, early in the war, in the Canadian Gordons.

Lieut. Wilkinson was decorated "for most conspicuous bravery. During an attack when a party of another unit were retiring without their machine gun, Lieut. Wilkinson rushed forward, and with two of his men, got the gun into action and held up the enemy till they were relieved. Later, when the advance was checked, during a bombing attack he forced his way forward and found four or five men of different units stopped by a solid block of earth, over which the enemy was throwing bombs. With great pluck and promptness, he mounted a machine gun on top of the parapet and dispersed the enemy bombers. Subsequently he made two most gallant attempts to bring in wounded men, but in his second attempt was shot through the heart, just before reaching his man. Throughout the day he set a magnificent example of courage and self-sacrifice."

The Victoria Cross also is awarded to the Rev. William Robert Addison, chaplain, who early lived in a Canadian lumber camp. He carried a wounded man and assisted several others to cover. By his splendid example of utter disregard of danger he encouraged the stretcher-bearers to go forward under a heavy fire.

A Queer Joke.

A resident of Vevey, Switzerland, died some years ago and left a will, in which he bequeathed the whole of his property, of which he was supposed to have a large amount, to the "local hospital of the town." There being two local medical charities—the town hospital and the Hospice de Samaritan—a suit at law was entered by the former in order to decide its right to the legacy. After a considerable expense had been incurred the dispute was abruptly brought to a close by the discovery that the deceased had indulged in a most unseasonable jest and, in fact, did not possess a penny to bequeath.

An Original Oath of Allegiance.

In the old days when the Spanish province of Aragon was a proud and independent monarchy the people used when choosing their king the following singular form of election:

"We, the freeborn inhabitants of the ancient kingdom of Aragon, who are equal to you, Don Philip, and something more, elect you to be our king on condition that you preserve to us our rights and privileges. If in this you should fail we own you for our king no longer."

THE BEAUTY OF TIPPERARY

Lady Pole-Carew Has the Handsomest Husband in the Army.

That the distinction of being society's most beautiful woman belongs to Lady Pole Carew, whose husband has retired from politics, is the opinion of many people. Furthermore, General Sir Reginald Pole Carew has been declared the handsomest man in the service. And "Polly Carey," as he is so often referred to, is certainly as popular as he is handsome, while he has a splendid record of service behind him.

He is one of Robert's men, accompanying "Bobs" on his march to Kandahar. It was during the Boer War, however, that Sir Reginald earned greatest distinction, particularly at the crossing of the Modder, where he led a party of the Guards through the water in the face of a withering fire.

He is rather fond, by the way, of telling the following story illustrating the energy of the British soldier. A German attaché in the South African War was amazed at the spectacle of the British soldiers, after a fight, staggering into camp, but rushing instantly after a football which was thrown on the veldt. Said the attaché to Sir Reginald:

"Well, you are the most extraordinary people in the whole civilized world. I have been with your men all day. I know what they have done. I know they have had nothing to eat or drink, and I know of no other troops in the world that would not have been lying down asleep. If we could do this we could conquer the world."

Lady Pole Carew is the eldest daughter of that famous yachtsman and sportsman, the Marquess of Ormonde, and shares her father's love and enthusiasm for the sea. She is also a great lover of foreign travel, and some time ago made a tour of the world, visiting many out-of-the-way places. It is fifteen years ago since she married Sir Reginald. Caring little for society life, she divides her time between Antony House, her Cornish home, the gardens of which she has made famous, and her beautiful estate in Tipperary.

British Wireless.

From a long-range station on the west coast of England wireless messages are sent out by the Government every day. Sometimes three or four messages are circulated in twenty-four hours. They are sent westward — the control of direction being possible under one of the latest inventions in connection with wireless telegraphy—so that they reach practically all parts of North and South America.

The German Government paid special attention to this business of influencing neutral opinion from the moment that hostilities began. The British Government service is now coping effectively with the German publicity campaign.

The headquarters of the "English Wireless" are at Marconi House, London, and the message is sent out every evening from the long-distance station at Poldhu, Cornwall.

It consists of a summary of the official communiques and of reports received from agencies. There is an arrangement by which the Government adds whatever news it may consider desirable to circulate.

The message is of about 700 words, and is retransmitted from Teneriffe, Las Palmas, Dakar (French Africa), and other places, so that it may reach the far corners of the world.

A Sad Awakening.

In one of Theodore Hook's stories the bridegroom, departing with his bride for their honeymoon, is disturbed by a continual tapping on the floor of the postchaise. It begins to bother him exceedingly. "What the deuce is that noise?" at last he mutters. "It is nothing, darling," answers the bride sweetly. "It is only my wooden leg." Only that and nothing more. She had got accustomed to it from long use, but the information put him out exceedingly and caused a coolness which was permanent.

A Rich Englishman.

Sir Arthur Markham, late M. P. for the Mansfield division of Notts, was one of the richest men in the British House of Commons. He was one of the biggest colliery proprietors in England, and his estimated income was between £100,000 and £150,000 a year. He had two great houses—one at Shorncliffe, where he frequently entertained Mr. Lloyd George, and the other Newstead Abbey, the old home of Lord Byron, which was formerly a monastery.

RECEIPT WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

2 quarts of luke warm water
6 teaspoonfuls of salt.
2 tablespoonfuls of sugar, brown preferred.
2 tablespoonfuls of lard.
2 yeast cakes, Fleishman's.
6 quarts of flour, sifted.
Mix.

Pour water into a large pan, add salt, sugar and lard, mix until dissolved. Break yeast cakes into small pieces and add luke warm water, about a quarter of a cup of water. Stir until dissolved and add the other liquid. Sift the flour into the liquid and beat lard. The flour should be added gradually. When too stiff to beat place upon a well floured board and knead until light.

Place in a greased pan, which is large enough and allow for the mixture rising to double its bulk. Cool the pan and keep where it will be in an even warm temperature. When sufficiently risen place again on bake board and shape into loaves. These must be cooled and allowed to rise, until the pans are well filled. A small quantity being placed in the pans at first. Bake in a moderate oven about one half hour. Never allow the bread to stand in the pans after baking, as it will become soggy. Stand each loaf on a clean towel, until thoroughly cool. One half whole wheat and one half wheat flour may be used.

Housewives of Peterborough who would lessen the price and make more healthy bread would do well to avail themselves of this opportunity by using a carefully studied and tried receipt, given by Mrs. Scadding, a propos of the recent campaign against the high cost of living.

A Single Application Banishes Every Hair

(The Modern Beauty.)

Here is how any woman can easily and quickly remove objectionable, hairy growths without possible injury to the skin: Make a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and, excepting where the growth is unusually thick, a single application is enough. You should, however, be careful to get genuine delatone.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

From the standpoint of becomingness this waist, with surplice closing, is all that one could wish—made in the combination effect, it just sparkles with smartness.

Simple but interesting style is shown by rolling the fronts their entire length—in this way the V-shaped neck that has won first place is formed: the button decoration, where the collar joins the revers, tells that buttons have lost none of their popularity.

Most of the new blouses have the full length, full sleeve, and in this design the sleeve has a slight fulness below the elbow and finishes with a cuff that matches the collar and revers.

The blouse itself is cut on very full lines, with the upper edge gathered to a shoulder yoke. It is a pretty and practical model for which one material may be employed with very satisfactory result. Novelty plaid or striped silk, crepe and a variety of other fabrics will prove excellent for developing. For fashion and economy you should use the pattern.

The blouse pattern, No. 8026, cuts in sizes 36 to 42 bust. To make in size 36 requires 1¾ yards 36 inch goods, with ⅝ yard contrasting for the "trim", or 2¼ yards 36 inch all one material.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age if child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, Peterborough.

Our Canadian Boundary Line.

The country which can boast not a scientific frontier merely, but a natural one, has a huge advantage in time of war. The sea takes the first place in the category of natural boundaries; a big mountain range comes second and a big river third.

An object lesson in the value of all three is presented by India. Why is India the jewel of Asia? Because it is contained in a casket the base of which is the ocean, the lid of which is the biggest range in the world and the key of which is the river Indus.

It is the most remarkable fact in the history of mankind that betwixt the vast dominion of Canada and her neighbor, the mighty United States of America, the dividing line is merely imaginary.

There is not a fort or redoubt or gun or military station along all that 4,000 miles of frontier. That is the true peace spirit. That is an object lesson to the world—two great nations dwelling side by side under separate flags and different laws and yet not in fear and dread of each other.—London Answers.

First Carrier Pigeons.

The Turks appear to have been the first nation to organize carrier pigeon service on any extensive scale. William Lithgow, who resided in the Levant from 1609 to 1620, tells us that the pigeon post of the caliphs conveyed messages from Aleppo to Bagdad, a thirty days' journey, in forty-eight hours. The whole kingdom was equipped with a pigeon post, and news sent by half a dozen birds or more—so that some might escape the hawks—was quickly transmitted from one end of it to the other. Philological evidence, backed by the opinion of the earliest writers on pigeons, goes to show that the carrier pigeon comes of Turkish stock. The old Turkish name for this bird is "bagadin," the French "bugadais" and the Dutch "bagadat," while the English used to call it "bunwmet," evidently a corruption of Mahomet.—London Chronicle.

Rock Cannon of Malta.

It is a curious fact that when the island of Malta was in possession of the Templars those doughty knights defended their forts by means of cannon cut into the solid rock. Each of these strange engines of war was capable of containing an entire barrel of gunpowder and, it is said, could throw 10,000 pounds of projectiles. Inasmuch, however, as these natural cannon could not be aimed, fifty were cut out of the rock guarding the various channels of approach, and the vessels of that time were therefore unable to come within their own range before being annihilated by the big weapons of defense. Although the fame of these cannon was spread far and wide, they were not duplicated elsewhere and to this day they remain the only rock cannon of which there exists any record.

Largest and Smallest Books.

In the great library of the British museum is to be seen the largest book in the world. This is an atlas of beautifully engraved ancient Dutch maps, bound in leather and fastened with clasps of solid silver. It is nearly seven feet high, weighs 800 pounds and was presented to King Charles II. before leaving Holland in the year 1660.

Side by side with it is the smallest book in the world—a microscopic gem of bookmaking, scarcely larger than a man's thumb nail. This contains the New Testament, inscribed by a German artist of Nuremberg in the early part of the seventeenth century. There are 208 pages, and the lettering is so perfect that it can be read without difficulty. The book measures three-quarters of an inch by two-fifths.—London Opinion.

The Prolix Witness.

A little over twenty years ago a judge in New Zealand was obliged to issue an order to the effect that "in future singing would not be taken as evidence" in his court. It was the constant habit of the Maoris when pleading a cause to sing long and quite poetic sagas. As these generally began with legends of their remote ancestors, sometimes many hours, even days, would be spent before the point, possibly trivial, was reached. There is something Gilbertian in this idea, but any old New Zealander could vouch for the facts.

Beautiful Beetles.

The exquisitely beautiful gold beetles of Central America belong to the genus plusiotis, and one might easily imagine a specimen to be the work of some clever artificer in metal. The head and wing cases are brilliantly polished, with a luster as of gold itself. To sight and touch they have all the seeming of metal, and it is hard to realise that the creature is a mere insect.

Making People Better.

There are more people in cities than anywhere else.

When you want to accomplish a certain result you go where there is the greatest opportunity.

To make government better you must make people better.

To make people better you must work where there are the greatest number of them.

Remove the cities, and the country will take care of itself.

In advertising campaigns one district is tried out first. If it succeeds, then the whole country is taken. This saves much money. It reduces the risk.

In this country we are trying to reform too many cities at once. Let us take one at a time.

Begin anywhere.

If New York is too large, take Fifth avenue. Let all the efficiency reformers in the country concentrate on Fifth avenue. Let's learn on Fifth avenue.

If we can reform Fifth avenue we can reform the world.—Thomas L. Masson in Lippincott's.

Making an Apology.

Never be in too great hurry to apologize.

And don't apologize unless you are absolutely certain that you have given offense. More feelings have been hurt by unnecessary apologies than by careless words or actions.

In any case you need not copy the example of people who say, "I'm sorry I was so absentminded when you were talking to me," or, "I'm afraid I didn't seem very pleased to see you the last time you called."

A very wise old lady once said: "My dear, never apologize. The chances are that the people to whom you speak will not know they have been offended till you begin to explain it to them. But once they have grasped it they will never forget it again.

"So leave well alone and show your regret by being extra nice next time to make up for past shortcomings."—Pittsburgh Press.

Mixed Orders.

The very last telegraphic dispatch wired from Germany before hostilities began in the Franco-Prussian war was from Count Benedetti, the French ambassador, and was sent to the French foreign office. After stating that war could not be avoided the dispatch wound up with the following extraordinary statement: "Do not put so much seasoning in your next consignment of sausages." The astonishment that this message caused to the recipients at such a time can well be conceived, but it afterward turned out that the imminence of war and a perfect flood of telegrams had befogged the German telegraphists. As a matter of fact, they had mixed a purely commercial telegram from a Teutonic pork butcher named Benedict with the historic message from Count Benedetti.—London Standard.

Ready For the Wash.

Mrs. Commuter, basely deserted by her maid at the eleventh hour, mobilized a Swedish reserve in desperation for the dinner party. All the English the new domestic understood was the sign manual, but an hour's drill put her in some shape for service. The dinner went well until dessert. The Swede forgot the finger bowls, which should have been upon the plates. Mrs. Commuter employed the sign manual under cover of the table illustrating the washing and drying of hands. The Swede nodded, went on and returned.

Mrs. Commuter turned to find the new domestic at her elbow. Serenely she held a dishpan of hot water, a cake of yellow washing soap and the kitchen roller towel.—New York Post.

Easy.

"Some folks," said the busy woman, "take life easy, as easy as the new hired girl wanted to take her new place.

"'Everything goes by clockwork here,' the mistress said to this girl—'by clockwork, mind you. You get up at 6, you dine at 12, and you go to bed at 10.'

"'Well, if that's all,' said the girl, with a smile, 'I think I will be able to manage it.'"

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

A Physician's Advice.

"If dyspepsia, sufferers from gas, wind or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of hot water immediately after eating, they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two, therefore, being marvelously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestents, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

To Popularize Sheep Raising.

A scheme for popularizing sheep breeding in counties of the Province of Ontario is being promoted by the Agricultural Department. The plan is to take five counties, the names of which have not been selected yet, and applications will be received from each of these counties from farmers' sons and others who have taken one of the short courses under district representatives. In each county a competition will be held in sheep judging, and the boy who makes the best record and whose father is not now raising sheep, and who conforms to the conditions, will be given a flock of six ewes. He has to agree to keep records of the cost and other things. The ewes become the property of the lads for two years. At the end of two years, from the time that they took them over they turn back to the Live Stock Branch two shearling ewes, at the end of the third year two more, and at the end of the fourth year other two. By this period the boys will have given back six shearling ewes. In addition to this the Live Stock Branch is supplying pure-bred rams, and it is estimated that at the end of a year these young farmers should get six lambs. It is probable that in time the scheme may be extended to more than five counties.

Guelph's Loss by War.

The extent to which recruiting has been carried on in Guelph is well reflected in the returns from the Assessment Department, which were handed out recently. Assessor Hastings places the population of the city at 16,022, a decrease from the previous year of 713. A large number of soldiers' wives and families have returned to the old country until after the war. The total assessment is $11,419,930, an increase of more than $200,000. The city loses the business tax from the hotels of the city, which was included in the estimates at the first of the year. This amounts to $1,800. Only one ward in the city shows an increase in population.

The Lost Art.

The four-year-old had just been reproved at the table. He continued to talk cheerfully; though unanswered, to father. After some minutes of soliloquy he turned to mother and remarked:

"Your husband doesn't talk very much this noon, does he, mother?"

Making a Show.

"What do you mean?"

"Staying ten minutes after office hours each day will probably make a good impression, but staying fifteen is liable to excite suspicion that you are monkeying with your books.

In Political Circles.

"How about my letter proposing matrimony?"

"It has been advanced to a second reading," said the congressman's daughter, "and will come to a vote before very long."

A SICKLY WIFE IS NO FIT MATE FOR ANY MAN

GIRLS AND WOMEN SHOULD LOOK WELL TO THEIR HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

Never before was physical health and vigor so highly esteemed and so eagerly sought for as to-day.

No man finds happiness in a sickly wife and the woman who wishes to enjoy the pleasures of life should spare no effort to maintain perfect health.

Is your daughter growing up strong and ruddy? Has she strength to drink in greedily all the pleasures that youth so zealously seeks—or is she compelled to use street cars instead of enjoying the delightful exercise of walking—does she after the ball arise refreshed and vigorous or is she exhausted, indifferent and perhaps, irritable

When strength and vigor can be so easily maintained by Ferrozone, when the glow of health is so quickly brought to the cheeks and elasticity to the step, it is plainly a mother's duty to see that Ferrozone is on hand to assist her daughter back to health.

Upon the wake or Ferrozone quickly follows a stream of rich, nourishing blood which imparts that power and surplus energy so earnestly desired by those in ill-health.

Stop and think what this means for your daughter—certainly a great deal, and it can be accomplished by Ferrozone.

Every growing girl and young woman derives enormous benefit in many ways from this nutritive, vitalising tonic.

It is especially suited for young women and is a guarantee of health and regularity as long as it is used.

Ferrozone is free from alcohol and perfectly safe to use. Prepared in the form of a chocolate coated tablet, and sold in 50c boxes or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arsenau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CARLYLE AND HIS WIFE.

The Lady Was Jealous of His Social and Literary Success.

It is certain that the Carlyles were an ill-assorted couple. She considered from the beginning that to marry him was an act of condescension on her part. The daughter of a country doctor of Haddington had descended from the skies, like Diana to Endymion, to marry the son of a stonemason. But he loved her and was happy in his love.

Not so she. Jealous of him as she was—furiously jealous—not as a lover, for there she knew she was safe. But she could not bear to think that if she were famous it was as his wife, whereas she, knowing herself to be brilliant, would fain have had him to be known as the husband of that wonderful Mrs. Carlyle. It was his success, social and literary, that she resented. It irked her to be in the second place, and she could not forgive it.

There was something else of which the lady was jealous, and that was the agony of concentration which her husband's work meant for him. At moments here "saeva indignatio" against "that Carlyle," as she would contemptuously call him, passed all bounds.

One day my aunt went to call upon her and found her in one of her tantrums.

"What was the matter?" she asked.

"Oh, my dear, it's just that Carlyle! Would you believe it, I have had a headache for three days and he's only just found it out. 'I'm afraid you're not quite well, my dear,' he said, and all the time he has been working, working! I just threw a teacup at his head."—Lord Cadogan's Recollections.

No Place Like Home.

A henpecked looking floorwalker in one of our large department stores was standing in the aisle with a pained and faraway look in his eyes. Suddenly a woman hustled up back of him and demanded, "Where are the children's dresses, sir?"

"In the bottom bureau drawer, Maria," said the floorwalker, hastily turning around. And then he fled.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Teutons Make Peace Proposals to the Allies

NOTES ARE HANDED TO NEUTRALS TO BE TRANSMITTED

THE TEUTONIC POWERS MAKE PEACE PROPOSALS TO ALLIED GOVERNMENTS

Notes Handed to Diplomatic Representatives of the Neutral Nations Which Are Representing Germany in the Belligerent Countries---Identical Notes Transmitted by the Government at Vienna, Constantinople, and Sofia---Central Powers Propose That Peace Negotiations Be Entered Into Immediately.

TERMS ARE NOT YET MADE PUBLIC

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, December 12.—Proposals by the Central Powers that peace negotiations be entered into were made in notes handed to representatives of the neutral countries which are representing Germany in belligerent nations to-day.

Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg called the diplomatic representatives of the United States, Spain and Switzerland, to his office, one after the other, and handed this note to them. The full text of the note will be read in the Reichstag to-day. The Chancellor asked the neutral nations which represent Germany and her Allied powers at the capitals of the nations with which she is at war, to bring these proposals to the attention of Germany's enemies.

The propositions which Germany advances in these negotiations, are, according to Germany's belief, appropriate for the establishment of lasting peace.

The text was also communicated to the Vatican, at Rome, and to all other neutral powers.

By handing the note to representatives of the United States, Spain and Switzerland, Germany really transmitted directly to her enemy nations. Under existing conditions this is the only possible course of diplomatic interchange between the Central Powers and the Entente Allies.

WASHINGTON, December 12.—The United States will direct the peace proposals to Entente nations where she represents Germany's interests.

The Administration viewpoint to date has been a disinclination to engage in any peace manoeuvre, until one side or the other had given an indication that it wanted peace.

If Germany's terms are such as to promise success, there seems no reason to believe that this Government will not present the proposals, but likewise lend its moral influence for the settlement of the great conflict, officials here said.

PARIS, December 12.—France's reconstruction cabinet, designed to carry on the war with redoubled vigor, has been completed by Premier Briand.

He will present himself at the Chamber of Deputies to-morrow to make a formal statement.

BERLIN, December 12.—Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's announcement that Germany was proposing peace was couched in the following words when he made the announcement in the Reichstag to-day:

"Conscious of their responsibility before God, before their own nation and before humanity," he had proposed this morning to the hostile powers a plan for peace.

NEW YORK, December 12.—That the peace proposal from Germany created no great flurry in Morgan circles was regarded with considerable significance.

It was taken to indicate that the American financial representatives of the Allied Powers did not regard favourable action on the Berlin proposal as likely.

Admittedly, the greatest deterring force from the British standpoint, is Lloyd George. The idea was general that the British would not consent to the cessation of hostilities at this time, with their political house just put in order and their organization for major efforts still untried.

It is recognized that as yet but half the military strength of the British has been tested under fire.

The fact that at the moment of Germany's proposal, France was also in the midst of a complete re-organization called to give her new strength, is also counted on to discount probabilities of Bethmann-Hollweg's proposals finding favour in France.

Germany Wants Peace and Wants It Badly

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, December 12. — The Star to-day commenting on Germany's peace move, says: It is not likely that Von Bethmann-Hollweg really believes the Allies can be induced to make peace under present military conditions. He probably knows that the Allied army in Macedonia must be swept out of the Balkans with the aid of Greece and another summer of desperate effort to force the German lines in the west be frustrated, before the Allies, if ever, will become reconciled to a draw, but Germany dreads the coming ordeal. She feels she cannot wait until the slow-moving Allies come to a decision without urging on her part. The people of Germany and Austria-Hungary have developed a passion for peace. Discontent and seeds of revolt are on all sides. The food situation is serious, and many months must pass before new harvests are available to them in most neutral and some Allied quarters. The victories in Roumania are devoid of the military significance attached to them in most neutral and some Allied quarters. The troops and guns and shells that should have been held in reserve for the 1917 campaign have been severely drawn on to offset the ill effects of Roumanian intervention, which are real, if not apparent.

On all fronts this fall sacrifices have been made for the sole purpose of impressing the Allies with an undue sense of German power. Germany wants peace and wants it badly, and she has made a supreme effort to frame up a situation which would give her some excuse for offering an ante bellum status quo for "the welfare of humanity."

German Soldiers Notified of Proposals

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, December 12.—Kaiser William notified his troops in the field to-day that he had made peace proposals to the enemy. "Soldiers," his message said, "in agreement with the sovereigns of my Allies and with the consciousness of victory, I have made an offer of peace to the enemy."

"Whether it would be accepted is still uncertain. Until that moment arrives you will fight on."

SYMPATHY OF THE CITY IS VOICED BY MAYOR J. J. DUFFUS

Thanks All Citizens Who Helped in Rescuing the Wounded and Taking Them to the Hospital—Pumps Destroyed

LINDSAY IS THANKED

To the Editor of The Examiner

Dear Sir,—Permit me, on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough, to use your columns to express the deepest sympathy with those who suffered through the loss of relatives and friends in the deplorable fire at the Quaker Oats Mills, yesterday, and also with those who were injured in the catastrophe. While their loss and suffering are the keenest, the whole community mourns and suffers with them.

I would also express to the Quaker Oats Company our great regret on account of the loss and interruption to business they have met with, and I would at the same time wish to make this expression personal to Mr. W. H. Denham, the Superintendent, who has been for years a highly esteemed citizen of Peterborough.

To those citizens, ex-firemen, former members of the volunteer fire brigade and citizens generally, who so cheerfully and earnestly assisted the fire department; to those especially who by the use of their motor cars and in other ways assisted in rescuing of the injured and in taking them to the hospitals, and to those who helped to save property from the burning and menaced buildings, I wish to express the deep-felt thanks of the Council and community.

The disastrous explosion having not only destroyed the pumps of the Quaker Oat Company, but having also lowered the pressure on the water works system by breaking and opening the eight-inch connections with the sprinkler system in the mills, made the assistance given all the more appreciated.

The help which our neighbour Lindsay, sent to us was also highly appreciated and will be directly acknowledged.

Yours very truly,

Jos J. Duffus,
Mayor

DIED.

KLEEMANN.—December 9th, 1916. Entered into rest at the home of her daughter, Mrs Paul Loescher, 135 Hunter street east, Louise Kleemann, widow of the late Otto Kleemann, of Schenectady, New York. Interment will take place on Wednesday at Schenectady.

Victims of The Big Fire

Short Sketches of the Unfortunate Men Who Lost Their Lives in Yesterday's Terrible Catastrophe in Quaker Oats Plant

THE CITY HARD HIT

THOMAS PARSONS.

Thomas Parsons who is numbered among the missing in yesterday's terrible fire lived on Chamberlain street and was employed as a labourer around the boiler house, engaged in wheeling coke. It is feared that he was caught in the boiler house by the explosion. Mr. Parsons had been a resident of Peterborough for five years and leaves a wife and five children.

ALBERT ERNEST STAUNTON

Among the missing is Albert Ernest Staunton, a well-known citizen, and son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Staunton of this city. The deceased who is thirty-seven years of age came to Peterborough with his parents thirty years ago. In religion he was an Anglican, being a life-long member of St. John's since the death of his parents eight years ago. He has resided with his sister, Mrs. S. F. M. Touchburn, 20 Benson Avenue. He leaves to mourn his loss three brothers and four sisters, namely: Capt. W. R. Staunton, Port Arthur; Wilfrid J. Staunton, Tuscon, Arizona, Corp Harvey Jr Staunton, Moore's Hospital, Shorncliffe, Mrs. T. W. Wood Orillia, Mrs. S. F. M. Touchburn, 20 Benson Avenue, Mrs. J. P. Archer, Campbellford, Miss Maud Staunton, Toronto.

W. G. VOSBOURG

W. G. Vosbourg was last seen alive shortly after nine o'clock yesterday morning. He worked in the shipping department. His home is at 352 Simcoe street. The missing man has been here about three months and leaves a wife. He was about thirty years of age.

WALTER THOMAS HOLDEN

Walter Thomas Holden died in Nicholls Hospital Monday afternoon from the severe burns he had received in the feed packing department of the Quaker Oats plant. He was thirty-three years old, resided at 324 Euclid Avenue and leaves a wife and two children, one seven years and the other fourteen months old. Holden was born in Sussex County, England, and had been employed with the Quaker Oats company four years and five months. Recently he had been engaged in the feed packing department sewing up bags of feed. It was this department that first blew out with the explosion and in which the loss of life was heaviest. His body was most severely burned and it is now regarded that Holden was the man who issued from the north end of the building wrapped in flame and remained on the ground stark naked except for the protection of the coats of several employees. It was thought at the time that he was Edward Bedding, an evidence that he was scorched practically beyond recognition. His working "mate" William O'Donnell identified the body as that of Walter Holden.

A pathetic feature of Holden's death is the fact that his parents Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Holden arrived in Canada from the old country only three weeks ago. They are spending the winter with another son, Mr. Ernest Holden, 600 Bethune street. Private Fred Holden of the 247th Battalion is a brother of the deceased.

Rev. R. G. Peever was with Walter Holden in his last minutes at the hospital.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Mrs. D. O'Brien, 552 Harvey street, is probably worse hit by yesterday's tragedy than any individual in the city. Not only is her husband, Dennis O'Brien, missing, but her father, Wm. Hogan, who lived with her, has not been seen since the fire. Dennis O'Brien was forty years of age, and

PTE. GEO. WILKINS OF PETERBORO' IS KILLED IN ACTION

Enlisted in the 39th Battalion and Was First Reported Missing—Now Said to Have Been Killed on Sept. 15th

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Previously reported missing, Pte G. J. Wilkins, Canadian Infantry, is now officially reported killed in action, on September 15th. His wife, who resides at 147 Lake street, has received an official notice from Ottawa to this effect. Pte. Wilkins enlisted at Peterborough with the 39th Battalion, and after going overseas, was transferred to another Canadian Battalion at the front.

Pte. James Thomson, who was officially reported missing yesterday, enlisted in Belleville, with the 80th Battalion and was transferred to another Canadian Battalion at the front. His wife, who resides at 285 Bethune street, received official notice that he is reported missing since November 18th.

Sergt. R. M. Beach of the 57th Band, went to Cobourg recently to assist in a minstrel show, held by the Cobourg Heavy Battery draft and has received the following appreciative letter from the Officer Commanding:

Dear Mr. Beach,—I am sorry I did not see you this morning as I wanted to thank you for your kindness in coming at such short notice to help the men out with their minstrel show. I have heard a number of people say how nicely that man played the drums. Personally, being present at the rehearsal and feeling the support of your drums at the concert, I don't see how we could have managed without you.

I can assure you that a kindness shown to the men in khaki, such as you have done, is worth dollars to those of us who are engaged in recruiting work and it can be truly said that you are doing your bit.

Yours very truly,
J. McKennon, Major,
O. C. Cobourg Heavy Battery.

Capt. Vivian Cooper, Queensland, Australia, a nephew of Mrs. R. B. Rogers, East City, and whose family resided in the city at the old Strickland homestead for some time, was the first Queenslander to receive the D.S.O. Capt. Cooper has also received the order of St. Michael and St. George.

Bazaar Continues Remainder of Week

Immaculate Conception Church Bazaar is Conducted in the T.A.S. Rooms, Simcoe Street

In view of the disaster yesterday, the bazaar under the auspices of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Lake City, which opened yesterday in the T.A.S. rooms, Simcoe street, to continue during the rest of the week, was carried on in many ways. Last night the rooms were closed early and the orchestra was not employed.

The bazaar will however during remainder of the week, nightly be opened as announced. The several booths will be open and all the activities of the bazaar will be in operation.

The ladies of the parish have incurred large expense and taken much trouble in an undertaking to raise funds for the building of the church, and it is trusted that the public of Peterborough will extend a liberal patronage to the bazaar for any articles they may require.

The horror of yesterday's terrible fire in the Quaker Oats plant grows as realization comes of just what happened. It is feared that at least sixteen lives have been snuffed out. One body has been recovered, four of the badly burned and scalded victims have died in the hospitals, and at least eleven, according to the best information The Examiner could secure, are still missing and have undoubtedly lost their lives in the holocaust that left the finest cereal plant in the Dominion of Canada a mass of ruins. It is possible that one or two on the list may have turned up; it is equally possible that others who are not listed have been killed. So vast was the calamity and so great the confusion, that even yet it is not possible to give accurate details of all that did happen. Only one body, that of Edward Howley, has so far been recovered, but efforts are being made to try to uncover the remains of some of the others who lost their lives yesterday.

As to the company's plans for rebuilding it is impossible to speak authentically to-day. The arrival of President Robt. Stuart of Chicago, and other prominent officials of the Quaker's Oats Company will mean that the matter of rebuilding and other important plans will be taken up immediately.

The scene of the fire to-day is a ghastly demonstration of the power of the flames when they are unleashed. Of the mammoth brick buildings that a few short hours ago were the pride of the citizens generally, only a section of a wall here and there is standing. The fire-proofed warehouse recently built has fallen in at the centre, but the north and south ends are still remaining. Nothing but a smouldering mass of grain and oats remains of the old elevators. A portion of the cleaning house is still standing, as is the tower that stood at the south end of the flour mill and the tall chimney at the north. Further north the cement elevators remain intact, practically all that is left of the big plant.

LATER PART OF FIRE.

The story of the later part of yesterdays terrible fire is the story of the fight made by the huge new concrete warehouse with its cement floors and thick walls to stand up under the terrific strain. It is also the story of the desperate battle of the fire brigade to prevent the buildings on the crest of the hill west of the Quaker Oats plant from being set on fire, on which case the results might have been infinitely more dreadful than resulted. The terror formed by a strong north-east wind, the warehouse was no more than a flaming torch, fed by the breeze at the very threshold of the buildings on Hunter, Sherbrooke and Brock streets. Had any of these been caught the result might have been a conflagration that would have swept the St. John's church hill and gone on to the heart of Peterborough's business section.

WHOLE CITY THREATENED

The fire brigade realized early in the day that nothing could be done to save the Quaker Oats plant; they also realized the danger that threatened to engulf half of the city. The buildings on the hill were the key to the situation—they had to be saved at all costs, and saved they were, although only the men who for long hours held the hose realize how hard the struggle was. From 11 o'clock in the morning until nearly midnight last night the battle was kept up. Tons of water were poured on the roofs of the surrounding buildings and only when the houses were swathed in ice wrappings and the violence of the fire had died down, were the firemen able to get a breathing spell. Mr. M. Ellwood, the chaplain of the brigade, manoeuvred a horse for many hours and was finally rescued at 11 o'clock last night.

TERRIBLE SHEET OF FLAME.

How the nearby houses escaped, especially between five and six o'clock last evening was a mystery. The big warehouse with its huge sheets of flame leaping skyward and huge pillars of heat materials according to the 6th cement floor, was in a glare from basement to cement roof. All through the afternoon the interior of the warehouse was an inferno the walls and floors held until shortly after 5:30 o'clock when a large portion of the central part of the building collapsed. The result was a solid sheet of flame hundreds of feet in height that shot over the crest of the hill and seemed about to wrap itself around the buildings. So terrific was the heat, and so awe-inspiring the appearance of the mass of flames that the hundreds of spectators on Brock street fled for their lives. Only a fireman in charge of a line of hose and a soldier of the 247th Battalion, held their ground. A similar scene was enacted on Hunter street, where the flame seemed to shoot across the road. The outbreak illuminated the city and the surround-

THE GREAT DISASTER.

The first thought that comes to the mind in recalling the great disaster of yesterday is mourning for the dead sympathy with the bereaved and sorrow-stricken and sympathy for the injured in their sufferings. We hardly yet realize the extent of the destruction of life. At this writing four are known to be dead, and the roll of missing, whose fate is beyond reasonable doubt, numbers eleven, a total of seventeen who have probably passed beyond. Besides, of the eighteen, who are confined in the hospitals, more or less seriously injured, some may succumb to their injuries and be added to the sad long list of the dead. We stand humbled before the disaster, the greatest of its kind that has befallen Peterborough in its history.

And the material destruction and interruption of industrial activity have never been surpassed in Peterborough. A splendidly-built group of structures, solid and permanent in appearance, constituting the largest and best equipped milling establishment in Canada, representing a money value of between three quarters of a million and a million dollars is a smouldering mass of ruins, not to mention the large quantities of manufactured products and stored grains. The disaster came as a bolt from the blue and with inconceivable rapidity of sweep of destruction. Anyone passing the Quaker Oats buildings at 10-30 yesterday morning and noting their solid and substantial appearance would have thought it impossible that within the course of two or three hours the whole should be destroyed by fire. This thought would have been engrossed if the observer had known as was the fact, that every precaution in solidity of structure or internal provisions of safety existed to make the buildings fire proof. The company deserves every credit for having taken every possible precaution to make the buildings safe in every respect, capable of standing any test. The disaster itself shows that human foresight is blind and human contrivance comes to naught in the face of an outburst of operation of inconceivable and unforeseeable forces that put into violent working elements of rapid destruction that paralyze all human attempts to cope with them.

In all ways, loss of life, destruction of property and products, the calamity is the greatest that has ever come to the city or district. The effect upon the city goes beyond these. For the moment, at least, Peterborough has lost outright one of its most important industrial establishments, employing between four and five hundred persons, large transportation operations, altogether constituting one of our greatest of our manufacturing establishments.

Pending the arrival of officials, nothing definite can be learned of the intentions of the Company in regard to rebuilding and resuming operations. But if one can judge from our experience of the enterprise of the Company, the importance of its building site in this city, and of its power development plant, it may be assumed that resumption of operations within a not distant period is not an unreasonable expectation.

A SPLENDID APPEAL.

Mr N. W. Rowell, in the course of a notable speech at Guelph made this splendid appeal:

"We must not lose sight of the fact that during these days, and the days that lie before us, there is being waged on that immense battle line, more than two thousand miles in extent, by almost forty million men engaged, the question of the whole character of civilization, under which we shall live throughout all the days that are before us. We live in the most momentous of all times. There never was a time when human life seemed of so little value, and yet, there never was a time when human life was of such tremendous value. We may live under fraternal conditions, die and be buried and forgotten, and our lives may count for little, but there is no man who has a life to-day, but could throw that life into the balance for freedom, for justice and for liberty, and help make this old world better by the sacrifice he makes. That is our privilege, and I believe Canadians will be equal to it."

These considerations should settle upon us, in a sense, a burden of tremendous responsibility. We must solemnly consider our relations to the crisis and let demands it makes upon us, impress us with the idea, the conviction that no consideration of minor importance; no demand of personal interest and advantage and profit; no political or partisan objects; no friendships; no social or religious affiliations, should separate us from the stern line of duty to do our utmost. The outlook is not at the moment any too cheering, but the very fact should stiffen our determination and make it unshakable to concentrate every effort, physical and material and moral, to pursue the fight with unfaltering courage and unshaken will to a triumphant end.

THE NEW CABINET.

Three men, with the occasional assistance of a fourth, are henceforth to conduct Great Britains share of the war. The three are David Lloyd George, a man whose courage has ever been equal to the extraordinary strength of his convictions, and one who is an apostle of the "Do it now" school, Lord Milner, perhaps the greatest Imperialist in the Empire, and a man of iron will, intimate knowledge of many lands (including Germany), and extraordinary administrative gifts and lastly, Arthur Henderson, a man of broad outlook, who is all-powerful with the Labour element in the United Kingdom. The occasional assistant is Mr. Bonar Law, whose duty as leader in the House of Commons will be, apparently, to supply the connecting link between Parliament and War Council, and keep misunderstandings from arising between the two. This War Cabinet is one that gives promise of lightning-like decisions, extraordinary aggressiveness, and bull-dog tenacity of grip. It looks to be the right kind of semi-autocracy in the circumstances. As to the new Ministry as a whole, it can be said at once that it forms the most businesslike Government that Great Britain has ever seen. For the most part Ministers have been chosen to do things rather than to represent political interests. The most spectacular appointment is that of Sir Edward Carson as First Lord of the Admiralty. Whatever may be said of Sir Edward's course in the past, it must be admitted that he is a man of boundless courage and audacity, and a fighter to the backbone. These are qualities needed in a head of the Admiralty. Taken as a whole, the Government is a remarkable experiment in the pooling of national talent and ability. Let us hope that it works out as well as it promises.—Montreal Herald.

CO-OPERATION.

The London Free Press says co-operation, not coalition, is what is needed. And what is to be the basis of co-operation, may be asked? It is expected that the Liberals shall be patriots, while the Conservatives conduct war business on purely partisan lines? Co-operation at least calls consultation and for the suspension, until after the war, of the shibboleth that "To the victors belong the spoils."

HERE ARE TWO SIGNIFICANTLY CONTRASTING VIEWS OF BRITAIN'S MOTIVE FOR ENTERING THE WAR

The Globe desires to present to its readers two views of Britain's relation to the great war. The first is that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the honoured leader of the Liberal party, whose political opponents with persistent malignity declare that he is an enemy of the Empire, and if returned to power would not carry on Canada's part in the war with vigour. Speaking at Quebec, Sir Wilfrid said:

"It is not for Britain that Britain is at war to-day. Was it Britain which was invaded in 1914? Was it on Britain that Germany declared war on August 3, 1914? No, it was Britain which on the next day declared war on Germany, because of the invasion of Belgium, and her atrocious attack through Belgium on the heart of France because she stood true to her ally. Our children are to-day shedding their blood on the fields not of Britain, but of France, the land of our very own ancestors. Many have been wounded, many have died, but it was not for Britain that they fought. They gave their lives freely and loyally that France, as part of the county of nations, might live and continue her role at the head of civilization. And it is not that ideal that I am here to ask young Canadians, and especially young French-Canadians, to take their part in a war which is one for civilization."

Sir Wilfrid's view is that which every man who loves and honours the British homeland holds. "It is not for Britain that Britain is at war to-day." Her part in the colossal struggle is not that of a nation seeking to aggrandize herself at the expense of her rivals. She could have stood aside in comparative safety had she been willing to break her word, to treat as a scrap of paper the treaty guaranteeing Belgium against invasion. But she chose the better part and joined herself with France in a struggle to prevent the world from sitting in shackles under the shadow of German militarism. That is the Laurier view of the war. It is because he believes it to be a crusade for human freedom, that Sir Wilfrid asks the young men of Quebec to take part in it for the love they bear to God, to truth, and to justice.

The other view of Britain's part in the war is presented by The Montreal Gazette, the mouthpiece of the English-speaking Conservatives of Quebec Province, and one of the most influential Conservative journals in the Dominion. In an editorial on Wednesday last discussing the fall of the Asquith Ministry, The Gazette spoke of the British statesman, who a few weeks ago lost his eldest son in action on the French front, as "a "cold-blooded manipulator of parties," whose first and only thought seemed to be to keep himself in power. Continuing, the Gazette presented this amazing view of Britain as having stumbled into war.

"The spectacle presented by the Asquith Government in the first days of August, 1914, was unlike anything that could have been imagined. On August 3 Sir Edward Grey, who also has fallen short of what was expected, came into the House of Commons and announced that Parliament was free to decide what the British attitude in the conflict then beginning would be. Great Britain," he said, had not committed herself to anything but diplomatic support; but the Government had warned the French and German Ambassadors that if war were forced on France public opinion in the British Isles would rally to France. The Government abdicated its leadership when leadership by men who knew or should have known what conditions were was most needed. Never in England's history was there another such spectacle. When France chose war the noise of the yelling London Press was taken for the voice of public opinion and as if there were no hand on the helm the Empire drifted into war. All know the subsequent story."

How can Bourassa be blamed for his anti-British tirades when in the leading Conservative journal of the Province of Quebec the charge is made that Britain is at war not because it was a sacred duty to come to the aid of the nations threatened with Prussian military domination, but because "the noise of the yelling London Press was taken for the voice of public opinion"? No Nationalist attack on Britain's motives could be more damaging to the cause for which Canadians by the thousand are laying down their lives than the declaration that Britain is at war by accident having drifted into it not because she felt the cause to be just for which she was called upon to take up the sword, but because the Government abdicated its leadership.

Is it to be wondered at that recruiting is slow in Quebec, and that even the passionate pleading of Sir Wilfrid and Sir Lomer Gouin stirs but a relatively small number of the men of service age? Such articles as that of The Gazette, and articles written in Toronto with the object of rousing a mad fear and hatred of Liberalism and its leaders on both sides of the Atlantic, do great harm to the Dominion and to the Allied nations, because they lead the enemy to believe that having blundered into the war we would be glad of any reasonable excuse to make an ignominious and dangerous peace.

The Courier view of the war is the view of the Canadian people. They believe with him that whether the world of the future shall be one of glory or of shadow rests on the decision of the young men to whom the call goes forth to fight for human freedom and for a civilization based upon justice, honour and truth.—The Globe.

THE RETURN OF THE PRODIGAL

I rode into Pincher Creek on an August afternoon,
The Pinto's hoofs on the prairie drumming a drowsy tune,
By the shacks and Chinks' truck-gardens to the Athabasca saloon.

And a bunch of the boys was standing around by the old Scotch store,
Standing and spitting and swearing by old Macallister's door,
And the name on their lips was "Britain"—and the word that they spoke was "war."

War!—Do you think I waited to talk about wrong or right,
When I knew that my country was up to the neck in a fight?
I said, "So long"—and I beat it—"I'm hitting the trail to-night."

I wasn't long at my packing, and I hadn't much time to dress,
And the cash I had at my disposal was a ten-spot—more or less;
So I didn't wait for my tickets; I booked by the Hobies' Express.

I rode the bumpers at night-time; I beat the ties in the day:
Stealing a ride and bumming a ride all of the blooming way.
And—I left the First Contingent drilling at Valcartier!

I didn't cross in a liner (I hadn't any passage by me!)
I spotted a Liverpool cargo tramp smelly and greasy and grimy.
And they wanted hands for the voyage, and the old man guessed he would try me.

She kicked like a ballet-dancer, or a range-bred broncho mare:
She rolled till her engines rattled; she wallowed—but what did I care?
It was "Go it, my bucking beauty, if only you take me there."

Then came an autumn morning, gray-blue, windy and clear.
And the fields—the little white houses—green and peaceful and dear.
And the heart inside of me saying, "Take me, mother, I'm here!"

"Here, for I thought you'd want me! I've brought you all that I own
A lean, long lump of carcass that's mostly muscle and bone;
Six-foot-two in my stockings, weigh in at fourteen stone.

"Here, and I hope you'll have me—take me for what I'm worth—
A chap that's a bit of a waster, come from the ends of the earth
To fight with the best that's in him for the dear old land of his birth."

Edison Buys $400,000 Phonograph Cabinet Factory in Wisconsin

WILL MAKE OWN CASES AT NEW LONDON

Thomas A. Edison President—Sequel to Debut of $6,000 Line—8 Concert Tours Now Playing to 14,000 People Daily

Green Bay, Wis., Monday.

Thomas A. Edison, Inc., of Orange N. J., has bought the plant, stock, etc. of the Wisconsin Seating Co., of New London, Wis., one of the largest wood-working concerns in this part of the country, and will make it the phonograph cabinet factory of the Edison phonograph division.

The name of the concern is to be changed to the Wisconsin Cabinet & Panel Co., to make phonograph cabinets exclusively.

The reorganization will include recapitalization of the company at $400,000, with Thomas A. Edison as president.

It is expected that the factory will be greatly enlarged and improved under the new ownership.

Officials of the Edison company at Orange expressed surprise when informed of The Phonograph's dispatch detailing the purchase of the Wisconsin cabinet factory and to several of those interviewed the announcement came wholly as news.

It was stated that the company had for some time contemplated securing its own cabinet works and had entered into the Wisconsin deal in order to provide facilities necessary for the production of the New Edison phonograph upon a scale hitherto unequalled in the history of the concern. A week ago the introduction of the new lines of period-style phonographs sells at $600 to $6,000 was staged at the Ritz-Carlton in New York and that the company had covered the country in its search for facilities for cabinet manufacture, was evidenced in the fact that a number of the large instruments on display had been cased in Minneapolis. The Edison company is continuing its direct-demonstration campaign by means of recitals and tone tests at which prominent artists under contract to the company appear. It was stated yesterday that eight concert tours of Edison vocalists and instrumentalists, all of them with phonographic accompaniment, are now under way, playing to audiences of from 12,000 to 14,000 people daily in many cities of the United States and Southern Canada. Within the past year the instrument is estimated to have been played for 2,000,000 people.

"MYSTERIOUS MESSENGERS"

Address by Rev. Mr. Doner at the Bethany Tabernacle on Sunday

The interest in the series of Chart talks by Pastor Doner in Bethany Tabernacle on Sunday evenings, is increasing, as shown by the large congregation gathered at last Sunday night's service.

The Pastor, in opening his address, gave a synopsis of the preceding Sunday evening talk, so that new hearers could intelligently follow the subject, showing as per the chart, The seven Cosmic Ages, the seven Time Dispensations and the seven character lines. In the second address, he wished to bring before the people, the Three Prophetic Lines, on God's plan in dividing the nations. The first point in history began with the Adamic or Gentile. Before that was the pre Adamic period covered by the opening words of Genesis, "In the beginning," which could easily cover a great period of time.

In the beginning of the Adamic or Gentile period the unity of the race was absolute, but as time passed on, the sin and darkness of man's heart so alienated him from God that He chose a man named Abraham to come out and be separate from the world. From him sprang the Hebrew nation.

Farther on in the world's history God introduced another change. His chosen people, Israel, had fallen short in their office as His special messenger to a sin-cursed world, and now He brings in His third messenger "The Church," introduced and established by His own son, Christ Jesus. Some men to-day speak of the Church as God's Israel, but such is not the truth, and has no Scriptural foundation. The Hebrew nation is God's Israel down through the ages.

So we have the three messengers—the Gentile, beginning with Adam. Israel, beginning with Abraham, and the Church beginning with Christ. He taught that the Church had been called out from among the Gentiles. See Acts 15:14, to reveal the truth. So when men say that Israel and the Church of to-day are one, they mis-apply the Scriptures to the certain confusion of their hearers. The Church is predominately a Gentile body. Not only as The Light Holder for this dispensation, but specifically as the Light Bearer to both Jew and Gentile.

The Jew, as an individual, has access through Christ to the Church, but let a Jew become a Christian and he is at once considered dead by his fellow Jews. The teaching of the creational Fatherhood of God and the creational Brotherhood of Man is repugnant to many. It sounds very fine, but ask the average man if he believes he is of one blood with the African, the Chinese or the Jew, and listen to his answer, and yet it is true as we see in Acts 17:26. We are not only brothers descended from Adam, but the natural man is at enmity with God.

Human History.

Hatred, murder and war have been manifest from the beginning of human history and have continued down through the ages. How little the world realizes we are surrounded by demon spirits who are continuously working to undermine God's plan for man's good. Satan hates God and is ever busy trying to lead God's creatures astray—but, thanks be to God, there are also good or guardian spirits who are watching over us. Universal brotherhood is one of Satan's lies. There is nothing in the Word to support such teaching, because, though descended from Adam, humanly speaking, yet in the spirit we are not brothers. The only Fatherhood and Brotherhood worth while is that procured by adoption through Christ. See Psa. 22:27, 28.

God has not forgotten the world. The nations are rejectors of God, but He has not rejected us. All nations have had the light and are in captivity to Satan. What we need and what the world needs to-day is a great revival or awakening in the hearts of God's people everywhere.

To-day the Jew, as we know him, is looked upon with disrespect, but let us remember that God called them out from the Gentiles and, therefore, they are His chosen people for whom many of the promises were given. One of these is found in Acts 15:17, "After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, etc."

There is a time coming when the last member of His church will be called of God, and then the Prince of the House of David will come again in His glory. Some say that means death. Did you ever hear of death coming like that? What comfort is there in saying the coming of the Lord means death. Death is an enemy and the last enemy to be destroyed. Christ's coming again is the coming of the King, and in that day if you are not His you will have to go through the sufferings of the Great Tribulation, a time of fearful trial.

To-day Israel is the tail of all the nations, the time is coming soon when they will be head. To-day they are in the service of the nation involuntarily warring against each other. But the time is coming when they will come back to their own land. The Allies to-day see they cannot slice Palestine among them, so they are planning that the Jews will have it as their own. God is working among Kings and governments to work out His plans.

Jesus said "salvation is of the Jews," John 4.22. Do we think of this as we see the despised Jews in our midst—but of this nation came Christ our Lord. Trust them as you would be treated. Be kind to the Jew because they are brothers of our Christ.

Every one who reads knows that the world is facing a great crisis. To-day the nations are being tested, out of it will come the nations as predicted in God's Word. Read Dan. 7th chap. Corners, continues and unions are facing us everywhere. We are [illegible] the ideas of anti-Christ. Are we ready for the coming of the Lord? Beware 'ere it be too late. We are at the very close of the Church Dispensation, but before we pass into the next, the Lord will come.

The service was closed with an earnest appeal to the unsaved to accept Christ and not reject Him.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Inquest Into The Death of Walter Holden, Fire Victim, Was Opened This Morning

Coroner Dr. Greer opened an inquest at Line and Eaton's undertaking rooms on the body of Walter Thos. Holden, who died at Nicholls Hospital yesterday afternoon from burns received in the Quaker Oats fire. The jury was empanelled as follows: Thos. Barrie, foreman, Harry Meredith, Herb. Routley, L. G. Dobbin, M. J. Meagher, John White, Wm. Menzies, Thos. Irwin, Reg. Turner, J. W. McDermid, Joseph Stewart and R. J. Kidd.

After viewing the body, the inquest was adjourned until Tuesday evening, December 12th in the Council chamber.

In addressing the jurors Coroner Greer said that yesterday's fire had been one of the most disastrous in the city's history. Hence he thought it wise that a thorough investigation should be made. The inquest would be adjourned until the necessary evidence was obtained. It might be that there would be no injury in the evidence, and again it might be of the most serious import.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Dear Mr. Editor—Just a few lines in your great paper as regards our fair city and the returned heroes that have returned from the front. Some have been men and tried to go and got rejected and others have returned scarred and maimed and nothing doing for the most of them to do. Now if the City Council could form a Board of Works to run a shell factory and run it for the benefit of these returned soldiers, and show that they are not forgotten and let some of those fellows that have got their names down on the waiting list in some of our local factories. Let them have a try at a suit of khaki and see how it fits, and if the doctors say that they don't suit you, you will be discharged with military honours. Think of the serious situation of the war. We should have our share of the big contracts, as Mr Travelle has his orders for all war contracts to be given in Canada. So let's wake up and get what belongs to us. If we help to win the fight, let's get the contracts, too, to keep the home fires burning for the boys when they come home.

Thanking you for your space, I remain,

Yours,
Liverpool.

FOR BAD BREATH.

A bad breath is certainly repulsive and very properly one feels troubled about it. If it proceeds from decayed teeth, consult a dentist at once if from a disordered stomach it is a case for the doctor.

Two drams of chlorate of potash mixed with six ounces of water and two ounces of listerine, will make a purifying wash to rinse the mouth every few hours, and helps lots.

Had to be Cold There.—The following is told by a young bride-elect who was ordering her trousseau in England before going out to New Zealand to be married. The dressmaker suggested only very warm clothes, and when the young lady demurred at this asserting that the climate of New Zealand is a very mild one, she was immediately informed: "I assure you, madam, you are mistaken, for that, of course, is where the frozen meat comes from."

Sorry For Him.—A correspondent in "Ultima Thule" tells a story of Principal Sir George Adam Smith's Glasgow days. One day he travelled in a car with a workman who was in the communicative and slightly bombastic stage of inebriation. "Look at thur," he said, holding up his hands. "These is the horny haunds of honest toil. You hirna goat haunds like thur". "No," said the professor, "but a man may do honest work with his head as well as his hands." "Ay, ye'll be a meenister, A'm thinkin'. Has ye a kirk?" "I used to have, but not now." The man's voice dropped to a confidential whisper, "Man, A'm sorry for ye. Wis it the drink?"

Punishment.—Bones is a schoolmaster where precept and practice of the blessings of punctuality are, as a rule, faultless. Should a lad be five minutes late in the morning he is "kept in" ten minutes. Recently Mr. Bones himself was thirty minutes late. Jones, one of his pupils, was not slow to remind him of his offence. "Yes, boys," said Bones, when he had listened to the smart boy, "Jones is quite right, and, as I punish you, it is only fair that you should punish me. So you shall all stay and keep me in for an hour after school this afternoon."

That Tickling In The Throat

Can Be Quickly Cured by DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP

This trouble is most distressing and is caused by a cold settling in the throat. The hard dry cough causes that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation and keeps you from enjoying your night's rest. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. Alex. Durward, Athelstan, Que., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for a number of years, and find it the only thing that will help me when I have a severe cold. It helps the soreness, and stops the tickling sensation in my throat, which is so irritating. I always use it for both myself and the children, and would not be without it in the house."

The thousands of testimonials we have received during the past twenty five years prove that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is an excellent remedy for all coughs and colds, so see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. at all dealers.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Would Not Hear Him.—An Edinburgh gentleman died the other day, and a small boy—opened eyed and silent—watched while the coffin was placed in the hearse. "Have you said your prayers, Willie?" said his mother after tucking him into bed that night. "I'm not going to say any prayers to-night," replied Willie with the air of one who had fully made up his mind. "But you must." "No not to-night," Willie persisted. "Why not?" asked the mother in astonishment. "It's no use," said Willie. "They will be so busy in heaven to-night unpacking Mr. Jones that they will have no time to listen to the prayers of little boys."

HIGH COST OF LIVING LAID TO FARM METHODS

Federal Statistics Show Food Yield Has Not Kept Pace With Nation's Growth

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9—Efforts to reduce the cost of living through increased production and better distribution of the country's foods are detailed in the annual report of Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture, made public today.

Records of the department show that except for meat and dairy products the per capita production of the leading food commodities in the United States has remained about the same, despite the rapid growth of population. Statistics presented cover a period of sixteen years. The population has increased in that time 33 per cent. There is ground for optimism, the report says, as to the ability of the nation not only to supply itself with food but increasingly to meet the needs of the world.

One of the principal aims of the department has been to increase meat production. The report shows a steady growth since 1913 in the output of beef and an advance in the number of swine every year since 1909. More extensive sheep raising is recommended as a source of food. It is pointed out that only one farm in seven in the United States now supports sheep. Fifty million sheep, it is said, could be added to the country's flocks.

"Sharp fluctuations of yield and price from season to season tend to stimulate speculative and superficial farming and to discourage the systematic crop rotation and thorough cultural practice which are essential to an enduring and economically sound agriculture," says the report. "It is obvious that, in large measure, stabilization of production must be brought about through the use of better adapted or improved crop varieties, more systematic and rational crop rotations, and improved agricultural practice generally, including, in many sections, larger attention to live stock production.

"As the principles of crop improvement are better understood and more generally applied, larger yields per acre should result. In addition, a great deal can be accomplished through increase of soil fertility and better cultural methods. Enough has been done in this direction by the State experiment stations and the department and also by good farmers to justify the expectation that considerably increased acre yields gradually will be brought about in a large part of the area adapted to the staple food crops."

FINDS $7,000 IN WAR'S PATH.

Frenchman Unearths Buried Treasure in the Ruins of Fricourt.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Daily Chronicle prints the following episode as told by its correspondent at the front:

"A few days ago a French civilian and his wife came to Fricourt, which is now far back from the fighting lines. Of the village there remain only a few rubbish heaps among the litter of complete destruction, but the Frenchman pointed to a plot of earth in all this turmoil and said:

"'There was my house. I am sure of it.'

"The party started scrapping up the earth. Suddenly there was a cry of astonishment.

"'God be thanked! It is here! I have found it!' cried the Frenchman. He and his wife had found 35,000 francs, all the treasure of their life, six inches deep under the soil that had been flung up by mine craters, burrowed by high explosives, dug by German soldiers, tramped over by British soldiers, and tortured by every destructive act of war."

According to a Vienna physician insomnia can be cured if the person will grasp the head of his bed and pull backward until fatigue develops.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE HELD LAST EVENING

Prizes Presented to Successful Scholars—Winning Athletes Also Received Their Awards—Annual Gathering Last Evening a Successful Event.

Last night in spite of the fascinations offered by the fire at the Quaker Oats a large number of the friends and relations of the pupils of P. C. I. Gathered in the Assembly Hall for the commencement exercises. The evening opened with a musical selection by the Collegiate Orchestra, which was much enjoyed. Mr. Eastwood in a brief speech spoke first of the awful disaster of the day. He also payed a tribute to those who had received their education at the P. C. I. and were now on active service and those who had already fallen. Mr Eastwood thanked the staff for their splendid work which was reflected in the efficiency shown by the pupils and was evident in the results of the exams. He impressed the fact that Peterborough must endeavour to keep up the standard of the present staff as it and never known a better one and give them whole hearted support.

A piano solo by Miss Isabel Baird was very much appreciated and was followed by the presentation by Mr. Jamieson of the Athletic Prizes. Mr. Jamieson in a brief and humourous speech spoke of the influence of the athletic work had in the lives of the pupils of how the training there helps build them up in mind and body to [illegible]

A vocal solo by Miss Emma Worth was one of the features of the evening and greatly enjoyed. His Worship Mayor Dufus then presented the High School Entrance Prize, making the following address:

"We are gathered here for a distinctly social function but in view of the colossal loss of life and property sustained by the city during the day, I should like to take this first opportunity to express my appreciation of the help offered by the citizens and that of the fire department; also to express my regrets for the loss of life and the loss to the city of such a magnificent factory; my appreciation of the manager, Mr. Denham who is a well tried citizen and one much admired.

In spite of all the disaster and gloom which hangs over us, I find it a pleasant duty to present to Miss Elliott this watch donation by Capt. Burnham who has always taken an active interest in Educational matters and who by this noteworthy act of presenting this valuable and beautiful prize he has created a spirit of competition which stimulates educational zeal, for my position I have had an opportunity visiting the different schools and I cannot speak too highly of the efficiency shown by the teachers. A picture by an artist, a great piece of sculpture lives after their creator, but a great monument is left by a teacher who imparts knowledge to the pupils.

Our school board has done wonders in building up an educational system and it is gratifying to the city that such men should volunteer their services for the purpose of advancing education. Public opinion is critical at times of the amount of money spent on building new schools. The [illegible] ture debt is high but we must remember the more progressive, the city—the more school accommodation is needed, not one child must be left uneducated for want of school accommodation. We face a different educational problem to that of our forefathers. Anyone may now become a professor scientist or have any other profession with the opportunities offered by the colleges and schools. It is our duty to use an education alone will help. Opportunity does not knock on the door of the uneducated or sluggards, but waits on the industrious and sober-minded. I could quote to you many an example of what education might have done. My own education was got under hardship, in a little country school by the road. I had not the opportunity the boys have today and we must strive to realise and appreciate the self sacrificing and untiring efforts of our school system.

Mr. Otto Gliddon's clarinet solo met with storms of applause and he was encored again and again.

The presentation of the Nicholls scholarships was made by Mr. Eastwood in the absence of Mr. Roland Denne who Mr. Eastwood explained was detained by business in connection with the fire.

The valedictory address read by Miss Phyllis Cumberland, winner of the Honour Matriculation was exceedingly interesting and showed much thought and care in preparation.

Mass For The Dead In The Great Disaster

The very Reverend Dean McColl celebrated this morning, in the Church of the Immaculate Conception a mass for the dead and injured in yesterday's disaster. This parish will feel the loss to a greater degree and extent than any other part of the city as a very large proportion employed in the destroyed works were residents of Ashburnham.

The motor of the automobile which carries it operates a new machine which bores four holes into the ground at once for posts or other purposes, tells a bare-faced lie.

TEMPERANCE ACT IS WORKING WELL

Provincial Police Report Improved Conditions in the North

TORONTO, Dec. 9.—"I am pleased to report, from my personal observation as to the working out of the Ontario Temperance Act, the results in the Cobalt, Porcupine and Sudbury districts are more than gratifying. The decrease in drunkenness is remarked, and persons who have not worked for a long period on account of their drinking habits are now steadily employed".

So says Joseph Rogers, Chief of Police in the Province of Ontario, in his report to the Attorney-General for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31 1916.

Under the Liquor License laws and Ontario Temperance Act there were 338 prosecutions, compared with 246 the previous year.

DECREASE IN SEIZURES.

There has been a considerable decrease in the seizure of liquor, as the following list shows.

Whiskey, 4,628 bottles, decrease 1913; 100 1-2 gallons, decrease 61 1-2; Beer, 5 barrels, decrease 256; 642 bottles, decrease 18,894; Gin 1,689 bottles, increase 1,296; bulk gin, 5 1-2 gallons. High wines, 133 3-4 gallons. Increase 41 3-4; Wine, 27 bottles, decrease 1,362.

HANDLED 1,198 CASES.

During the year 1,198 cases were handled by the Ontario Provincial Police, being a decrease of 220 compared with the previous year. Convictions totalled 809 against 890 in 1915. Fines were imposed in 536 cases, an increase of 19. There were 151 sentenced to be imprisoned compared with 191 last year. Three persons were sentenced to be hanged. No fewer than 119 were allowed to go on suspended sentence. Two hundred and eight persons were discharged and 51 cases are still awaiting disposal by the courts.

The Provincial Police only turned over 117 persons to the Immigration authorities for deportation compared with 306 in 1915.

ARRESTED FIFTY DESERTERS.

Fifty arrests were made of men who had deserted from the Canadian Army.

The fines imposed totalled $31,672.13, a decrease of $12,177.87 on the previous year. The fees collected and turned in by members of the force amounted to $2,274.28, a decrease of $956.62. The amount repayable by the counties in respect to investigations were $1,28128, an increase of $124.18.

GAME PROTECTION

Under the Game and Fisheries Act 98 persons were prosecuted and 78 convicted. A large falling off in the game prosecutions was from the order issued not to further prosecute cases against the Hudson Bay Company.

GERMAN CRUISER ROVING ATLANTIC

Captain Reports That His Vessel Was Held Up By a Warship.

London, Dec. 11.—A German warship has succeeded in running the British cordon in the North Sea, according to the report of a ship captain, who says his vessel was held up and examined in the Atlantic. The vessel is not a converted merchantman, the captain said on his arrival here, but is a regular light cruiser. The report from the log of this captain has become widely known in local shipping circles, and has caused widespread agitation for the convoying of merchantmen.

The British Admiralty announced Friday night a report had been received that a disguised armed German vessel of mercantile type was sighted in the North Atlantic on December 4.

Impressive Sermon By Rev. R. G. Peever

"A Three-fold Testimony to a Great Truth" was the subject of an unusual sermon by the Rev. R. G. Peever in the George street Methodist church Sunday night. During the course of his sermon the pastor remarked that one of the great charges against the church, to-day was that it did not emphasize sufficiently from the pulpit the sense of sin. Perhaps it was as a slight concession to such a criticism that he chose for the text of his sermon, "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, who can know it?"

In opening Mr. Peever quoted the text, and remarked that that was the awful charge of the Almighty against the human spirit. That was the dark picture the Scriptures betray, that was the black cloud that was hanging upon the horizon of the race. What was still worse was the fact we cannot refute it. Go where we will we meet the moral depravity of the heart.

In the beginning the first human beings were driven from the garden of Eden because of sin. Of the first two brothers on earth one became the murderer of the other, and the human race fell to such an extent that we are told God repented that he had ever made man. This was at the time of the great flood, and the Almighty sent the flood to blot out every family on earth but one. After the flood the head and father of the only family whom God had preserved, became a drunkard.

History's Testimony.

The heart is deceitful, above all things and desperately wicked; who can know it?" Canon Farrar's comment on this verse was, "Alas, alas! Too true.' The pages of history stand sealed with blood and the pathway of man is still the pathway of a man hall serpent. If an illustration was needed it could be drawn from the present, as we have the awful conflict marked by the devastation, iniquity and crime of those who stand against us in the struggles. Germany had trampled all the great principles of life under foot.

And what about man's own experience? I look unto my own heart and find that in spite of my good parentage, in spite of the influences of civilization and culture, the fact still is that within my own heart, if I allow it to run riot, unspeakable meanness and evil and wickedness. We can all truthfully say, "If I allow my own heart to run riot I would be an alien to God and to good." Such is the record of history and the testimony of our own spirit. God has chiselled it upon the heart of man.

The Other Side.

But is there not a brighter side to the man's possibilities? Thank God there are uprisings of the human spirit. That black cloud can be cancelled and that sin can be washed away. There is hope for man's deliverance. For while we must believe in moral depravity, we believe that there is that inside the heart of man that co-operates with the Almighty to raise man to a life of righteousness.

"Where depravity abounds," declared the pastor, "righteousness much more abounds." Jesus can become in our lives a power greater than all depravity, and He will bring emancipation and victory. Here the speaker referred to the life of Peter as illustrative of the truth. How Peter, a young man, had studied well and sworn faithfulness to the greatest Teacher in human history. How he had at a critical time, betrayed Christ and denied all knowledge of him. Then under Christ's kindly influence, Peter repented his faithlessness and followed in the footsteps of Jesus until he became a martyr in the cause of Christianity. And though the history of the race is still that of a race partly serpent, yet the speaker believed that Christ will reign, and that he is a Saviour and redeemer of men, and has redeemed us from the course of a broken law.

Atheists and infidels questioned and attempted to refute the saving power of Jesus. But much of Christianity as they might seem to explain away, none could ever explain away the conversion of man—the wonderful change from evil to good; the emancipation from evil habits; the curbing of passions. Christ was indeed the Saviour and no skepticism or atheism could ever account in any other way, for the turning of the depraved soul of man, heavenward.

Expected Death Toll To Total Sixteen

ing country for miles. For a moment it seemed as if the whole city were on fire. People far to the north and west state that it would have been possible to see a pin on the ground, so intense was the glare. This was the climax of the warehouse fire, although the contents of the building continued to burn all night and on the bottom storeys are still burning this morning.

GIRLS WERE ORDERLY.

Mr. Fred Gandy pays a tribute to the composure of the girls in the packing department and, especially to the forelady, Miss McManus. Immediately following the explosion, which shook the plant there was a brief, flitting moment of absolute silence. The machinery had stopped, the lights were out, and the faces of the employees reflected for an instant a blank, gaping expression of wonderment. This unnatural calm and indecision quickly gave way to action. The girls left their department in good order. They hurried, but there was no confusion. Many of them returned to the cloak rooms for their clothes and a few even punched the time clock responding to the system of departure to which they had become habituated. It may be supposed that there was a certain feeling of alarm among these employees, but their conduct was highly commendable, according to Mr. Gandy.

Mr. John Weir, who resides at the corner of Sophia and Rogers streets, was slightly burned over the right eye. He was out late in the afternoon his head wrapped in bandages.

TWELVE G.T.R. CARS GONE.

Mr. Walter Yale, G.T.R. station agent, reported that twelve G.T.R. freight cars were saved yesterday and estimated that twelve were lost

THE WATER SUPPLY.

The break in the eight inch water main, which practically encircled the building, was explained this morning by Mr. Ross Dobbin, Superintendent of the Waterworks Department. It appears that the main, which ran under the boiler room, was broken by the explosion and the water leaked out of both ends. In order to shut this off it was necessary to penetrate the fire zone. This was impossible in the case of one of the valves which was located in the alley between two of the burning buildings. The water was finally turned off on Quaker street and the pressure immediately jumped from seventy to one hundred and five pounds.

MESSAGES OF REGRET.

A. Purvis, General Superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, wired Mayor Duffus, expressing regret at the loss, and asking if there was anything the Company could do to assist. A similar message was received from the Mayor of Lindsay.

ARRIVED EARLY.

Fire Chief Howard arrived on the scene of the disaster within five minutes following the explosion. Rumour had it that he did not arrive for an hour after the fire broke out. As a matter of fact the Chief was only a couple of blocks away when the explosion took place. The Chief and the fire trucks arrived about the same time.

The Quaker Oats Company commenced building operations in 1901. The by-law relative to the agreement between the City and the Company was passed in December, 1900.

TELEGRAMS RECEIVED.

Toronto, Dec. 11, '16.

His Worship the Mayor, Peterboro.

Much regret to learn of accident and personal injury at Quaker Oats Mills. Is there anything we can do to assist?

A. Purvis,
Gen. Supt. C.P.R.

Lindsay, Dec. 11, '16.

Mayor Duffus, Peterborough.

You have the sincere sympathy of the people of Lindsay in your great loss.

R. Kylie, Mayor.

A DUST EXPLOSION.

Although the usual rumours are in circulation the generally accepted theory of the cause of the explosion and fire is what workmen in similar mills usually call a "dust explosion," and the scene of the disaster is thought to have been around the drying tanks and not in the boiler room, as first stated. A spark is sometimes caused by some foreign substance, such as a nail getting into the grinders. This is supposed to have occurred yesterday, causing the dust particles in the air to explode with a violence surpassing that of dynamite or any similar explosive. A portion of the north wall was blown out and fell on top of the boiler house, completely burying that structure and trapping its occupants, while part of the eastern wall was also blown out, exposing the huge drying tanks which afterwards fell. The loss of life all occurred among the employees who were at work in the drying rooms, around the grinders, on the third storey, or in the packing-room and bag cleaning rooms, underneath.

Mr. Jas. Pakenham, Douro Street, a mechanic, who has been with the Quaker Oats Co. for a long period, being employed in other factories before coming to Peterborough, was one of the first to enter that portion of the building after the explosion. His work calls him to all parts of the mill, and he had been employed in setting up a machine in the packing department. He was on his way to the drying room when the explosion came and the force knocked him off his feet. Having experienced similar explosions in other buildings of the same kind, Mr. Packenham immediately realized what had happened, and hurried to give what assistance he could. He found Jos. Tetro just inside the door of the packing-room, and brought him out and then made his way to the third floor, where he found Foreman W. Walsh, whom he helped down stairs. Mr. Packenham was unable to reach any more of the unfortunate victims.

MISS BOOTH INJURED.

The only girl employee of the Company to be injured was Miss Eva Booth, 176 Sherbrooke street, who received a bad shaking up and bruising. Miss Booth was employed in the packing department and was near a window when the explosion came. She made her way down a fire escape and jumped on top of a freight car. Unfortunately she tripped on her skirts and fell to the ground. She was not badly hurt. Miss Booth has asked the Examiner to thank the unknown soldier who loaned her his great coat.

CLOTHES BURNED OFF.

The clothes were burned from Mr. John Kemp's body from his knees upward. The wave of flame had caught him and when he staggered into an adjoining department fellow employees could not recognize him. Burned as he was he complained of the cold and asked for something to cover himself.

TOM HARRISON'S ESCAPE.

Tom Harrison is reported to have been the man who made the spectacular escape out of a window of the elevator, facing Hunter street, and a man named Northey hung for nearly twelve minutes from a window high up on the east side.

A FAMILY SHOP.

"Like a big family, that's what it was," said one of the employees this morning, as he bewailed the destruction of the Quaker Oats building. "The bosses were fine," he continued, "and we were all so familiar with the rooms that it seemed like a home. And the Company was all the time putting in new machinery to speed up the work. New grinders, worth about $10,000, were put in only a short time ago."

A machinist remarked that it would clearly be a long time before there would be work for him. Hence he was preparing to look elsewhere until the plant was built again.

A workman employed in tearing down some of the walls of the burned building, this morning, had a narrow escape from serious injury when a pile of masonry at the south of the offices, was pulled down. The bricks fell further than was anticipated, and the workman was hit, sustaining a number of injuries.

VICTIMS OF THE BIG FIRE

leaves a wife and five children. He was operating a grinder at the plant. His father-in-law, Mr. Hogan, had only recently come to the city to reside. He owned a farm in Selwyn Township.

WEDDING BELLS

SHIER—WILTSHAW.

An interesting wedding took place on Saturday last when Pte. Harry B Shier of the 247th Battalion was united in marriage to Miss Louise Wiltshaw, daughter of Pte. George Wiltshaw, overseas with the 93rd Battalion. The young couple were attended by Pte. Roy Rae of the 247th Battalion and Miss M. Wiltshaw, a sister of the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, at the residence of the bride's mother, 640 Union street.

HANBIDGE—DAWSON.

On Wednesday, December 6th, 1916 a very pleasing event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Dawson of South Monaghan, when their only daughter Hazel E. was united in marriage to Mr. George B. Hanbidge of Otonabee.

At the hour appointed (High Noon) the bridal party, unattended, entered the drawing room to the strains of a popular wedding march played by Miss Myrtle Sargent, the bride leaning on the arm of her father. They took their respective positions under an arch of Evergreens, which was banked and decked with flags and Christmas chimes.

The bride having been presented for marriage by her father, the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Wickett of Fraserville, in the epresence of about thirty of the most immediate friends of the bride and groom.

The bride looked charming attired in silk carneuse, trimmed with georgetta crepe and wore a conventional veil, which was caught up with sweet heart roses, while in her hand she carried a Bible, bound in plush from which hung streamers of satin ribbon and sweet-heart roses.

Shortly after the ceremony was performed breakfast was announced, and the happy company were ushered into the spacious dining room, which was artistically decorated in pink and white, with cut flowers for the table.

Under the able management of Mr. Hooper & Son of Peterborough, assisted by four young ladies, immediate friends of the bride and groom, the catering was all that could be desired and after all had partaken of the bounties of a well prepared and sumptuous wedding repast, the company engaged in rather an unique experience in not only proposing the toast to the bride of the day, to which the groom made suitable reply, but all endorsed the congratulations tendered by Rev. Mr. Wickett, to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hanbidge, parents of the groom, who celebrated the Forty-fifth anniversary of their wedding that day.

In due time the young couple made preparations for a trip, the bride's travelling suit was a navy blue serge, trimmed with Persian Lamb, with large Black hat, and Persian Lamb furs to match.

The presents gave evidence of the popularity and esteem in which the bride was held by her many friends as they were both numerous and costly.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Hanbidge will reside in Otonabee.

The Examiner wishes them long life and prosperity.

The Bazaar Is Still in Progress

The bazaar held in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum in aid of the building fund of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, is one of the greatest successes of the season. One of the chief attractions is the dinner and tea room, which is tastefully decorated with flags and Egyptian tapestries, the latter loaned by Mrs. Lehay, who received them lately from her son, who is on active service in Egypt. Much praise is due Mrs. J. Grant and the ladies who assisted her in the charming decorations. The ladies at the door are Mrs. Corkery Mrs. S. Laplante, Mrs. Merrell and Mrs. M. McFadden. Mrs. J. J. Dorris is convener of the lunch room. Those assisting are Mrs. Perry, Mrs. Lehane, Mrs. McCrae, Mrs. Fred Shannon, Mrs. Zimerman, Mrs. Leahy Miss Lillian Hurley, Miss Nell McCauley and Miss Maisie Kelly. Business men who had lunch at the Lyceum expressed the opinion that a better served and cooked lunch could not be served.

Quaker Oats Co. Officials Have Arrived in City

Their offices obliterated in yesterday's fire, the Quaker Oats Company's staff opened this morning in the south half of the Barrie building on the ground floor. Several front rooms, immediately overhead and in front, are being occupied by the superintendent, Mr. W. H. Denham. At 9.30 o'clock this morning a crowd of workmen reported to Mr. James McCarrell, and others straggled along even late into the afternoon.

About ten o'clock Mr. Thos. Grant, a foreman of the plant, was instructed to take charge of numerous squads of the men and to begin a removal of the debris in search of the remains of the missing. Mr. Denham's garage at the rear of the mill, has been elevated to the dignity of a yard office, which will from the centre of the operations in the ruins of the boiler house and the drying and grinding departments.

The workmen have been equipped with complete rubber suits, including boots hats and coats. Streams of water were poured on the smouldering mass of bricks machinery and other fragments of the structure.

COMPANY'S HEADS GATHERING.

This afternoon the main office of the Quaker Oats Company was represented in Peterborough by Mr. Robert Stuart president of the company, Mr. O. B. Holloway, insurance expert and Mr. O. C. Kirn. There is a pervading feeling of confidence that the company will begin reconstruction in the near future upon the completion of the adjustment of insurance. There was no definite information from the office to-day, and it was intimated that it might be some time before this would be available. Several department heads have every hope that rebuilding will commence soon, but they had no definite information for the reason that the officials have not yet arrived at the stage of the resurrection of the plant.

THE OFFICE FORCE.

Desks, telephones, and all the usual office equipment has been installed this afternoon and in spite of yesterday's terrible experience and the disturbance created by the removal of books and papers to safe keeping, there was every indication of renewed although unnormal, activity.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

LONDON, December 12.—The new Government leader in the House of Commons, Andrew Bonar Law, to-day moved an adjournment of that body until Thursday. At that time he said Premier Lloyd George would move a vote of credit.

WASHINGTON, December 12.—Premier Lloyd George will discuss Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's peace proposals when the former addresses the House of Commons, according to the British Embassy officials here to-day.

These officials said they believe the Premier might outline England's ideas on peace proposals.

Pending his coming speech the Embassy referred to Lloyd George's recent statement to the United Press for England's ideas on peace.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Germany's peace proposals according to the German Embassy official, will include the suggestion that the territorial status of the nations engaged be returned "practically" to what it was before the war started.

It was learned here on the highest authority that the proposals were based on the restoration of all territorial status as it existed before the war, except to create independent kingdoms of Poland and Lithuania.

Although he has no appointment, it is expected Ambassador Von Bernstorff will see President Wilson and thoroughly discuss with him the whole matter.

In diplomatic circles it was said Germany's action must have been partly determined by the success of the Roumanian campaign and by the Cabinet crisis in England and France. The peace conference, if it comes, will probably be held either at Berne, Switzerland, or at The Hague, it was predicted.

Bulgarian Posts Captured By Allies

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, Dec. 12 — All operations north of Monastir have been hindered by snow fall, but the allied forces nevertheless took five small Bulgarian posts on the right bank of the Vardar, to-day's official statement reported.

LONDON Dec. 12 — Premier Lloyd George was feeling better to-day after the chill which forced him to bed yesterday. His physicians, however, ordered that he remain indoors for another day or two.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—(French Official Communique)—A German attack in the wood of Deabgres, north of Lassigny, was stopped yesterday evening, to-day's official statement asserted.

The usual cannonading and fire accounts operations were reported elsewhere along the front.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12.—Hearst film service as well as the Hearst newspapers publication have been barred from Canada. These include international film company and Hearst Selwig news service which have been strong in many moving picture theatres throughout Canada in the past.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Text of Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg's speech in the Reichstag as reported by official German press bureau does not intimate on what basis Germany will consider peace. He emphasized the importance to Germany of recent Rumanian victories and spoke appreciatively of the genius and work of von Hindenburg.

He instanced Germany's hold on the western front as showing that she could never be beaten from that quarter. The speech evidently left a basis of negotiations to be arranged and announced later.

DESERTED SENTENCED IN HUB.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—Charged with desertion from the British army and with non-support of his blind wife and three-year-old child, George C. Latham, 23, of Nova Scotia, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

FIGHTING LIQUOR IN HUB.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—The greatest fight Boston has ever seen against the granting of licenses to liquor dealers got under way here last week. Forty thousand letters were mailed to voters. One hundred thousand are prepared for distribution at the polls.

Flyer Suicide For Comrade

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Out on the Libyan desert, where the British camel corps is operating, a little mound of stones marks the point where Second Lieut. Stewart Gordon Ridley vainly sacrified his life to save that of an air mechanic named J. A. Garside.

Ridley, an aviator operating with the Imperial camel corps, with Garside and another pilot, went out on a scouting trip last June and after flying for half an hour Ridley's machine broke down. After making camp for the night the other pilot decided to return to the base for assistance and return the next day to pick up Ridley and Garside. Upon his return the men had disappeared and it was only after four days' search that their bodies were found.

Diary Tells of Tragedy.

A diary kept by Garside shows how the two men ran short of water and how Ridley, hoping that Garside might survive on the few drops of water remaining, shot himself. The diary reads:

"Friday—Mr. Gardiner left for Meharig, and said he would come back and pick one of us up. After he went we tried to get the machine going, and succeeded in flying about twenty-five minutes. We tinkered with the engine and succeeded in flying about five miles Saturday.

"Sunday"We are so weak we can't get the engine started. Water running short, only half a bottle. Mr. Ridley suggested walking up the hills and we eventually got there; very done up. Walked back; about a teaspoonful of water left. At 10.30 to-night Mr. Ridley shot himself while my back was turned. No more water; don't now how to go on; got one Very light; can't last much longer.

"Monday—Thought of water in compass, got half a bottle; seems to be some kind of spirit. Can last another day. Fired Lewis gun, about four rounds; shall fire my Very light to-night; last hope unless help comes. Could last days if had water."

No Doubt of Sacrifice.

In making a report of the tragedy, the captain of the Imperial camel corps attached Garside's diary, and wrote beneath:

"There is no doubt in my mind that Ridley shot himself in the hope of saving Garside."

TWO MORE FIRE VICTIMS ADDED TO LIST OF DEAD

One Man Passed Away in Nicholls Hospital and the Body of Another Was Recovered From the Ruins

Two more names have been added to the "known" death list of fire victims. This brings the list of known dead up to seven, with at least eleven missing. Patrick O'Connell, who resides at 467 Parnell street, died in Nicholls Hospital at three o'clock this morning, while late yesterday afternoon the remains of Thomas Parsons were recovered from the ruins. It is hardly likely that the death list can be below eighteen, as present figures show seven dead and eleven missing. There are a number of severly injured men in the two local hospitals, some of whom may not recover.

The work of clearing away the ruins and searching for the dead began yesterday. As six o'clock last evening all available male employees of the Quaker Oats were put to work in two gangs, one at the north end of the plant and the other at the north-east corner. The men worked all through the night, aided by electric lights, which were strung over parts of the ruins where the fire burned its way out. It is the intention of the Company to continue the work until every body is recovered.

How Lloyd George's Ministers Are Fitted For Their Various Posts

Who's Who in the New British Cabinet—The Leader Started Life as an Inconspicuous Welsh Solicitor—Bonar Law Was An Iron Merchant

A LOGICAL LEADER

David Lloyd George was denounced in Tory circles just before the war began as the man who was "dragging the country to the dogs."

Starting life as an inconspicuous Welsh solicitor, he escaped notice until 1890, when, at the age of 27, he entered Parliament as Member from Carnavon, Wales. Five years later he was appointed a member of the Campbell-Bannermann Cabinet, holding the portfolio of President of the Board of Trade. When Asquith became Premier in April, 1908, Mr. Lloyd George took over the portfolio of Chancellor of the Exchequer, where he soon became the best hated enemy of the Tories and a popular idol of the people at large. In this capacity, during the period of August, 1914, to June, 1915, he had Parliament pledge the unprecedented sum of $4,510,000,000 for carrying on the war.

Since then he has grown in popular esteem and power until he was looked upon as the logical leader for the kingdom in the present crisis. In response to this sentiment, the King sent for him on Dec. 7 and offered him the post of Premier, which he accepted.

Andrew Bonar Law, who has been a member of Parliament for sixteen years, was an iron merchant, and formerly a member of the firms of William Kidstons & Sons and William Jacks & Co., both of Glasgow. He was born in Canada, and is the first colonial to head the Unionist Party.

Mr. Law was appointed Secretary of State for the Colonies in the Coalition Cabinet formed last year after being leader of the Opposition in the House of Parliament since 1911.

Lord Curzon, who is 57 years old, has had long experience in foreign affairs, his most important post being Viceroy of India, where he served during 1899-1905. Prior to this he had been Under-Secretary of State for India, and later for Foreign Affairs. He has been Lord of the Privy Seal of England since 1915. Since the beginning of the war he has been active in the recruiting campaign.

Arthur Henderson, leader of the Labour Party in the House of Commons, resigned from the Asquith Cabinet, in which he held the post of President of the Board of Education, on August of this year. On Nov. 8 he was appointed Minister of Pensions, a newly-created post made necessary by the war. He started life as a moulder in the works of Robert Stephenson & Co. Mr. Henderson has been a member of Parliament since 1903, and during 1908-10 was Chairman of the Parliamentary Labour Party.

Lord Milner, who was among those mentioned as successor to Lord Kitchener as Secretary for War, has long been identified with Egypt and South Africa. He has had a distinguished record as a colonial administrator, and he has been one of the leading advocates of conscription.

Arthur James Balfour, who was Foreign Secretary from 1878 to 1880, was appointed First Lord of the Admiralty on May 26, 1915, after serving in Parliament for forty years. He became Unionist leader of the House of Commons in 1891, and during 1902-05, was Prime Minister.

Lord Derby, who was appointed to take charge of recruiting on Oct. 9, 1915, at the request of the late Lord Kitchener, later became War Secretary. He served also as a Lord of the Treasury.

Sir Edward Carson, who served as Attorney General in the former coalition cabinet, has long been identified with Ulster as the North of Ireland leader. Sir Edward resigned from the Cabinet on Oct. 19, 1915, because he found himself at variance with the rest of the Cabinet on the Balkan policy.

On Nov. 27 it was announced from London that he was active in attempting to overthrow the Asquith Cabinet, which he planned to replace with a so-called National Cabinet, in which he was to be Secretary of War and Lloyd George Premier.

The new Lord High Chancellor, Sir Robert Ramsayne Finlay, has

A Slump In Wheat Prices

Germany's Proposed Peace Terms Cause a Decline in the Market —Cattle Prices

There was a heavy slump in wheat prices yesterday immediately on receipt of the news that Germany proposed peace. Cattle Markets.

Receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday were 61 cars, made up of 834 cattle, 130 calves, 974 hogs, 677 sheep and lambs.

Trade was not quite so brisk as on Monday's market. For Christmas beef quality cattle prices are firm and range anywhere from $9 to $11.50. Good to choice butcher loads are steady to firm at $8.60 to $9. For the medium qualities there was not quite so keen a demand, though prices held just about steady. Good cows, canners, and cutters are all very firm and in good demand.

Sheep are very firm and higher. Lambs firm.

Actor Hewlett Enters Service For His Country

LONDON, Dec. 12.—William Hewlett, the likewise gifted young brother of the distinguished author of "The Forest Lovers," is the latest of many British writers to don khaki. Some time ago Hewlitt, who until then had combined the professions of novelist and actor, decided to devote himself entirely to authorship.

On the stage he had been known as "O. Henty" and he had done useful work in sock and buskin, but, once his resolution was taken, he proceeded to bid the theatrical world, farewell, and for the sake of peace and quiet to write and settled down in the little town of Redruth, in Cornwall.

HOPES TO FINISH NOVEL.

Already known to renown on both sides of the Atlantic as the author of "The Child at the Window," "Introducing William Allison," and two or three other novels dealing with bohemian existence in this metropolis, Hewlett, as soon as he was settled, began work on a new romance.

Meanwhile, however, as a patriotic Briton, he had "attested" (i. e., volunteered under the Derby scheme for service when required) and has just "joined up", as the phrase goes. He hopes, however, he says, to be able to complete his new novel during the course of his military training. Besides his books, Hewlett has written both the libretti and the score of several quite successful musical comedies.

PRICHARD WINS MEDAL

Another soldier-author, who has been in France almost since the beginning of things, is steadily adding to his martial honours. This is Temporary Capt. Hesketh Vernon Hesketh Prichard, who, before the war, was equally renowned as a novelist, traveler, big game hunter and 'fast bowler' of the cricket field.

The creator of "Don Q." who was the first writer on the British side to be mentioned in dispatches has now received the much coveted Military Cross.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, caught weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

FOOD RIOTS IN HAMBURG

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Severe food riots in Hamburg, many killed.

The Safe Side

"Those of us who are wise," says a well-known doctor, "will keep on the safe side, by using only those foods that contain everything Nature puts into them."

¶ A bit of good advice, that. Many foods, usually prepared, especially cereals, are lacking in the vital mineral elements —phosphate of potash, etc., which the body must have for perfect balance of health.

¶ There is one food

Grape-Nuts

which is rich in those elements, containing as it does, all the nutriment of whole wheat and barley. It is a delicious food, affording the sweetness of dextrinized wheat and the distinctive flavour of malted barley.

¶ Every table should have its daily ration of Grape-Nuts

Dr. Mainprize Advises Iron For a Run-Down System

Will Make You 100% Stronger in a Few Days

Dr Mainprize of Saskatchewan, advises people who are weak, run-down, anaemic and nervous to start to-day to strengthen themselves by taking Iron for their blood. It has always been an understood fact that Iron was an excellent remedy for the blood, but owing to its constipating, nauseating effect it has been eliminated from use. Doctors have overcome this by combining the Iron with phosphorus which forms a new iron and at the same time the phosphorus used acts as one of the greatest nerve tonics known to medical science. You now have what is known to your druggist as Bonized Phosphorus with Iron. Dr. Mainprize finds this tonic to be four fold in action. It sharpens the appetite with new blood, strengthens nerves, creates strength and a new digestion. Your stomach will now be ready for good, big hearty meals that will be thoroughly digested. Start to-day and take Bonized Phosphorus with Iron if you are thin, pale, weak, tired, run down, anaemic, nervous, etc., and in ten days you will be full of pep, bright, vigorous, alert, retaining the glow of happiness. Stop taking all sorts of worthless patent medicine, cheap laxatives, for what you imagine will cure kidney troubles, stomach pains, rheumatism, etc. What you want is good strong pure blood and strong nerves, making your system immune to all these everyday complaints.

Bonized Phosphorus with Iron, as spoken of here, does not contain one atom of arsenic or strychnine, which is found so harmful in almost every tonic. Arsenic and strychnine act only as a temporary stimulant, making you feel better only for the time you are taking them; while Bonized Phosphorus with Iron goes to the root of the trouble, builds you up, strengthens your nerves, giving you a new lease of life. It is dispensed only by one druggist in each city. Agent for Peterborough is F. O. Weber, Charlotte Street.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

Kirk had exhausted his line of argument and fell silent but Jack Staples stepped into the breach. Staples himself was no mean type of financier, holding as he did a commission as one of Malone's chief lieutenant's. He was a striking man with a lower jaw, which thrust itself aggressively forward and a single white lock over his forehead, though except for that the blackness of his hair bore no touch of gray even at the temples.

"I hate the lot of them!" he announced vehemently. "I hate this upstart Cyclops and his conscienceless power. I hate the pampered brother—but Thayre is right. Great God in heaven, gentlemen, it is a family of geniuses. Stop and reflect. Fifteen years ago they were bare-footed, ragged, half-starved, the whole brood. Now consider them. Hamilton is magnificent, ruthless, but almost omnipotent. He is one of the world's few blazing and dazzling figures. As for Paul, in spite of his weakness, he is inspirational. His genius is no less intrinsic. I am not emotional, but I have heard them all play and that boy can carry me out of myself as no other artist can, professional or amateur, to whom I have ever listened. He is a gifted troubadour. His fingers control the magic of harmony as his brother's control the magic of money. For my part I'd rather be Paul than Hamilton. Hamilton will be hated to death—by men, but Paul will be loved to death—by women."

"Well," suggested another member of the group drily, "when one New York family can move as stolid an old cynic as Staples to eulogy, it must be some family."

"I tell you," protested Staples hotly, "I hate them," but we gain nothing by belittling our enemies. It sets a man's imagination afire to see a strain of remarkable blood proclaiming itself in so diverse a fashion through the members of one household; a household that has come from the pinch of want. Take the girl Loraine her beauty out of the question because beauty is not genius. But her mind is as trenchant as her brother's. She could reign on any throne in Europe and stand out as conspicuous in brilliant contrast to that colorless royalty as a torch flaming among candles. I will wager that her courage is as unflinching as his and her gifts as varied and remarkable. Why, even old Tom, the father, is for all his seeming of pompous emptiness, the craftiest and cagiest old chap in the National Union Club. He plays rotten bridge but he still has a brain in his old head."

"I suppose as far as that goes," commented Mr. Kirk, fortified by the entry of a new disputant into the argument, "that even Nero had his attractive angles of personality."

Thayre laughed and lighted a cigarette. Then as he inhaled deeply he nodded and replied.

"I hold no brief for Nero, but I dare say that he was a bit misunderstood."

"Since you have undertaken the modern Nero's defense, suppose you catalogue his good points—aside from a conceded brilliancy in finance," suggested another member of the group.

The Englishman nodded, and began his summary.

"An unswerving loyalty to his friends—until they are guilty of lese majeste; a personal integrity which no man questions; a wit which makes him in his lighter moments a rare companion; a generosity as broad as his fighting ruthlessness is deep; and finally, a lion-like courage. To me, my lads, those assets seem worth a moment's consideration."

The gardens and grounds of Haverley Lodge were that night such a terrain as best suits the ambuscading warfare of the small god with the bow and darts.

Loraine Haswell was thinking something of the sort as she strolled with Paul Burton away from the dancers leaving their destination to chance. Kirk had hardly exaggerated when he bracketed the name of this slender and graceful wife of the gigantic broker with that of Mary Burton as the two most beautiful women in society.

They were opposite types, for while Mary was a glowing incarnation of color, rich as a golden morning in blossom time, Lorraine, with heavy masses of softly spun jet coiled above her brow, looking out from eyes that were pools of liquid darkness, might have been the queen of night. But her mouth was a carmine blossom. This evening she wore a gown almost barbaric in its richness of color and pattern, and when she walked ahead of Paul Burton where the path narrowed, it seemed to him that some slim and lithe Cleopatra was preceding him. The waltz music came across the short distance and Loraine Haswell went with a step that captured the rhythm of the measure. When they had come to a corner of the garden where a fountain tinkled in shadow and only a lacey strand or two of moonlight fell on the grass, she halted with out outstretched arms resting lightly on the tall basin and let her fingers dip into the clear water while she turned to smile on him.

"Do you know, Mrs. Haswell, Paul spoke low and with a whimsical thrill in his voice, "you are the loveliest creature in captivity to-night? Your loveliness is to a man's imagination what Wilde said white hyacinths are to the soul—worth going without any bread for."

She laughed, but into her mirth there crept or was injected as the case may be, a note of wistfulness.

"In captivity," she repeated, slowly. "I am always in captivity."

With most men Paul was diffident and prone to silence but something in his effete nature gave him confidence with women. He had been flattered into a sort of assurance that they found him irresistible. They thought him clairvoyantly sympathetic—and he was by the very over-refinement of his music and dream-fed temperament.

"The other evening when I left you, I went home and closed my eyes, and sat alone—thinking of you," he told her. "To me all that is fine beyond words I try to translate into music. Where words—even poetry—fail, notes begin. So at the piano I try to express something like a portrayal of you—to myself."

She seated herself on a stone bench while he stood looking at her. Her head was for a moment bent and something in the droop of her shoulders intimated unhappiness.

"Does my improvising music about you offend?" He put the question very gently. "You know that I go to the piano as another man might go to his prayers."

She looked up and shook her head. Then she said softly. "Offend me? No, it makes me very proud. I was just thinking of something else that troubled me."

"Of the word you used just now—captivity?"

He seated himself at her side and his hand fell to the edge of the stone bench—where his own fingers lightly rested. The cool satiny touch of the hand his own encountered, which she made no effort to withdraw affected him as though a clear and silvery note had sounded near him.

Paul was one of those whose senses were exquisitely attuned.

"Mrs. Haswell—Loraine," he said, and his voice was seductively tender "you are unhappy."

Slowly she nodded her dark head, and her voice was a whisper. "Yes—Paul, I'm afraid I am just that."

It was the first time they had called each other by their first names. It was the first time that the gradually ripening intimacy between them had had a more propitious setting, that a table at Sherry's. Paul Burton had awaited this moment patiently, knowing that it must sometime come. Now he bent toward her until her hair brushed his face.

"It is your right to find life a thing of joy," he whispered. "Your soul is a flower. It should have the fulness and the radiance of sunshine."

"Our rights," she said slowly, "are not always the things we get."

"But just why are you unhappy?" he insisted.

"I guess you summed it up in that one word, Paul—captivity."

Paul Burton, the easily swayed, the facilely led, rose and paced up and down, and after a few moments he halted before her.

"Doesn't he—your jailer—appreciate you, Loraine?"

She shrugged her lovely shoulders and looked up at him, smiling through lashes that glistened a little.

"As much I suppose, as a man can appreciate a woman whom he fails to understand. It's not his fault."

"Of course he—cares for you?"

Loraine Haswell shot him a quick inquiring glance. "Yes," she smiled, "he cares enough to persecute me with little jealousies. He cares enough to want me to make love to him when—" she halted and put both hands over her face; through her slight figure ran a faint shudder—"when I can't."

The man pressed his tapering fingers to his temples. He must seem agitated and his emotions lay so ready to call that seeming so was almost being so. Yet in the back of his mind was the thought: "She will be in my arms in five minutes."

Suddenly she rose from her seat. "I oughtn't to say such things to you," she declared in a voice freighted with self-accusation. "Please forget it, Paul. But it is a thing that you can understand. You know the emptiness of a life that deals only with material things."

He leaned forward with one knee on the bench and one hand on the fountain basin. She was beautiful and his heart responded to her beauty's challenge.

"To me you can say anything. In me you will always find one who has no interest above your interests."

He stooped and took her hands, but she shook her head in gentle negation and as he obeyed the unuttered mandates, she rewarded him with a smile date and let his own arms fall at his that thrilled him like an embrace.

"Len is fine, and big, and everybody likes him," went on the wife as though bent on being fair at all cost. "Sometimes I think that is the trouble. It's like being married to a standing army. In times of peace one does not need a standing army, and in times of war it is me that he makes war on."

Loraine rose and started toward the house. Paul followed her, appraising her beauty with eyes into which a new interest had come. In a moment she turned and halted so suddenly that the man found her face close to his as she spoke. "I don't know what the matter is with me to-night. I feel faint and giddy—and full of undefined longings. I shan't sleep—unless—unless" she looked questioningly up at him—"unless you will play for me, Paul. Will you?"

Then she put out both hands and swayed unsteadily. Paul caught her in his arms and pressed her to him. The fragrance of her breath and the velvet coolness of the cheek he found himself kissing were details that brought an exquisite responsiveness to his senses. He did not know if she had fainted or was still conscious, for she rested there in his embrace limp and unresisting and wordless.

"What is the matter, dearest?" he whispered, when the first flush of exultation had passed. "What is the matter?"

Slowly the dark fringe of lashes flickered up and the jet eyes gazed languorously into his own. The blossom lips parted over the flashing whiteness of a smile. Still she did not move except to close both her hands tightly on the arms that circled her.

"Paul," she told him, "I ought to be unconscious or—or break away, but I'm just—just forgetting my captivity."

Her eyes held his, drawing them hypnotically nearer and he lowered his face till his lips met hers and received from them the answer to his kiss.

Then Loraine Haswell drew away, and straightened up. She was a very lovely picture of contrite confusion as she put up both gleaming arms and rearranged the dark hair he had rumpled. All the way to the house she was silent.

How They Raised the Money.

Many Australian business firms and manufacturers rendered very material assistance in the flotation of the last war loan by taking up bonds on behalf of their employees in return for small weekly payments. While each firm made its own arrangement, yet the general procedure was to assist any employee in receipt of less than £200 a year in taking up bonds from £10 to £50, the amount to be repaid at the rate of 2s. 6d. a week for each £10 bond.

The employers undertook to pay over the amount subscribed by the employee without interest being charged for the advance. Further, any employee subscribing to the loan, and leaving the firm's service before the expiration of the eighteen months (the period of reimbursement of advances) may obtain his or her bond on (a) by payment of the amount outstanding, or (b) transferring the subscription to another employee, or (c) arranging with the firm to take up the subscription—in which case the firm will repay the amount paid, together with the interest due thereon to date of transfer.

A Legend of Anti-science Days

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

The difference between an old fashioned music box and one worked phonographically is that the former is mechanical, while the latter is a reproduction of the feeling of the musician. The Swiss people have for many years ranked first in the building of musical mechanical contrivances and have brought them as near perfection as they can be made.

Several hundred years ago David Kloekke, a Genevese maker of music boxes, became ambitious to produce a music box that would give one song so perfectly that the feeling thrown into it by the singer would be reproduced. He certainly had a great advantage in executing his work. He was deeply in love with a girl who sang exquisitely. Indeed, it was her rendition of a ballad that suggested it.

"Why can I not make a box that will give that expression?" he asked himself. "I can produce harmony with my metal tongues, but not feeling." Then he resolved that he would make the attempt.

When he told Hilda, the girl he loved, that he wished her to sing for him that he might reproduce her song in a music box she saw the impossibility of accomplishing such a feat; but, preferring to humor him and supposing that she would be only required to sing to him a few times to convince him that he could not accomplish what he had undertaken, she assented. A simple love song was selected, and when Kloekke had his material and tools ready to reproduce the notes she began to sing, first giving the entire song that he might become imbued with the melody.

As soon as she had finished he asked her to sing the first few notes again. This she did, and he asked her to sing them again and again, while he endeavored to imitate them on his metal prongs. Hilda very soon not only grew tired of this, but, being tired, her singing lost all its charm. This irritated her and her lover, the result being a violent quarrel. Hilda ran away and left him to relieve her feelings in tears.

While Kloekke was sitting at his work table brooding over his failure and his break with the girl he loved the door opened and a woman entered.

"I have heard," she said, "what has taken place in your effort to reproduce human feeling in song. It requires a great deal of patience on the part of one who sings for you. Let me try, and possibly you may be able to reproduce my song."

The man assented, and the woman began to sing. She, too, sang her entire song before he began to work. From the first note he seemed thrilled with something he had never felt before. The song was weird. Kloekke seemed to hear spirit voices calling, now soft and low, now rising in a wail. When the woman had finished the song she repeated the first few notes. Kloekke succeeded easily in repeating every one, giving it exactly as it was sung. She sang a few more notes, and those he reproduced with equal success.

Kloekke was delighted. Running into the room where Hilda was, he called to her that he had succeeded in his effort. He expected that she would rejoice with him at his success. Instead, she looked at him angrily and told him that since he had found another who could do what she could not do he might take the other for a sweetheart. He was very much astonished at this, for he had always found Hilda's disposition of the sweetest. However, after much coaxing he persuaded her to go with him into the room where he had worked.

The woman who had sung for him had gone. After looking about for her and not finding her Kloekke wound up the music box and set it moving. The first note had a peculiar effect on Hilda and, through her, on her lover. She gave him a look of hate that remained on her face as long as the song lasted. This naturally produced a madness in him which spurred him on to strike her. He had raised his clinched fist to do so when the song ceased.

Kloekke lowered his arm and heaved a deep drawn sigh. Hilda wept. He attempted to encircle her with his arms, but she thrust him away.

A hammer lay on his work table, and, taking it up, he struck the music box a blow that sent its parts flying over the room. Then, turning to Hilda again, she put out her arms to him, and they met in an embrace.

"Who was she?" asked the girl in trembling voice.

"I don't know," was the reply.

"A malignant spirit. Where is the crucifix you keep on the shelf?"

Kloekke looked at the empty shelf, then about the room. The crucifix was under the work table. Her feet had been upon it.

Such is a legend of a time when science had not yet driven away the hobgoblins. Who would have then thought that expression as well as harmony would eventually be produced on the phonograph? Till its invention music boxes were made, becoming more and more perfect every year. But no one could play into them or sing into them and have the feeling, the expression, the humorous sympathy of the musician, reproduced. It remained for the phonograph to do this. And who can doubt that if a phonograph giving an "Ave Maria" sung by a present day prima donna could have been sprung upon a people of the middle ages they would have considered it a miracle?

DYSPEPSIA

MOST DIFFICULT TO CURE

BUT B. B. B. DOES IT

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure.

You eat too much; drink too much; make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of time before dyspepsia follows.

That forty-year-old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia, and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we receive from time to time.

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kiltarlity, N. S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what your great medicine Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled very much with dyspepsia for the past two years. I was recommended all kinds of medicines, but they did not help me any. At last a friend advised me to try a bottle of B.B.B. I took four bottles and was totally cured. I will gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

Inexpensive Gifts of Cardboard and Silk

IT is high time to be making Christmas gifts, and the little articles illustrated below are so simple that they can be completed in almost no time at all. They are inexpensive to make, too, requiring only bits of cardboard and some pieces of silk and ribbon from mother's scrap-bag.

The pretty heart-shaped needle-book shown in Fig. 1 has a pair of covers made of two pieces of cardboard, measuring three and one-half inches each way, and four leaves of the same shape and size cut out of white or pretty colored flannel. Place the flannel hearts between the covers, and pierce two holes through both covers and leaves each side of the center of the top. Then pull a piece of narrow ribbon through the holes and tie a small bow. Fasten pieces of ribbon to the lower points of the heart, both front and back, by which to tie the little case shut when not in use. Mark

Fig. 2 shows a book-marker made of one and one-fourth yards of No. 7, white satin or grosgrain ribbon. Cut the ribbon into two pieces, one piece measuring 13 inches and the other 24 inches, and pull them half way through a little brass ring such as is used in crochet work, fastening them in place with a few stitches. To complete the marker, letter the following upon the ribbons with black ink or water colors, placing one line of the stanza on each ribbon end:

"Not mine to tell
If the book is good;
But I keep my place
As a marker should."

The triangular-shaped book-marker shown in Fig. 3 is cut from a piece of white writing paper seven inches square. Fold the square in half, diagonally, and cut along the folded line. Then take one-half and fold it in half

Hysteria

ABOUT the first thing the victim of nervous collapse does is to cry. With ebbing nerve force all control is lost, and in this helpless, hopeless condition confidence disappears and discouragement takes its place.

Because sufferers from nervous disorders are often strong and healthy in outward appearance they frequently get little sympathy from their friends or from doctors who do not understand nervous diseases.

If there is ever a time when sympathy is needed it is when the nerves give way. But you must have more than sympathy if you are to recover your nervous energy. The feeble, exhausted nerve cells must be nourished back to health by the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This food cure is so gentle and natural in action that it admirably suits the delicate condition of the exhausted nervous system, and at the same time is wonderfully potent in restoring vigor and strength.

A little patience is necessary in order to build up the nervous system so far run down, but as headaches disappear, digestion improves, and you rest and sleep better you will be encouraged to continue this food cure until restoration is complete.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

six inches long and one and one-half inches wide. Cover each piece with pretty silk, turning over the edges of the silk and basting on the wrong side, as shown in Fig. 6. Then lay the pieces together, and sew the edges over and over as indicated in Fig. 7. Fasten a ribbon to the ends of one long side by which to hang up the case (Fig. 5).

Santa's Christmas

By MARY D. ARNOTT

Lindenette struggled vainly with the tears that squeezed at last through tired eyelids. It was not often that the brave little homemaker gave way to grief, but in the present moment she seemed unable to control her emotion.

In the next room childish voices prattled joyously. Lindenette had not found the heart to tell them that Christmas would have to come and go without the much heralded visit from Santa Claus. Since the loss of both parents Lindenette had managed to keep a roof over the heads of her small brother and sister and had provided food for their slight frames. What did it matter if her cheeks had lost their roses and her lips their cheery bloom? The smile lingered. That was all that mattered.

She brushed her tears aside and arose to answer an unexpected summons from the knocker. She looked her surprise at the great man who stood on her tiny porch.

"I have come in search of one Linden Lane," the stranger said with a smile to which the girl responded.

"The name is unusual," admitted Lindenette, "and my own is even more impossible—being Lindenette Lane. May I ask you in from the cold?" She opened the door and Marvin Goodwin entered the pitifully barren room into which she led him. His eyes followed the girl rather than the contents of the room.

Two small, pale faces peered at him from the kitchen door, and Goodwin smiled at them.

"Do I look like Santa Claus?" he asked them by way of breaking the ice.

"No, you don't," returned the boy, bluntly. "Besides, Linda says it may be too cold for Santa Claus to come out this year." There was a wail from the little sister, and the boy strove vainly to conceal his disappointment at this announcement.

Linda gave them each a hug and told them to run along. When they had gone she turned to Goodwin with inquiry in her eyes.

"My errand is a pleasant one," he said quickly, for his own voice was none too controlled. "It will add to your happiness, I know." He drew a newspaper from his pocket, and after consulting it, asked: "Your father, Linden Lane? Did he live in Stillwater, Minn., 22 years ago?"

"Yes," replied Linda, with a flush of excitement leading roses to her cheeks. "I was born there."

"Then, to come directly to the point," Goodwin told her, "we find two deposits of $25 each in two of our banks there. One Linden J. Lane opened the account 22 years ago."

Linda laughed softly. "My father used always to fear bank failures, and put small amounts in many banks." She turned sparkling eyes upon Goodwin. "We thought we had collected all his savings," she said.

"These two nests were undiscovered," the man laughed, "and the bank have been laying golden eggs. You

"Three hundred dollars! Oh!" she impulsively held out her two toil-worn little hands. "It is a fortune! The children! They can hang their Santa Claus!"

Goodwin found himself feeling happier than he remembered having felt before. Was it the knowledge that he had been the Good Fairy in this small family, or was it something more subtle, more wonderful that had crept into his mind?

He laughed a little nervously. "I am going to ask for immediate payment for the joy I have found for you," he said and when Linda's questioning eyes met his he said, impetuously: "Let me come to-morrow—and help make Christmas glad for the children. May I come?"

Linda glanced at him with a new shyness. "Yes," she said, simply. "If you like I will go with you to help get that Christmas tree."

Next morning Linda and the children were up early.

The crackling of the fire as it roared up the stovepipe created a spirit of cheerfulness that greeted Marvin Goodwin when he presented himself at an early hour.

"Oh!" shouted Bobby, "here's our own Santa Claus!" His eyes grew glued to the armful of packages Goodwin deposited on the table.

"Bobby!" cried Linda.

"Haven't you ever heard Santa Claus before?" queried Peggy.

"Never! This is my very first experience. I hope I will acquit myself with proper dignity."

And Linda's eyes, over the heads of the children, looked down deep into Goodwin's big soul, and unconsciously she let the man read what her heart was saying.

"Next Christmas," he was saying, in his mind, "Linda will have permanent roses in her cheeks, and her eyes will be mine, and that will be all the happiness one Santa Claus could have."

Lindenette smiled.

"I felt my back itchy and then I noticed that it was all in pimples. They were very red and inflamed. My clothing aggravated the trouble very much and the itching was so intense that I was obliged to irritate the affected parts by scratching.

"Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using them for a week, the itching stopped. After I used one small tin and one large tin of the Cuticura Ointment and five cakes of Soap, I was healed." (Signed) Miss Gibbstrom, 269 Clarence St., London, Ontario, July 6, 1915.

REFUSED TO TAKE CHANCES KISSING THE COURT BIBLE

Bugs and bacilli and other germladen things are held in the greatest of respect by City Bacteriologist Race of Ottawa, even though their habitation be the cover of the Bible which reposes day after day on the railing of the witness stand at the Court House.

Wednesday afternoon Mr Race objected to kissing the cover of the Good Book on the ground that it was not sanitary. Mr. Race used to carry a Bible around with him for this purpose, but had lately been informed that it was necessary to kiss the Bible in being sworn, and so he did not bring he private Bible with him.

Evidence was produced Wednesday afternoon to show that several persons had been more or less injured by the opening of tins of "Sultana" chloride of lime and it also came to light that during the hot spell in August last tinned goods had a merry time bursting and bouncing around the shelves of a local grocery store.

Say Sight Injured.

The action before the court was the continuation of the Robertson vs. Crabtree Limited case, in which Mrs. J. B. Robertson is suing for injuries received to her sight and person through the explosion of a tin of Sultana chloride lime which she was opening with a screwdriver.

Several well-known business and professional men gave evidence, among them being Dr. A. E. Mahood, Joseph Race, Lieut.-Col. Courtney, partner of the late Major A. A. Beare; Alexander Phillips, T. W. Collins, R. E. Powell, Mr. B. G. Crabtree and Mr. Ross.

Killing the Calves—All sorts of excuses are offered for the high price of beef, the most plausible being the alleged demand for veal—"the killing of calves which should be allowed to grow into regular beef." You cannot have beef if you eat it as "veal," but you can have Shredded Wheat Biscuit which contains more real nutriment than beef and costs much less. Shredded wheat biscuit is the whole wheat steam-cooked, shredded and baked. Make it your "meat" for ten days and see how much better you feel. Wholesome and strengthening for any meal with milk or cream or in combination with fruits.

Time's Changes.

Why is it that laws which worked very well fifty or sixty years ago are being discarded? Why is it that laws which a quarter century ago would have been laughed down are getting upon the books of every state in the Union? Why is it that there are new ideas in teaching, new ideas about the liberty of the individual, new ideas about a man's relationship with his neighbor? Why is it, in short, that there is a vast discontent with old institutions and old ways? It is because the world has outgrown the government, the ideas, the habits of thought that fitted easily and serenely enough into the lives of our great-grandparents, but which are creaking in their joints now. Life today is a very different thing from life fifty or sixty years ago.—Toledo Blade.

A Map That Failed.

The French National library in the Rue de Richelieu, Paris, is full of wonders for the lovers of history. One of its treasures is a map of North and South America as French possessions. The map is dated 1564, and here is the explanation of it: Catherine de Medicis, the queen of Henry II. and mother of Francois II., Charles I. and Henri III., dreamed once of the conquest of the two Americas. She even named viceroys, one for North America and the other for South America. They were on their way to the new world when the queen's audacious plan fell through because of events at home. The queen, however, had a map made showing her projected possessions under the French flag.—New York Sun.

Car of the Czar.

The private car of the czar of Russia is said to be practically dynamite proof, and owing to its weight it could not be run on most of the European lines. The car is elegantly furnished and also contains a chapel, where prayers are offered for his safety. The czar travels with only one chef, who is well along in years and who served his father and for awhile the grandfather of the present German emperor.

INSIDE STORY OF THE CRISIS

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Sir W. Robertson Nicoll, who has frequently expressed in the columns of the British Weekly what was generally accepted as Lloyd George's views, gives in this week's issue if that paper the following history of the crisis:

"Lloyd George was not anxious to accept the office of the War Secretaryship. Although at once confronted by difficulties, he was able to effect something, but under the present system under which everything has to be referred to the Cabinet, he was continually thwarted. Remonstrances and memoranda were ignored. The war went from bad to worse. Every day brought its story of humiliation, of indecision, and of disaster.

"Lloyd George became convinced that we were not winning the war, and that with present methods we never should win it. Everything was stagnant and the Government was apparently unable to do anything. Even when verbal concessions were made to the popular demand, they were not carried into effect. The country in the emergency was willing to follow any direction, and it had none.

"At last, one Friday, Lloyd George wrote to the Prime Minister, demanding that the direction of the war should be taken from the Cabinet and committed to a council of two or three with Sir William Robertson and Sir John Jellicoe. The Prime Minister was to have a vote, and also the right to be present when he wished to be.

"Asquith replied at once, and a very friendly conference was held between two statesmen, after which it seemed likely that matters might be arranged. Then on Saturday the Prime Minister went to see the King, and afterward proceeded to Walmer, thinking the matter might rest till Monday. But he was informed by a telegram that the business would brook no delay, and he came back on Sunday.

"There was another interview, also of a friendly character, in which the Prime Minister agreed that methods for the conduct of the war required reformation, and agreed, with certain modifications, to Lloyd George's proposal. On Sunday night at 11.45 he issued a statement to the nation, containing the announcemennt that the Government was to be reconstructed.

"On Monday symptoms of a change in the Prime Minister were visible and on Tuesday a letter was received from him in which he rejected the proposals which he had agreed to by letter and by word of mouth. To this course, no doubt, certain members of the Cabinet urged him.

"On this Lloyd George's resignation immediately followed. No alternative was left to him."

DECLINES CHRISTMAS GIFT.

New Rochelle, N.Y., December 7.—The Rev. Dr. Tillman B. Johnson, pastor of the Salem Baptist Church, of New Rochelle, has posted the following notice in the church:

"No present, please. For two reasons the pastor cannot accept a Christmas present from Salem this year. The condition of our treasury forbids it, and the call for help to smitten Europe forbids it."

Dr. Johnston is one of the most popular pastors that New Rochelle has known. He said to-day that the real reason he would not accept a Christmas present was that the church needs the money more than he does.

FIND SYRUP ADULTERATED.

Ottawa.—The Department of Inland Revenue has made an analysis of two hundred and nine samples of maple syrup. Of these one hundred and sixty-two were found to be genuine. Forty-one were found to be adulterated with cane sugar. The The great proportion of the samples purchased in localities where maple syrup is recognized as an established farm industry as in New Brunswick and Quebec, are found to be genuine. An injury is being done the maple syrup industry by imitations.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' DRESSING SACQUE.

By Anabel Worthington.

In this illustration is shown a garment that is indispensable in the wardrobe of every woman. It is needed when one awakens, for the rest period after work when dull care needs driving away and to slip on when dressing for a call more or less formal.

Keeping pace with Fashion's fancies, the designer planned to make the collar the "star feature" of this dainty model. Notice that it is cut in a becoming length, quite full, and drawn in on an elastic at the waistline. The sleeve just turns the elbow, finishing with a turnback point cuff, but a full length sleeve may be chosen and finished with a band cuff. Lace or ribbon to outline the collar and sleeve cuff gives a dainty feminine touch and ribbon to fasten the garment at the neck and waistline will add to its daintiness.

Challis, albatross, wool batiste, cashmere and flowered silk are among the favored materials for something very effective. Cotton crepe will develop effectively, too, with dainty trimming touches. It is a pleasure to make such a garment and it requires no skill to do so.

The dressing sacque pattern, No. 8046, is in sizes 36 to 42 bust. To make in size 38 requires 2¾ yards 36 inch goods with ⅝ yard contrasting goods and 3 yards lace banding.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

To obtain the pattern send 20 cents to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Germany's Terms Will Not Be Accepted

Dead and Missing in Monday's Fire Total Seventeen

NO PEACE ON THE TERMS OFFERED IS THE BRITISH OPINION

Newspaper Comment and Expressions Generally Are That Britain Does Not Want Peace on Basis Offered By Germany---Nation Looks to Lloyd George to Frame the Answer in the House Next Tuesday.

FOE ATTACKS IN EAST REPULSED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, December 13.—The British people have already answered Germany's offer of peace—"No, not on such a basis as proposed."

That answer was perfectly apparent to-day. It was reflected not only in the newspaper comment, but in expressions from people on the streets.

Philip Snowden, the Empire's leading pacifist, is the only prominent man dissenting. He considers that the Allies will incur awful responsibility if they decline.

There was considerable opinion that the note was merely a "clever Teutonic trick' for the purpose of starting discussion among the Allies, and possibly thus to create dissention.

ENEMY ATTACKS IN CARPATHIANS REPULSED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, December 13.—The repulse with great enemy losses, of Teutonic attacks in the wooded Carpathians, was announced to-day. Eastward of Chibena a strong enemy attack was repulsed, and southwest and southwestward of Valeputna fighting continues, the enemy stubbornly resisting.

"South of Trotiesh," the statement said, "we gained a line of enemy trenches along the heights south of Agusulia. Enemy counter attacks made to regain this position were repulsed with great losses and a number of prisoners were taken."

Peace Proposals Are Regarded as a Trick

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 13.—Britain is looking forward to next Tuesday, when Premier Lloyd George will address the House of Commons, for Britain's answer to Germany's peace proposals.

Until that time, British men and women are considering but one thing, to continue the war until a decisive victory is established.

If the comment of London newspapers is any criterion England does not propose to regard the German peace proposals in any other light than "another German trick."

CANADIAN TORPEDO BOAT GRILSE HAS GONE DOWN

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, December 13.—The Department of Canadian Naval Service has announced that it is feared that H. M. Canadian torpedo boat "Grilse," Lieut. W. Wingate, has been lost off Cape Race with all hands. She was a thirty-knot oil-burning vessel, formerly Palatial Yacht Winchester, owned by Peter Rouss of New York. She was purchased by J. K. L. Ross, Canadian millionaire, and presented to the Government in May, 1915.

The "Grilse" carried a crew of four officers and forty men, many of them Canadians. She left Halifax Monday afternoon for Bermuda. Tuesday she wirelessed that owing to bad weather she was returning to Shelburne, N.S. Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. she called "S.O.S.", and a few minutes later "now sinking." There has been no word since.. Several vessels are now out searching.

Ontario officers and men included Sub-Lieut. Fry of Toronto, and Wireless Operator Clement of Hamilton.

German Casualties Nearly Four Millions

Examiner Special:

LONDON, December 13.—Germany's November casualties, exclusive of naval and colonial, were 166,176, making the total since the war began of nearly four million killed, wounded and missing.

LLOYD GEORGE WILL ANSWER ON TUESDAY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 13.—Premier David Lloyd George is preparing to answer the peace proposals made by Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, when he addresses the House of Commons Tuesday in connection with a general statement on the Government's policy.

Frequent Drafts To Go Overseas

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, December 13.—Militia authorities state that the number of overseas troops to be held in Canada this winter will not exceed fifty thousand men. It is expected that there will be practically continuous movement of drafts overseas throughout the winter months, and recruiting, it is believed will steadily improve.

The top photograph taken from a point across the river gives an excellent idea of the condition of Monday's fire as seen at mid-day. At the left of the picture can be seen the ruins of the mills. At the right the huge wooden elevator which was afterwards completely destroyed is shown in the grip of the flames. A portion of the cement elevators which escaped the fire is noticeable at the extreme right.

AN EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

December 13, 1916.

In behalf of the Management, I wish to express our great appreciation of the faithful service of our employees, and also to thank the citizens, in general, of Peterborough, for the unselfish help so generously offered and given us on the occasion of our disastrous fire, Monday.

THE PROVINCIAL FIRE MARSHALL IS IN THE CITY

Mr. E. P. Heaton Together With Several Government Officials are Holding a Conference This Afternoon. Investigation Will Follow Coroner's Inquest

WILL BE THOROUGH

Mr. E. P. Heaton of Toronto, Fire Marshall for the Province of Ontario, is in the city to-day in connection with the recent destruction of the plant of the Quaker Oats Company. Other government officials in the city are Mr. D. M. Medcalf of Toronto, Chief Inspector of Steam Boilers for the Government, and two assistant inspectors, namely, Mr. Drummond, and Mr. Main. Mr. Tutt of the Factory Inspection Department of the Government, is also in the city. All of these officials, together with Fire Chief Howard, were in conference this afternoon, in the private office of the Fire Chief.

To an Examiner representative Mr. Heaton said that the investigation which would undoubtedly follow the preliminary survey that is now being made by the Government officials, will be thorough. It will be up to the municipality to provide a place for the holding of the investigation. It will likely be held in the City Council Chamber, as this is about the only available place since the Court House was gutted by fire.

"We have no desire to harass the Company officials who are suffering from the severe strain that has been placed upon them," said Mr. Heaton. We will endeavour to formulate our arrangements to suit all concerned.

A conference will be held this afternoon and within the next few days we will be in a position to state the time and place of the investigation."

Mr. Heaton visited the scene of the catastrophe this morning. "I just had a bird's-eye view of the situation," he said to the Examiner.

A CORRECTION IN TURNBULL'S STORE NEWS

In yesterday's issue an item in Turnbull's store news was made to read — "Silk plush coats $80.00 to $8.00." This should have been "$80.00 to $80.00." At the last named prices the goods are excellent value, and should attract prospective purchasers.

BE JUST TO YOURSELF.

If you suffer with eye or head trouble, have it attended to before it becomes worse. Dr. Lacey is a qualified eye specialist and can cure you. See him and see better. 413 George.

MONDAY'S TRAGEDY HAD ITS EFFECT ON RECRUITING EFFORTS

Officers of 247th Battalion However Are Getting Back in Swing Again in the Campaign For Recruits--Two Were Taken on Yesterday---253rd Battalion Recruiting Here ---To-day's Military News.

Although the terrible disaster at the Quaker Oats Company Monday cast its gloom over recruiting activities as well as other departments of the city's life, Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his officers and men are buckling to the task again. Men must be supplied for the firing line, and so the work must go on. Two recruits were taken on yesterday, and prospects are bright for a number of others.

THE QUEEN'S KILTIES

One of the latest units to be authorized for overseas service is the 253rd Queen's University Highland Battalion under Lieut. Col. P.G.C. Campbell, Professor of Romance language in the University.

To the men of Canada it comes with a double appeal to the University graduate to the High School graduate and their friends who is joining this battalion will be assured of that congeniality of taste and point of view, which will make the training and living together so much more pleasant, it is on this principle that so many battalions have been successfully recruited and trained in the Old Country. To such and to many others there is also the appeal of the uniform, the kilts are a real soldier's uniform

REPRESENTATIVE OF COMPENSATION BOARD IN THE CITY TO-DAY

Statement of Compensations Granted by the Board to Families and Employees Affected by Monday's Fire

FOR FAMILY RELIEF

Mr. N. B. Wormworth of Toronto, solicitor for the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario, is at the Empress Hotel to-day for the purpose of explaining the operations of the Compensation Act as it will apply to families and employees affected by Monday's holocaust.

In the case of the death of a married man, his widow receives $20 a month until her death, provided she does not re-marry; each child under sixteen years is allowed $5 a month until its sixteenth year.

The compensation to any such family shall not exceed $40 a month.

Employees permanently injured, the loss of sight, for instance, receive fifty-five per cent. of their previous wages up to $2,000. Those who earned more than $2,000 are supposed to have savings and other means. On that basis the employee who had earned $60 a month would be compensated to the extent of about $400 a year until his death.

Death of Unmarried Man.

In the case of the death of an unmarried man with dependent mother or other member of his family, the compensation will depend upon the particular circumstances at home. It may be paid in a lump sum or as a pension, and shall not exceed $30 a month.

The employee injured beyond ten per cent. of his earning power will receive a monthly pension, the amount depending upon his disability.

There is also compensation for those who receive minor disabilities and for those who are temporarily disabled. In the latter case, the man who is laid up for a number of weeks or thereabouts receives fifty-five per cent. of his wages for the term he is incapacitated for work.

BIG FEATURE FOR THE BAZAAR

"Ajax" will Give a Strong Man Demonstration To-day

There will be an attraction of unusual interest at the bazaar of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in St. Alphonsus Lyceum to-night, when Mr. W. L. Lane, a vaudeville strong man who has recently taken up his residence in Peterborough, will perform some of his wonderful feats that have amazed audiences all over the continent. "Ajax," as Mr. Lane is known on the stage, came to Peterborough last week and has decided to remain here. He lifts over 1,200 pounds, juggles heavy dumb bells around as if they were toy balloons, lifts five heavy men on his dumb bells and performs other amazing feats. One of these will be to lift Mr. Pat. McGraw, who weighs 225 pounds, over his head with one hand. Ajax's performance runs from 25 to 30 minutes and will commence at 8.30 o'clock. An admission charge of 10c will be made.

JOHN CONWAY.

WILLIAM MILES, Rogers St., East City.

The casualty list following Monday's explosion and fire shows several changes from that published yesterday and the total of dead and missing now stands at seventeen. Since yesterday the name of Wilbert Kemp, Sherbrooke street, has been taken from the list. Mr. Kemp instead of securing employment at the Quaker Oats as was thought at his boarding house, secured a position with a lumber company and did not notify Mr. Fredenburg with whom he boarded, of the fact, with the result that when he did not turn up on Monday night he was put down as one of the victims.

On the other hand the missing list yesterday failed to contain the name of Wm. Miles, Rogers St., East City. The absence of a Wm. Miles was known to the papers yesterday, but they were not aware that there were two men of the same name employed in the plant. Inquiry revealed the fact that Wm. Miles, Murray street, was all right, but his namesake, residing on Rogers street, is undoubtedly a victim of the fire. He came to the city from Dummer township in August and was employed in the bag cleaning department. His wife resides on Rogers street. One daughter in the west and one son in Dummer, are also left.

The list of dead was augmented today by the death early this morning at Nicholls Hospital of Patrick O'Connell, 457 Parnell street, who was taken out of the building badly burned on Monday.

Mr. O'Connell, who was 47 years of age leaves a wife and four children, Walter and Vincent of New York; Alice and Rita, at home. Mrs. O'Connell's mother resides in Lakefield. Mr. O'Connell was a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters. The funeral will take place on Friday morning, at 9 a.m., with the service at the Sacred Heart Church, before proceeding to St. Peter's cemetery.

So far to-day no more bodies have ANY SHAKE-UP HERE?

Britain has met the popular demand for a more systematic and vigorous prosecution of the war, by a thorough reorganization of the war cabinet. France has taken similar action with a similar object in view, and it is natural to inquire whether the cabinet of Canada is to continue, without some little of the shaking up that seems to be necessary elsewhere.

Is our own government keeping the machinery up to the necessary speed? It doesn't seem so. Recruiting is not what one would like to see it. It is true that Sir Robert Borden, the head of the government, has taken the field. He has made two or three excellent speeches as speeches go. The sentiments are good. He exposes the arguments in justification of Canada's participation in the war. We all agree with him, but he has not given us a hint of any new policy; of nothing like what Lloyd George has laid down as the new departure in more energetic preparation for, and prosecution of, the war. We all agree with Premier Borden's speech, but we should like to have a chance to agree or disagree with some proposal of more energetic measures for putting Canada where she should be in regard to more effective contribution to war work. It is to be noticed that the sum and substance of Sir Robert Borden's speeches, as far as the new "campaign" is concerned, is the announcement, which we had previously through the press, that early next year cards would be distributed, containing a set of twenty-four questions which every man is supposed to answer. The information thus gained is to be tabulated and what then? The gist of the new "campaign" is that the government is going to take a census, but what is the government going to do to help recruiting; to help Canada's adequate participation in the war? The Premier academically justifies this participation in terms that all agree with. But are measures being effectively and energetically taken—in the Lloyd George spirit — to make our theoretical participation practically effective? Is it to be accepted that while it was necessary to shake up the British cabinet, there is no need for any cabinet shake up in Canada? If the cabinet is all right in composition it does seem that something should be done to stimulate the members to a little more energetic action in helping Canada do her share in the war. The soldiers we have sent are doing their share splendidly. The question is, are we doing our best in the matter of meeting the most urgent want — more soldiers? Something needs shaking up—is it the government or the people? Can we expect the people to take the reins into their own hands? Can we expect popular action; stronger response to recruiting, unless the government shows the way?

THRIFT AND WASTE.

Thrift and waste are in their essence and meaning, as opposite as the poles. Thrift builds; waste destroys. The wasting flames that licked up the Quebec Oats buildings and their contents were not more destruction in concentrated energy than the distributed forms of waste that devastate Canada from end to end. Waste is not only destruction of matter—it can consist in waste of energy, waste of labour, waste of time and seasons, waste of seed time.

We think, without in fact thinking it all, that the high price of food products is a puzzle; but it is in large part explainable on other grounds than middlemen, combines and cold storage hoggery of food products. Scarcity adds to prices, and we have a scarcity that is palpably due to lack of thrift, to waste and sheer shiftlessness.

It can be proven that in the matter of Ontario's milk production and cheese and butter output, they could be doubled without increasing the number of cows in the province—by improving their productive capacity. Mr. S. E. Todd, director of farming at the public institutions, under the Provincial Secretary's department, has records to show that the production of the Holstein herds under his charge amounted to from 8,000 to 10,000 pounds of milk per cow, per year. Contrast this with the average production per cow throughout the province, which is 3,200 pounds a year. This shows that throughout the province, there are hundreds of farms where three scrub cows have to be kept to do the work that one good, well-bred, well-fed cow would do, cows that are "eating their heads" off many times a year. A scrub cow as a rule, is a voracious eater, considering what she returns. Keeping cows that require three to do the work of one good cow is waste—waste of feed, waste of care, waste of stable room. Mr. Todd teaches his results by a constantly applied system of weeding out and raising only the heifer calves from the best milkers. At the Hamilton Asylum for the insane, twenty-two cows have been pawed through as culls—sent to the butcher's block—to make up a herd of 75 cows, with an average production of 9,825 pounds of milk per cow per year. There is one pure-bred Holstein that yields 10,000 pounds of milk a year.

It is thrift to keep such cows, as it is waste to keep the other kind, and this kind of waste is one of the things that makes milk and butter and cheese scarce and dear. Ontario's acreage can support twice as many cows as we have, and if they were trained—bred—to produce twice as much milk we should have a four-fold improvement in dairy production.

TEUTON PEACE FEELERS.

The reported proposals of the Teutonic powers for peace are, in the first place, gratifying; not that they will be listened to by the allied civilized nations, but because they show that Germany, or her allies, or dupes, is tired of the war. The brutal campaign that set out with its braggart watchword of world domination, now abjectly, under the circumstances, sues for peace. She recognizes that she is virtually beaten, and no doubt counts upon her temporary success in Roumania to procure better terms, if peace is now considered. There is nothing in the conditions which the meagre despatches suggest to show that Germany wants a peace on terms to which the civilized allies will agree. The territorial status quo ante is proposed by Germany, it is understood, and no mention is made of the wide measure of restitution and indemnity that must accompany any satisfactory peace.

The Teuton proposals came at a bad time for the Huns and their confederates. In England there has been a cabinet shake-up with the idea of employing the resources, the manpower, and other powers of the nation to an unprecedented degree of directness and intensity, in order to wage the war more vigorously. In France there has been a reconstruction of the cabinet with the same object in view; and Italy is also sharpening her sword for more vigorous use in the coming year.

There is no reason to believe that there has been any change of sentiment or ideals in waging the war since Premier Asquith, in the name of Britain and of Britain's allies in this war nailed their colours to the mast and voiced their common determination, their ultimatum of peace possibility in these noble words:

> We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed.

If Mr. Asquith's successor, Lloyd George, lives up to this declaration—if he does not he will not measure up the heart desires of the people of the British nation and her imperial dominions—then all Teuton proposals of peace that cannot be squared with the spirit of Asquith's declaration will be "scraps of paper" in right good reality.

Asquith's ultimatum, which has never been recalled, broad and inclusive as it is, falls far short in details of exaction of the price to which Germany must be subjected to pioneer the temper of the mass of the people of the British Empire. There must be paid immense indemnities—every dollar Germany has cruelly wrung from writhing Belgium, and now is wringing from Roumania, must, or should be repaid, not only to the uttermost farthing, but with exemplary usury. Germany should be forced to account for and replace, ship for ship, all and more than the ships she has sunk in her career of piracy and sea murder.

It seems warrantable to infer, that the spectre of the price she is to pay when the day of reckoning shall come, leads to the tentative—for they can be little else—proposals for a peace, ture and, consequently, an abortive peace. The Entente Allies and the world, in the interests of civilization, and the lasting peace of the world, cannot afford to compound the infamous felony of Germany and her fellow bandits.

The blasphemous hypocrisy of the German Chancellor's exordium of his peace proposals—"conscious before God of our responsibility, before her own nation and before humanity"—God save the mark—shows that Germany, anxious as she is to end a losing game, has not yet the humbled spirit, that must mark her temper as a suppliant for peace.

BERLIN DRIES VEGETABLES.

Plant Started in July Soon to be Doubled in Capacity.

BERLIN Dec. 12.— Berlin's establishment for drying vegetables which went into operation in July is already drying some forty tons of vegetables daily and an enlargment of the plant now building will almost double its capacity. It is operated in connection with one of the great gas plants of the city where it obtains an abundance of cheap fuel using altogether the waste from the gas retorts and coal fires.

The drying house serves as a safety valve for the Berlin market. It often happens here, as at all other great centres of population, that more vegetables come upon the wholesale market at certain times than the retail trade can absorb. Whenever this appears to be the case the superfluous are loaded with vegetables are switched off and carried to the drying establishment. It is chiefly for this reason that the latter will, as is now believed, be kept up permanently — as a regulator of the vegetable trade even after the war.

The vegetables dried are chiefly cabbages, but also spinach, carrots, turnips, kale, potatoes, and some others are inclined. When a correspondent of The Associated Press visited the drying house he found some seventy women trimming cabbage heads washing, cutting, drying and barging them. Special machinery does much of the work. The washing, for example is done in hallow tanks through the bottom of which air is forced in many jets and under great pressure. This causes a violent boiling movement which thoroughly cleanses the vegetables within a few seconds.

Before the cabbages are thrown into the slicing machines a girl holds each head under another machine that neatly bores out the stem. The slicest cabbage is then patboiled for about one minute and then goes to the drying kilns. These are large iron furnaces about eight feet high, they hold about ten frames of vegetables at once. The frames about twelve by eight feet, have a bottom of wire netting upon which the cabbage mass is thinly spread. The drying process takes two hours. The dried product is then put into bags and piled away in the storeroom.

At present the dried vegetables are used only for feeding the inmates of the various charitable institutions. It is expected, however, that much of the product will be sold in the markets toward the end of the winter, when the general supply of vegetables grows scarcer.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE AGITATION SHOULD YIELD TO WAR NEEDS

To the Editor: In his letter, recently published in the daily press, Prof. Wrong pleads earnestly for national unity at the present critical stage in the Empire's history. He says: "A negative resolve to avoid strife is not enough; but an aggressive unity among our people is necessary." He goes on to show in a powerful and convincing fashion the absolute necessity for such unity. I do not feel called on to make any comment on the methods suggested by Prof. Wrong to achieve complete harmony at Ottawa, but I am moved to address you on a matter affecting unity among women—I refer to the movement now on foot to carry on a campaign throughout the Province of Ontario on behalf of woman suffrage.

The desirability, nay, the necessity, of united action on the part of the two political parties at this time is sufficiently obvious, and only slightly less so is the desirability of persistent effort on the part of all the women of Canada in all matters relating to the war—Red Cross work, the welfare of returned soldiers, encouragement of recruiting, etc.

It is quite clear that the proposed campaign, if carried on, will not only divert the energies and attention of large numbers of women from war work such as I have mentioned, but it will also stir up strife, and thus have a prejudicial effect on Canada's efforts to aid in bringing the war to a successful conclusion at the earliest possible moment. In England a definite truce was agreed on between suffragists and those opposed, and, as far as I know, with the exception of one outbreak on the part of some irresponsible "militants," it has been conscientiously observed. No such arrangement was suggested in Canada, as it was thought that feelings of loyalty would dictate the complete cessation of steps to further this debatable political subject.

Further, it does not appear to me to be treating fairly and squarely the men who are so grandly fighting our battle in Europe, in their absence, to try to press to a conclusion a matter involving a sweeping change in the government of their country. Let it come up for decision after the war when we shall all have time to give it that judicial consideration its importance deserves; and when those have returned who, after all, at this particular time, may be said to represent the Province in a truer sense than even the elected representatives in Queen's Park, be they Liberal or Conservative. By a decision so arrived at all would, as in duty bound, abide. I do not, however, wish to emphasize this latter point at the expense of my former contention, which, to my mind, ranks far over all other considerations, namely, the necessity for a united Canadian womanhood in this time of stress.

I earnestly appeal to the Suffrage Associations, through you, sir, to reconsider their determination to raise this question now, so that they may direct all their efforts into patriotic channels from now to the end of the war—in other words, and to borrow Prof. Wrong's fine phrase—"I appeal for an aggressive unity among women."

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE HEARD MEAT CASE

Dismissed Charge that Arose out of Confiscated Beef

Magistrate Dumble this morning dismissed a charge against three East City men of offering for sale "diseased meat which was unfit for sale."

Mr. Richard J. Edwards said he was a butcher in Ashburnham. This particular carcass had been left at his store by Mr. Henry Faux and Mr. Wm. Quinn at six o'clock. They asked if they might leave it there over night on account of the lateness of the hour. This was a custom among butchers. Mr. Edwards neither owned the meat nor had offered it for sale.

Letters from government inspectors at Ottawa did not condemn the meat, samples of which had been forwarded to them. They said the animal should have been seen alive to afford a proper inspection.

Dr. Ames, M.O.H., stated that on one quarter of the carcass a "benign" tumour had been located. This was interpreted as a tumour that was confined practically to itself. Magistrate Dumble translated "benign tumour" to an every day swelling.

Dr. Ames said the meat would be safe if thoroughly cooked. Personally he wouldn't eat it.

Dr. Johnston, veterinary surgeon, said he regarded the carcass in a medium condition as to fat. It was frozen when he saw it. The lungs and intestines were not with it. There was a yellow deposit at the bottom of the kidney. A definite decision as to whether the animal was fit or unfit for human food could be made only after examining the whole carcass and also examining the animal before its death. Where here was a tumour in the body the size of this one, I would say the carcass was unfit for human food. A tumour is regarded as the result of a disease. From what I saw I would say this animal was unfit for human food."

To Mr. Kerr, Dr. Johnston admitted that to be certain of the condition of the carcass the animal should have been examined while living.

The carcass has been held in cold storage and it is understood that if it is offered for sale Sanitary Inspector Cooper will seize confiscate it.

Ease Your Wife's Anxiety

"Indeed, I could not sleep last night," said a merchant to one of our insurance agents. "The insurance on my store expired yesterday, and that pesky fire bell reminded me of it. That store is my living, and I could never start another. If the fire had 'snuffed out' my business last night, instead of Smith's, I would be at my string's end."

"Get insured this morning?".
"Yes, sir; bright and early."
"Own the house you occupy?"
"No; wish I did."
"Anybody helping keep the family?"
"Why, no—why do you ask that?"
"Any income besides the store?"
"No, not a dollar—why?"
"Does your wife sleep well?"
"Why yes; but what on earth are you driving at, anyway?"

"I was just thinking how she could sleep, for if your life had been snuffed out' instead of your neighbour Jones' yesterday, she would be at her 'string's end,' for I happen to know that you have no life insurance and your income is her living."

Most men sleep sounder when they know that in event of FIRE their property IS PROTECTED BY INSURANCE. Would not your WIFE AND FAMILY sleep sounder if they knew YOU HAD FULFILLED YOUR OBLIGATIONS and made provision for them in event of YOUR DEATH?

TORONTO is CONVINCED

ARE you open to conviction? The Grand Opera season in Toronto gave music lovers an opportunity to prove the astounding claims made for the New Edison, and in a word—Toronto is convinced. Chalmers' magnificent baritone, and Zenatello's tenor that knows but one equal, carried away the audience. Then, with the glory of these voices still fresh in mind, many accepted Edison's invitation to hear the same singers on the NEW EDISON—a pitiless test—but

THE RE-CREATION WAS PERFECT

THOMAS CHALMERS, famous baritone of the Boston Opera, singing in direct comparison with Edison's Re-Creation of his voice. Mr. Chalmers is but one of the many great artists who have thus proved that Edison's new art successfully sustains the pitiless test of this astounding comparison. Hear Edison's Re-Creation of Chalmers' magnificent voice; then hear Chalmers himself when this great baritone is on tour.

THINK what it means! You have the opportunity to hear really great music rendered by the elect, but a few times in a year, then only at great expense and often at great inconvenience. With Edison's invention in your home, you have the finest renderings right at your command whenever you will.

Instead of inviting your friends to your box at the opera, you bring them to your home, where in comfort you give them the perfect re-creation of the voices of Chalmers, Zenatello, Anna Case, Emmy Destinn, Margaret Matzenauer, Marie Rappold, Alice Verlet, and a hundred other operatic stars—the masterly violin bowing of Albert Spalding, Carl Flesch, and the whole range of the world's best artists.

The NEW EDISON

THE GIFT OF GIFTS

AND what better time to introduce this instrument into your home than now—now, the season of gifts, and the problem solved—what shall be given to the family? The mere price of the instrument is but small acknowledgment to Edison of his gift to humanity for all time to come. Hear the New Edison first, then decide to act at once.

ZENATELLO, who has recently been knighted by the King of Italy. "A voice of golden tone, prodigal in its expenditure, yet responsive to every emotional shade." Zenatello shares first rank as a tenor with Caruso.

COME AND LET US SHOW YOU THIS LATEST MIRACLE OF EDISON'S GENIUS

WE extend to you an open invitation to hear Edison's Re-Creations of the voices of Chalmers, Zenatello and other artists you may choose. Your request will imply no obligations to buy and we can assure you of a delightful surprise if you have mentally pictured Edison's invention as "just another talking machine."

Grazed By A Train, He Loses Faculties

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The experience of standing in front of an express train approaching at fifty-five miles an hour, and being jerked from between the rails an instant before the locomotive swept by, apparently has robbed a well-groomed, unidentified man now at Stumpf Memorial Hospital, Kearny, N.J., his speech and all desire for food, since early on Saturday the man, although not injured, has met all questions with a stare, and although tempting dishes have been put before him, he has apparently had no desire to eat.

Physicians at the hospital and the Kearny police said last night that they were sure that the man was not shamming, but that the shock of his experience had paralyzed the muscles of his throat, and had suspended his desire for food. He seemed equally unable to write, and when paper and pencil were put before him he continued to stare. The case has aroused unusual interest, because the man is apparently a person of intelligence and respectability. He wore clothes of good quality, but with all identifying tags cut out, a silk shirt, and an expensive overcoat, when taken to the hospital.

He was saved from death on Saturday evening by Patrick Collins, gate tender for the Lackawana Railroad at the Kearny crossing of the Newark [illegible] main automobile highway between New York City and Northern New Jersey towns. Collins had lowered the gates as the Buffalo Express, coming from Hoboken, was approaching, and his attention was drawn to the man by shrill blasts of the locomotive whistle. Glancing down the rails he saw the man standing in the full glare of the locomotive headlight, rigidly awaiting what seemed to be certain death.

Collins yelled at the man and made a dash for him. Grabbing him by the arm, he exerted all his strength, and succeeded in throwing him to one side just in time to escape the locomotive's pilot. The roaring engine passed so close, and the rescue was accomplished by so narrow a margin, that it was several minutes before Collins could collect himself sufficiently to question the man who stood stupidly near by.

He looked at Collins dumbly when asked why he had tried to commit suicide, and the gate tender, unable to gain any information, notified the police of Kearny. Several men took turns asking him questions without avail, and he was finally turned over to the hospital authorities. Dr. Walter Block tried in many ways to rouse some spark of interest, but without success.

The man is apparently about forty years old, has black hair and moustache, weighs 170 pounds, and is five feet nine inches tall. A small chain, wound in brown tape, was found suspended from his neck when they prepared him for bed at the hospital. The silk shirt he wore, an expensive one, had been purchased from A. I. Namm and Sons, in Brooklyn. Beyond that, nothing that might lead to identification was found either by the police or the hospital authorities.

Romance Walks In London Fog

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The eccentricities of a London fog in war time were amply demonstrated when one of the old fashioned "pea soup particular" brand descended upon the metropolis and blotted out everybody and everything.

An amusing incident occurred at one of the theatres when the audience pouring out from the brightly lighted auditorium found itself plunged into an atmosphere that resembled nothing so much as a heavy black Manket.

Cabs were impossible to procure, motor omnibuses had ceased their journeys, and the streets were crawded with men and women in evening cloth es who seemed to have lost their sense of direction.

HIS NAME NOT GERALD.

One girl I know became separated from her escort and her party but did not know it. So when she found a khaki covered shoulder in close proximity to her own she seized hold of its accompanying arm and cried pathetically:

"O, Gerald! However shall we get home? And have you lost mother and the girls?"

The young man, whose name did not happen to be Gerald and who did not know anything about "mother and the girls," was not unnaturally, embarrassed.

"I'm awfully sorry," he said, "but I think you have made a mistake. I still be delighted to take you home, however, if you tell me where you live."

Whereupon the damsel and her cavalier plunged into the fog together and arrived at her home in Cavendish square, just about the time her parents were arranging to send out search parties.

JUST LIKE A NOVEL!

The strange young man was made welcome, and if romance has any sort of justification for existence in these times "something ought to come of it," for he turned out to be well born, a lieutenant in a guard's regiment and possessed a comfortable financial position.

Select a good shape, tie a piece of metal ribbon around the crown and you will have a good-looking and fashionable hat.

CONVICT UTOPIA PASSES WITH THE NEW PRISON REGIME

Moyer Appointment is a Step Toward Penal Reorganization in State—Mutual Welfare League Doomed

GOVERNOR SEEKS TO MAKE SYSTEM SELF-SUPPORTING BY EMPLOYMENT OF PRISONERS.

ALBANY, N.Y.,—The day of Utopian experiments in the prisons of New York State has passed.

The appointment of William H. Moyer, formerly warden of the Atlanta Federal Prison, as warden of Sing Sing is a definite step in that direction. The Mutual Welfare League is doomed. Governor Whitman never had confidence in it. He was interested to learn what Thomas Mott Osborne could do with it ,and it is the belief of the Governor that it was a failure.

Sing Sing henceforth will be conducted as are most of the other prisons of the country. There will be rigid discipline. There will be adequate rewards for good behaviour. But convicts—so long, at least as the present administration exerts any influence—will not again make Welsh rarebit in their cells or serenade one another with banjos and guitars as they did during the halcyon days of the Mutual Welfare League.

Mr. Moyer is a practical prison man. Although he has a record for extremely stern discipline while in Atlanta, there will be no undue severity in Sing Sing. James M. Carter, prison superintendent, is in full accord with the Governor. He believes civilians should be the prison monitors, but that every convict should be treated humanely.

SEEK SELF-SUSTAINING SYSTEM

The appointment of Mr. Moyer, it may be stated on the best of authority, is a move toward placing the prison system of the State on a solid basis. It will be made self-sustaining if it is possible to have it so. The methods in use in the famous prison in Stillwater, Minn., will be followed in so far as it is practical to so do. Stillwater is the model prison of the country, if not of the world. It is more like a health resort than a penal institution. Nevertheless, the convicts, while surrounded by every comfort and receiving the best of sustaining foods, are subjected to the most rigid discipline. There are few escapes from the Minnesota prison.

It is the purpose of Governor Whitman, through Mr. Carter, to give the prison system of the State a thorough overhauling. Mr. Moyer is counted on as one of the most important factors in the reorganization.

It is intended to expand the manufacturing in the prisons, so that practically all the furniture and furnishings used by State departments will be turned out by the convicts. It is intended also to employ convicts in the construction of State roads. If that idea is carried out stone crushing stations will be operated through the winter months entirely by convict labour.

MANY PROTESTS RECEIVED.

From many parts of the State have come protests against any radical change in the Mutual Welfare management of Sing Sing. Regardless of these communications the Mutual Welfare will be wiped out. The names may remain, but the self-constituted courts inside the prison and the practically unrestricted liberty of convicts will be done away with.

A change will soon be made in the wardenship of Auburn prison. While there has been no criticism of the work of Charles F. Rattigan, the present warden, the administration officials believe that politics has been more or less injected into prison affairs. No change is likely in Clinton prison. John B. Trombley's management there has been thoroughly investigated and reports show, it is said that the conditions in that institution are as nearly ideal as could be expected or found in any prison in the country.

Peterboro' Health Association Needs Funds For Its Work

Let the "Reception" of the Supervision Committee in Empress Hotel Dec. 29th Mean the "Reception" of a Substantial Addition to the Association Funds

It is probably an old story to tell you, that, owing to the numerous calls made upon the public of Peterborough, the Health Association has experienced very great difficulty in securing sufficient funds to carry on their work during the year 1916. While we realized that services were necessary for our people at home, at the same time we tried to interfere as little as possible with the various collections for our troops at the front. We find now, on approaching the end of our year, that we shall have an overdraft at the bank of some $200. The ladies' of the nurses' Supervision Committee very kindly offered to raise this amount before December 31st. To do this they are giving a reception in the Empress Hotel on the afternoon and evening of December 29th, and to all those who are friends and well wishers of the Health Association we appeal for support at this time, and we feel sure in making this request, we will not do it in vain.

FRIENDLY ADVICE TO BENEFICIARIES OF PATRIOTIC FUND

The following from the Patriotic Fund Journal is a copy of a letter the Galt branch of the Fund recently issued to its beneficiaries: —

"We have endeavored during the past twenty-four months to administer the benefits of this Fund to the best of our knowledge and ability, with due regard to the merits and necessities of each particular case. While errors or mistakes may have occurred, it is always a pleasure to have them pointed out and rectified.

Some of the errors are probably the outcome of an imperfect system, but many are caused by the applicants to the Fund themselves. We believe that while we strive to help those entitled to our aid, they also can do much towards helping us, and more particularly can they assist us to preserve and guard the resources of the Fund.

It is only with the knowledge that the money so given is being honourably used, that the donors will be satisfied to replenish the Fund when it is required, and we, therefore ask each and every one of you to notify us promptly of any improper receipt or improper use of the money that may come under your notice, so that no injustice can be pointed to and no reflection made in connection with the administration or use of the Fund. We wish you to feel that in this Fund you have a friend ,to whom you may come at any time for information or advice in all matters pertaining to your welfare. In all emergencies appeal to this office and not to other agencies, and always your confidence will be respected.

We expect of you that you establish and encourage a high standard of living in your neighborhood. To do this, all care should be directed to PAYMENT OF JUST DEBTS, careful spending, proper housing, regular attendance at church, the children's school attendance and a CAREFUL CHOICE OF FRIENDS and company. "The Fund will not tolerate the non-payment of bills for food and rent, and wishes to discourage the purchase of unnecessary furnishings, books and musical instruments, the payment for which may extend over a longer period than your allowance from the Fund." The Fund is for those in NEED. ALLOWANCES may at any time BE CHANGED TO SUIT THE NEEDS of the recipients, and extravagance will tend to lessen rather than increase the allowances of those who practice it.

Let us again remind you of the advisability of STARTING A SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNT and putting aside something regularly in order to accumulate a fund in case of trouble, sickness, or to make you independent when the soldier returns and is looking for work.

Any of the banks will take deposits of $1.00 or more at a time. Will you do this to-day, or will you put it off.

It is with very great pleasure we are able to tell you that of all the beneficiaries now on the Fund at this branch very few have debts of any kind and nearly all are saving against the time of re-union of their families.

We desire to extend to you the Season's Greetings with the hope that the next New Year will see the end of the World War, which is now being waged, the Safe Return of your soldier and a happy re-union for all of you."

VERY LITTLE OIL CAPTURED BY FOE

ROUMANIANS' DESTRUCTION OF THEIR WELLS WAS ALMOST COMPLETE.

London, Dec. 13.—The Times' correspondent at Roumanian headquarters, writing under the date of December 3rd, confirms the earlier though less precise reports that the Roumanians have taken measures to prevent the Central powers from utilising the oil wells in the captured territory. The correspondent writes:

"During the last week all well, refineries, oil tanks and other installations in the Prahova Valley have been destroyed in a way which renders the production of oil in this rich petroliferous region impossible. Great depots of benzine were destroyed. At Moreni, the most important oil field in Roumania from the point of view of production, the destruction was very complete in character in view of the necessity of preventing the working of the heavy oil deposits which are so necessary to the Germans, seeing that the Galcian wells yield only light oil."

Polite Policemen Lay Down the Law To Mrs. Roosevelt

VIOLATING TRAFFIC RULES SHE SUMMONS A HEADQUARTERS DETAIL WHEN SHE IS "ORDERED AROUND."

New York, December 13. — Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt and a traffic policeman at Madison avenue and Forty-fifth street, engaged in an argument over traffic regulations and politeness when Mrs. Roosevelt learned that the policeman had taken her light roadster and had run it from where she left it on to the sidewalk.

The argument ended after Mrs. Roosevelt had telephoned police headquarters from the lobby of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and demanded justice in no uncertain tones. A captain of police, a sergeant and finally the firm but polite traffic policeman helped to get the roadster off the curb and Mrs. Roosevelt drove triumphantly away.

Mrs. Roosevelt left the automobile which she drives herself, in Madison avenue, between Forty-fifth and Forty sixth streets, while she visited her mother, Mrs. Joseph Willard, at the Ritz-Carlton. It grew dark, a time for lights on automobiles, and other technical things that, according to the policeman, Mrs. Roosevelt failed to observe. So he had the light roadster run out of the way of the heavy evening traffic on to the sidewalk, and then waited for the owner.

When Mrs. Roosevelt appeared the policeman threatened her with a summons and the spectators say she grew indignant. Anyhow the next development came when she marched with her mother into the lobby of the Ritz, and from the desk telephoned for Arthur Woods, the Commissioner of Police He was out. The polite secretary who answered inquired if she had been insulted. Mrs. Roosevelt said no; she hadn't been just insulted, but the policeman had tried to "order her around."

A police captain and a sergeant finally appeared from headquarters, and heard the policeman's tale, which was just regarding the observance of regulations regarding unattended automobiles, according to the spectators. After Mrs. Roosevelt had driven away the policeman sighed wearily and went back to his post in the centre of the street intersection.

JAILED FOR 18 MONTHS REDUCED, DISMISSED

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—Court martial sentence was passed on Sergeant Major F. H. Elliott yesterday in the presence of a full parade of the officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the staff of the Base Hospital, Gerard street east, to which unit the prisoner belonged.

The sentence imposed by the officers composing the court martial and confirmed by Major-General W. A. Logie, reduced Elliott to the ranks, imposed eighteen months' imprisonment with hard labour, and dismissed him from his Majesty's service.

The charge upon which he was found guilty were, it will be recalled, that while in charge of Government stores he fraudulently diverted them to his own use — the particular instance cited being the supplying of Government food for his wedding supper on March 16, and also that he caused duly enlisted soldiers to erect for him a private garage at the residence of his mother-in-law, 90 Garden avenue.

The promulgation of the sentence yesterday was thoroughly impressive The staff were drawn up to form three sides of a square at the open end of which the prisoner and his guards stood. When his reduction to the ranks was announced, the adjutant quickly tore off the crown and stripes, the insignia of his rank, from his sleeve and let them fall in the snow.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

One of the most interesting Sunday meetings held this season was the service of December 12th when the young men were favoured with the novelty of a lady speaker Mrs. Douglas General Secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association addressed forty young men on the subject, "Shaping a Life" and the attentive hearing given her showed that her words came as an inspiration to all present. The Y.W.C.A. and the Y.M.C.A. have the most cordial relations with each other, as their objects and ideals are very similar and the appearance of the Y.W. General Secretary at a Y.M. meeting has done much to deepen the existing friendly feelings on the part of these organisations.

With other George Street folk, Y. M.C.A. officials were much concerned during the big fire at the Quaker Oats plant, for the sparks and fire brands were falling all around the Y.M.C.A. building. A few of the largest burning pieces were picked up from the front steps of the building and laid aside as souvenirs.

The Quaker Oats Company has contributed liberally to the support of the Y.M.C.A. work in Peterborough and among the soldiers at the front so the blow that this company has sustained will be felt by this Association among the other institutions of the city. The Y.M.C.A. would express sympathy for the families of the employees who were lost and to those who are doubtless thrown out of employment by this great disaster.

Three suppers are being served this week to members of leaders corps and boys' Bible classes, and next Tuesday evening junior and intermediate leaders fill commemorate the holiday season with a turkey dinner. The sedate members of the Board of Directors who hold their monthly meeting on this same evening will also pick turkey bones, while considering the final problems of the year.

The Association greatly appreciates the response on the part of its subscribers for the payment of outstanding pledges. Mr. T. W. Robinson reports that it is a pleasure to receive these payments as such a fine appreciation of the Y.M.C.A. work is held by its supporters and the public in general.

BRITISH ARMS PLANTS TO QUADRUPLE OUTPUT

Coudert Predicts hey Will be at Maximum Capacity Next Spring—Big Guns a Problem.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Frederick R. Coudert told the members of the National Security League at their meeting at the Hotel Astor that by next spring the British munition factories would be producing four times as much as at present. This was one of the things he had learned during a visit to the British and French fronts in September and October.

"You do not realise what time it takes to produce munitions in adequate quantity," he said. "I happen to know the experience of some of our manufacturers who thought they would have reached maximum in ten months, when it really took twenty-four. It takes a year to make the big guns.

"France was saved at the Marne by the seventy-fives, but the seventy-five is now a defensive weapon only. For offense the larger guns are essential, but the general result of the controversy which has been raging for some time over the general merits of very large and medium size guns has seemed to be the conclusion that guns of medium calibre are better for most purposes, and that the great guns are valuable only in exceptional circumstances.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

EVIDENCE IN AUTOMOBILE DAMAGE ACTION CONTRADICTORY IN DETAILS

Suit Developed Out of Collision on George Street Last Summer—Grand Jury Returns True Bills in Criminal Cases.

As a result of the disastrous fire at the plant of the Quaker Oats Company spreading to the Court House and gutting the court room, the sittings of the County Court and General Sessions of the Peace are in progress in the City Council Chamber. The Chamber was converted overnight into quarters that serve reasonably well for court purposes, and while some little inconvenience is suffered on account of there being no jury or witness room, yet the progress that has been made since the opening of the court yesterday at one o'clock has been substantially as satisfactory as though the hearing was taking place in the regular court room.

His Honour Judge Huycke is presiding, and in his address to the Grand Jury yesterday afternoon, he referred with his usual eloquence to the fire which consumed the stock of the Quaker Oats Company here and destroyed their plant. He touched feelingly on that phase of the fire which is preeminently the saddest of it—the snuffing out of the lives of over a dozen of the employees of the concern, and expressed his sympathy to the families to whom the blow has been the greatest, those who have lost their bread-winners in the disaster.

He referred, too, to the kindness of the city in so promptly coming to the rescue of the court with their offer of the use of the Council Chamber for court purposes; and expressed the thanks of all who were benefitted by the offer, which had been accepted. In his charge to the Grand Jury he asked them to consider the present war situation and urged them to reason among themselves and determine if anything could be done by them, or any who would be influenced by their report, to assist in the successful prosecution of the conflict.

True bills were returned against Hugh Conner, charged with theft, and against Dolly Taylor and Andrew McGee, of Asphodel, for concealment of the birth of a child.

Automobile Case.

The case of Doxsee vs. Montgomery, occupied the attention of the court from the opening yesterday afternoon, through a night session last night, up till about half past two this afternoon when the jury retired to reach a verdict.

In this action Mrs. Agnes Doxsee, of Campbellford, the widow of Lieut. Doxsee, who was killed in action in April, 1915, is suing Mr. Frank Montgomery, hotelkeeper of this city, for the sum of $312.39 for damage done to her Dodge motor car in a collision with the defendant's car on the night of August 2nd 1916. The accident occurred at the corner of George and McDonnel streets the plaintiff claiming that she was proceeding from Aylmer to George on McDonnel street, and while crossing George street, that Montgomery, coming in the opposite direction, made a short turn to go south on George street, and struck her car on the right side of the radiator. The collision broke her radiator, fender and right lamp beyond repair. Her repair bill amounted to $112.39. She also claimed $200.00 damage to her car as a result of the general depreciation in value of the car owing to the shock of the collision.

Montgomery in defence, claimed that Mrs. Doxsee was driving on the wrong side of McDonnel street, that her bright lights dazzled his eyes so that he could not see to make the turn on to George street. The result was that he started to make the turn, but stopped, and the plaintiff's car came rushing into him. His repair bill amounted to $46.00 and he claimed $50.00 for general damage to the car by way of shock. Mr. D. O'Connell acted for the plaintiff and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defendant.

Mrs. Doxsee was the first witness. She lives in Campbellford, but was visiting in Peterborough this summer, and on the night of the accident was taking the Misses McIdrum, friends of hers who reside on Water street, for a ride. The car she was driving was a Dodge, which she bought from the Campbellford agent in June, 1915, for $1163.00, including the price of some extras. On the second of August, a little after nine o'clock in the evening, she was driving from Aylmer (street) to Water street on the right hand side of the street. She was taking the Misses Lendrum home, and went as far as the corner of George street, when Montgomery's car, taking a short turn diagonally across the street, struck her car. She looked at her speedometer a minute before and she was travelling a little under ten miles an hour. Before she approached George street she slowed up and signalled. The accident happened on the south-east corner of the streets, and she was on her right side. After the accident Montgomery got out of his car and swore at the party of women in her car. She was driving with her lights dimmed. They had been dimmed all the evening and she had not changed them at any time during the drive.

Cross-examined by Mr Gordon, she said she knew that cars turning south had the right of way over cars going east and west. Her speedometer she thought, was perfectly accurate. Mrs. Weatherstone sister of Mrs. Doxsee, and the Misses Lendrum, all three of whom were with her in the car at the time of the accident, corroborated her evidence. Mrs. Weatherstone said that Mrs. Doxsee turned on the "dimmers" to lessen the light from her headlights, just before she came to the corner.

Other Witnesses.

Mrs. Hunter a neighbour of the Misses Lendrum, was at the corner and saw the accident. She said Montgomery's car was coming very fast and Mrs. Doxsee's very slow, and that Mrs. Doxsee's horn sounded as her car approached the street intersection.

Melville Doane and Kerwood Taylor, two boys who were on bicycles about half a block up George street, said they saw the accident. They testified that Mrs. Doxsee's car was going slow at the time of the accident, but that Mr Montgomery's car was going still slower.

Practically all the witnesses agreed that after the accident Mrs. Doxsee's car was slightly to the south-east of the centre of the street corner, facing in a south-easterly direction, and that Mr. Montgomery's car was facing south-west.

Mr. Montgomery.

Mr. Montgomery was the first to give evidence for the defence. He swore that Mrs. Doxsee came up to George street on the wrong side of McDonnel street, and then swung to the south side of the street while crossing George street. Her strong lights dazzled his eyes so that he was unable to proceed, so that he swung south, cutting across the corner to avoid a collision. He just got as far as the middle of the street, and had just stopped his car when the other car hit him. Jack Savage, who drives Mr. Jas. Kendry's car, and Fred Rapps, chauffeur for Mr. R. R. Hall gave evidence as to the position of the cars after the accident. Both agreed that the cars were very near the middle of the street, and that the front of Mrs. Doxsee's car was a few feet east of the street car track, while the south side of her car was a few feet south of the manhole.

Stanley Kingdon, cooper, who resides on Barnardo avenue, saw the accident. He was driving south on George street just in front of the Methodist church. Mrs. Doxsee's car came along the north (the wrong side) of McDonnel street and then swung south, while Mr. Montgomery's car came west along the north side of the street and then swung south. The cars clashed just about the middle of the road.

Bert Duffus was driving in his Ford on George street in front of the Library when the accident happened. He said Mrs. Doxsee was on the wrong side of McDonnel street. Mr. M. Pappas also gave evidence as to the accident and the position of the cars afterwards.

In addressing the jury Mr. O'Connel and Mr. Gordon emphasized the salient features of the evidence for their respective clients and left the matter in the jury's hands.

JURY SAW WOUNDED IN HOSPITAL VISIT

In their visit to St. Joseph's Hospital this afternoon the Grand Jurors saw eight of the wounded from Monday's fire. One or two of them are at present almost beyond recognition with facial and head burns. Swathed in bandages only the eyes and mouths of some of the men appear.

JAMES W. NORTHEY JUMPED FROM WINDOW HARRISON HELD ON

It was a matter of mistaken identity that led to the statement in yesterday's issue that it was James W Northey Stewart street who hung from a window sill, of the high up window on the east side of the burning building for twelve minutes. It was Thomas Harrison, who clung to the window. Mr. Northey had a mere serious experience. Finding that he was shut off by flames from two fire escapes, he jumped the length of three stories to the ground roof of a building below and was seriously injured, and is still seriously ill at his home, Stewart street.

Mr. Harrison clung to a large hook in a window sill on the east side for more than twelve minutes. "I couldn't unfasten my hands" he said, "when a fireman climbed up a ladder to me. I made up my mind that I would hang to the window until the wall tumbled. I was very sore about the arms and waist all day Tuesday."

COST OF TEA RAPIDLY INCREASING.

The recent advance of five cents a pound by no means represents the increased cost of the fine teas used in "SALADA." The markets have advanced from six to ten cents a pound and the freight rates jumped two and one half cents a pound in the past two months. Whatever prices these untrollable conditions may warrant, however, you may rely on the quality of "SALADA" remaining exactly the same as ever.

It is never proper for a girl to sit on a young man's knee without securing his permission.

After a young man has been married about six weeks he begins to notice how much his wife resembles her mother.

BELGIUM'S LAMENT.

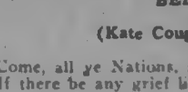
(Kate Coughlan, in New York Times.)

Come, all ye Nations, and see
If there be any grief like unto my grief!
For the abomination of desolation hath come upon me;
My enemy hath encompassed me about;
My temples he hath laid low.
And my habitations made desolate.
Where, indeed, are my daughters and my sons?
Scattered to the winds of the wide heaven!
And WHY? In that I have kept the word
I spake before the Lord God.
Lo, as a sparrow, solitary on the housetop,
Do I look forth on a land of desolation,
And, like Rachel of old, weep for them that are not.
But the Lord is Just, He will deliver me from the oppressor,
Who hath known not compassion on the afflicted!
Yea, though I be broken on the potter's wheel,
Yet will I say, as Israel of old,
The Lord is Just and Merciful.
He will hear the cry of the poor and them that are in bondage,
And again will I lift my head among the Nations.
But, O ye my children that are not,
Yet must I weep for you, now and forever.
Come, ye Nations, and see
If there be any grief like unto my grief!

JOHN KEMP LEFT FOR LUMBER CAMP

Friends Had Believed Him Lost in the Fire

It was definitely learned to-day that Wilbert Kemp, included in yesterday's missing list of Quaker Oats Co. employees, was not engaged with the Company, but had instead left on Monday morning to work in a lumbering camp. On leaving his boarding house Monday morning he stated that he was going to the Quaker Oats factory to get a job. Hence, when he did not return, the conclusion was formed that he had secured work and was lost in the fire. Friends reported to-day that they had traced him to a lumber camp. He is a relative of Mr. John Kemp, who is seriously injured.



The members of Otonabee Lodge I. O. O. F No. 13, are requested to meet in their lodge room, Cor. George and Hunter Streets, to-night at 8 p. m., to make arrangements for the funeral of the late Rev. Samuel Fee, a member of Newdale Lodge, Manitoba. W. F. Skitch, N. G.

Many Things Prevent War's Early Closing

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW YORK, December 13.—The bulk of editorial opinion of American newspapers to-day seems to be that peace may have been brought nearer by Germany's proposals, but that many things stand in the way of the early ending of the war.

The Philadelphia Ledger says: "Germany apparently is playing not so much for peace as for the conciliation of neutral opinion."

Central Powers Are Counting on Neutrals

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, December 13.—The Central Powers are counting upon neutrals of the world to play an important part in influencing the Entente Allies to talk peace terms, it was declared at the Germany Embassy to-day. Whatever peace terms are suggested now might perhaps be interpreted as "what Germany would like to get, not what she expects to get," it was said.

Actual peace terms are less important now than necessity of getting a conference, German officials said to-day. Any terms which may be suggested now would simply be "talking terms," it was emphasized. The real peace terms, officials pointed out could only be evolved after a long discussion between parties interested.

J. G. Wing Disappears

Six Automobile Parties Hunt for him all Night and Day in Vain.

KITCHENER, Dec. 13.—J. G. Wing, a well-known and successful real estate agent of this city, mysteriously disappeared Monday night, and has not been seen or heard of since. He left his home at 7.30 o'clock stating that he would return at 9 o'clock. Not receiving any message from him, the family became anxious and asked the police to call at the office. Mr. Wing could not be found, and during the night six automobiles made search of the city and vicinity, which was continued yesterday without success. It is supposed that he lost his memory and he wandered away to some place as yet unknown. He has not been in the best of health during the last few days. The search is still in progress.

ONE DOOR SOUTH FROM GRAND HOTEL

COURT HOUSE WAS REGARDED AS INVULNERABLE TO FIRE FROM SOURCE OUTSIDE THE BUILDING

When a section of the wall in the ruins of the County Court House settled this morning it snapped the steam pipes in the neighbourhood of what was formerly Mr. Ed Elliott's office, emitting steam through the pile of debris. Yesterday workmen had hurriedly boarded up the exposed sections of the main corridor on the ground floor to prevent the freezing of the steam pipes and late in the afternoon the heat was turned on. It radiated through the jail, which entirely escaped the fire, through Sheriff Hall's offices, which were untouched except by water, and through the residences of Mr. Ray and Mr. Nesbitt, on the south side. It was felt that the precautions were sufficient to safeguard the operation of the heating system, but the sinking of a wall was a contingency that had not been anticipated. Hence, it is likely that all the north half of the Court House will have to be shut off from heat.

Extent of Damage.

A grim irony of the Court House blaze was the fact that the roof was covered with sheated galvanized iron and yet it was in the roof that the fire gained a footing. The tiny brand from the Quaker Oats buildings lodged in a wooden crevice in the eaves at the north east corner of the centre section of the old pile and ate its way under the tin roofing. This was the only join in the fire proof armour of the building. Its walls were of thick stone and the roof was sheeted. The only vulnerable point was in the wooden eaves and apparently the first cinder to lodge there doomed the building.

The flames swept under the roof, and across the wide court room, and it was to this section the destruction was confined. Both wings to north and south of this section escaped damage, except from smoke and water. The court house floor fell obliquely through toward the main door, but the long corridor is free of debris. The rear of the court room came through fairly intact, but it was only at the rear. The flames apparently swept across and downward, but the thick walls on the north and south sides of the room saved the adjoining sections. The lawyers' room, the County Council room, the grand jury room and the offices underneath, except the County Clerk's, and on the north side, the Judge's chamber and law library, are practically untouched, except for the deluge of water that pours through them. Most of the dry volumes in the law library are frozen together in their stacks, and many of them are beyond salvage.

Temporary Office.

County Clerk Elliott is occupying a temporary office in Mr. Ray's residence. The vault is regarded as untouched. As yet there is nothing definite about the probable reconstruction of the Court House or when the work will be commenced. It is felt, however, that the court room and offices will be remodelled. None of the judges, visiting and resident, had a good word for the old court room, its general style of architecture and its limited ventilation.

Carrying Flask of Liquor Unlawful in Ontario

Carrying a flask of liquor is now determined to be unlawful, in the first test case. The judgment of a Hamilton Magistrate, in which William Williams of that city was fined $200.00 for carrying a flask, was upheld by Chief Justice Falconbridge, who says his brother Judges agree with his view. "Section 41 of the Ontario temperance act," his Lordship states, "is as wide as language can well be, and by section 85 the burden of proving the right to have, keep or sell or give liquor shall be the person accused of improperly having, etc., such liquor. This was a question for the Magistrate. He was convicted, and it cannot be said that there was no evidence upon which he could convict."

Williams had been on a trip to Niagara Falls, N.Y., and on returning to Hamilton brought with him a flask. He treated a friend to such an extent that the latter came within the clutches of the police, who also looked with suspicion upon Williams. An examination was deemed advisable whereupon the partially emptied flask was discovered.

Treed By Wolves; Almost Zero Weather

TIMBER CRUISERS CHASED BY FEROCIOUS PACK ON HAWK BAY

Port Arthur, Ont., Dec. 13 — Pursued by a pack of fifty ferocious timber wolves, Messrs. J. Greer, a timber contractor, and J. Merrifield of Port Arthur, who were timber cruising on one of Mr. Greer's limits in the Dog Lake district, were compelled to spend last Thursady night in a tree in almost zero weather.

They were crossing the ice on Hawk Bay, about fifty miles from Port Arthur, about dusk, when the wolves appeared over the brow of the hill and gave chase to them, compelling them to seek safety in a tree near the edge of lake. After remaining beneath the tree for ten hours the wolves moved away at dawn, and allowed the men who were numbed and stiffened as a result of exposure, to proceed to the camp. They arrived in the city this morning and stated that the wolves appeared to be fiercer this year than they have ever been before, as this is very early in the season for an incident of this nature. Old-timers opine that there must be a scarcity of the game upon which these animals prey, and that the wolves will be a source of much danger during the winter.

For All Complexion Ills

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red, blotchy, chapped or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary mercolized wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion—absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, clear, spotless, daily, satisfy soft and beautiful. One ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggist, will rejuvenate even the worst complexion. Is to used like cold cream.

CANADA, MY CANADA

Song Rights Reserved to Canadian Red Cross Society.

From rising sun to setting sun,
From Northern snows to south,
Thy loyal sons have gathered O,
A host of gallant youth,
Canada, my Canada!
On Flemish plains, on Turkish shores,
On Egypt's burning sands,
They've poured their blood like water O,
In far and foreign lands,
Canada, my Canada!
O let the royal challenge ring,
O let the world be shown,
The ranks have poured their mettle O,
Where'er brave men are known,
Canada, my Canada!
In honour's cause were they sent forth
Nor honour will they yield;
On land and sea, 'fore field and foe
They bear a spotless shield.
Canada, my Canada!
O when at last the fight is won,
Thy heroes gathered home,
The red lips of thy lasses O,
Reward them as they come,
Canada, my Canada!
And for thy sons returning not,
Whom death shall keep away
From all thy love and longing O,
Then bend the knee and pray,
Canada, my Canada!
Their laurels be a crown to thee
In all thine after years:
High honours for the living O,
And for the dead, thy tears,
Canada, my Canada!

Retires After Long Service With the C.P.R.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 13.—Mr. W. R. Baker, Secretary to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and assistant to the President, has at his own request been relieved from his duties and placed on the retired list. Interviewed yesterday Lord Shaughnessy, President of the C.P.R. said: "Mr. Baker's association with the Company dated from its inception in 1881. In 1893 he resigned to become general manager of the Manitoba and Northwestern Railway and in 1900, when that railway was acquired by this company Mr. Baker returned to the service as executive agent at Winnipeg. His assistance in straightening out the affairs of the acquired property was material value and his other duties many of them of a most important and confidential character were performed with a singular zeal and intelligence. After these thirty-five years of association, Mr. Baker retires with the confidence, good will and best wishes of the Directors and his brother officers. Mr. Baker's personal relations with Mr. Baker were of a most intimate and agreeable character and I hope sincerely that he will for a long period enjoy the rest and recreation to which he is entitled after more than half a century in business life". Mr. E. Alexander, formerly assistant secretary to the company succeeds Mr. Baker.

BALM.

I, when I fought in battles as a boy—
Not without gallantry and blood and pain—
Came home to you, my mother, showed my wound—
Soon 'twould be well again!
You bound the kerchief on the poor sore place:
'Spite of the twinges how my pride would swell;
You guessed my cause was just and held me brave,
And—kissed the poor place well.

I, that have fought in sterner battles now,
I have come home, O England, I thy son:
Ease thy sick pain with laughter—as of old
Let questionings be done!
You will not ask me how and when and where,
And every detail of my woes to tell;
Only your silent solace and your cheer
Shall "kiss the poor place well."

VIOLET ARRAY FOR GIANTS.

Same Gay Uniform Worn When Last Pennant Was Won Adopted for 1917.

The Giants next season will blossom out in violet uniforms, the same kind that they wore in 1913 when they last won the pennant. The Giants have not won since they adopted the uniforms which are cross-stripped and resemble the garb worn in institutions of involuntary confinement.

The new home uniforms which were decided on yesterday, will be white with violet pin stripes, violet and white stockings, and white caps with violent trimmings. Perhaps, the most gorgeous touch of colour in the make-up of Manager McGraw's club will be the new sweater jackets, which will be royal purple. The road uniforms will be blue and gray with violet stockings.

Besides deciding on their haberdashery for next season, the New York Club yesterday also snared a new pitcher. They signed Sterling Stryker, an ambitious young man who made quite a name for himself last year striking out batsmen at Atlantic Highlands. He was discovered by Andy Coakley.

and the traditions of the various Highland Regiments both in Canada and in the Old Country has been such as to form a glorious inspiration for the men who join the 253rd Highlanders. The kilts will be issued to recruits immediately on enlistment, they look attractive, but they look cold for a Canadian winter. In real fact, however, they are warmer than the more usual tronser and a special knitted knee-cap may be worn if desired.

Kipling says somewhere, "The Irish are great fighters, but give me a Highland Regiment under Presbyterian officers." In the case of this particular battalion, however, there is no such limitation on the creed of the officers for all that is asked of them is that they shall be first-class men and of good British stock: many are graduates of the university while many again have no connection with Queen's, but are men "under the tongue of good report" Queen's men too, are coming in hoping for promotion to non-commissioned rank and this is a most hopeful point about this battalion. Every old soldier will tell you that the backbone of a regiment is the N.C.O's it is they who set the tone and keep up ideals of work and discipline for all the men; with therefore a high moral and intellectual level among the N.C.O.'s of this battalion, our parents who send forth of their best for the Empire need have no fears as to the building up of the character of their sons who enlist in this University unit.

LIEUT. BROKENSHIRE HERE

Lieut. M. C. Brokenshire, who holds an overseas appointment in this unit came to Peterborough last evening and is staying at the Empress Hotel. Already several local young men of splendid type have talked the prospects over with him. He leaves on the late train this evening for Lindsay and will return to Peterborough on Monday.

Those desirous of seeing him can do so at the hotel. It is a good opportunity to hear about this University Kilties unit, which is the only organisations of its kind in Canada to-day.

At any time, all information can be obtained by addressing a letter to the Adjutant, 253rd (Queen's University) Highland Battalion, 187 Princess Street, Kingston, Ont.

Stanley, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and is now in France with an Eastern Ontario battalion, states that he and three other former non-coms. of the 93rd have received their three stripes back since going to France. The others mentioned are Bergin, Lewington Musgrave and Wagstaff. They had to reduce to the ranks before leaving England, but their ability has apparently been quickly recognized on their arrival in France. Sergt. Stanley writes: "We left the base last Saturday and were travelling until Tuesday. We stopped at two rest camps for a couple of hours, but of course I can't tell you where."

Driver Douglas Coone, a Peterborough boy with the 26th Battery, has the following to say of Y.M.C.A. work at the front:

I don't know what we would do if it was not for the Y.M.C.A. They certainly are a life-saver when you come in at night, likely wet and muddy; you can slip over to the 'Y' and get a cup of hot cocoa and a little package of biscuits; you can also buy all kinds of canned goods and everything a general store keeps.

DYNAMITED CORNER QUAKER OATS OFFICE

At 11.40 to-day a charge of dynamite tumbled over the ragged remnant of the south east corner of the Quaker Oats Office. It crumpled up fell in a heap and splashed across Hunter street. City Engineer Parsons regarded it as a menace to the bridge.

DIED IN HOSPITAL

been recovered, although a force of men has been engaged in the search. About 4 o'clock yesterday the body of Mr. Thomas Parsons, Chamberlen street, was found in the debris, outside of the boiler room. The unfortunate man had evidently been wheeling a barrow full of coke, and was along the outside wall when it collapsed on top of him, burying him deep in the ruins. Electric lights were strung up last night and for a part of the night the men were hard at work, renewing their efforts to-day. It is expected that some of the bodies in the boiler room may be found quickly, but the others will be very hard to get, so huge is the pile of ruins.

Intense Heat.

This afternoon a squad of firemen were engaged in pouring water on the ruins with a view of cooling the debris off. The heat in the basement of the plant was so intense as to cause the wreckage to be enveloped in a cloud of steam. A line of hose was also employed at the north end of the warehouse building. The two end sections of this building are still standing. The building is six stories high and of fire-proof construction. The centre part fell in the day of the fire and the remainder of the building will have to be taken down. This will be a job for a professional wrecker, and a few sticks of dynamite. The building is badly warped and is regarded as a menace to workmen and others employed on the scene of the disaster.

The Canadian Leonard Construction Company have commenced the erection of an office building on the south side of the road. This Company had just completed the construction of two stories that were added to the fire-proof warehouse. The building, which originally was four stories high became a six-storey structure this summer.

WAR'S EFFECT IN EAST END.

Welfare Workers Find Condition of London's Poor Improved.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Welfare workers in the great East End report that families in that district have suffered much less than might have been expected from the high cost of food.

The "sixpenny meal," which formerly included threepence worth of meat, a penny's worth of green vegetables, a penny's worth of bread, is, however, a thing of the past. Fish and eggs are now unattainable luxuries. But the housekeepers buy more beans and cereals than they formerly did, and, as always, they buy great quantities of bread.

Most of these families would feel the pinch severely were it not for the fact that the women are all at work. And welfare workers insist that the work which the East End women are doing has in many cases been a great boon to them physically as well as financially. One fragile woman, for instance, is lifting heavy sacks in a flour mill; others are screening coal and handling eight tons to every five tons formerly handled by the men they have replaced. In addition, these women are doing their housework and caring for their children at hours when a man would be done for the day. The reasons given for their fitness are significant. As one report phrases it, "they are now earning enough to feed themselves properly, and they are freed for the first time from the weekly worry of providing food for Friday and Saturday from an empty purse."

OBITUARY

JOSEPHINE CALDERONE.

Josephine Marian, the infant daughter of Mani and Rosina Calderone died last night at Mr. Calderone's residence, 617 George street, after a short illness. Many beautiful floral offerings were received from friends of Mr. and Mrs. Caderone. The funeral will take place this afternoon.

REV. SAM. M. FEE.

At the late residence, the Manse, in New Liskeard, Ont., the Rev. Samuel M. L. Fee passed to his reward on Tuesday, 12th inst., at 6 a.m.

The late Mr. Fee had just completed a pastorate of almost fifteen years at Newdale, Man., and had completed 21 years in the work of the ministry. He arrived at New Liskeard about the 1st of December, to take charge of the Presbyterian Church there, to which he had been recently called, and was to have been inducted on the 6th inst. He was taken with heart failure on the preceding Monday and passed away yesterday, as above stated.

His was a life of strenuous activity and painstaking care in every detail, always considering duty a privilege. He wore out in the work he loved, which doubtless contributed to his early demise at the age of 64. He believed it was not necessary for him to live, but it was necessary for him to be up and about his Master's work.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, Miss Effie Best, formerly of this city, his sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Longmore of Campbellford, his three brothers, the Rev. Jno. Fee of Portland, Oregon; Rev. Wm. Fee of Treherne, Man., and Dr. Donald Fee, who enlisted for service and is now in England.

The remains were brought here today to Mrs. V. Best's residence, 200 Brock street, where the funeral services will take place to-morrow at 2 p.m.

FUNERAL OF WALTER HOLDEN

The funeral of the late Walter Holden, one of the Quaker Oats fire victims, was held this afternoon, at 2.30 from the Mark Street Methodist church.

EPOCHAL CHANGE NOW LOOMING UP IN RUSSIA

Demand for a "Responsible Ministry" Becoming General for the First time Reflects the Popular Voice—Great Patriotic Outbursts Against German Influence in High Quarters.

THE NEXT MOVE

PETROGRAD, Dec. 14.—The swift procession of political events which has been making a new chapter in Russian history has come to a temporary halt, awaiting the final decision of the government. The present situation is as follows.

A majority of both Parliamentary chambers, for the first time in their existence, presents a united front against the government and a series of extraordinarily sensational accusations against the present Cabinet and disclosures of government inefficiency and corrupt influences have been crystalized into the more dignified shape of a demand for a ministry which can be supported by the legislative bodies and the public opinion of the nation.

Both chambers are firm in their insistence upon not merely a changed personnel in the ministry, but the final elimination of those "dark forces" which formed the topic of so many impassioned utterances in the Duma and the Imperial Council.

It is impossible to go closely into details, but the present upheaval can be understood in outline as a tremendously patriotic protest against the efforts of the German party and all other influences which have attempted to interfere with the successful prosecution of the war.

The last word has apparently been said in both chambers. Half of the Extreme Right faction in the Duma has seceded from the party since the scandal caused by the insult offered President Rozianko by the Reactionist deputy, Maroff, and the Imperial Council, reflecting for the first time in its history the popular voice, has, by an overwhelming majority, allied itself with the Duma. The next move will undoubtedly be made by the Government. In the meantime, pleas new to Russia for a "responsible ministry" are heard everywhere, and the newspapers print long articles anticipating the new regime, which is regarded as inevitable. A rumour is current to the effect that the change in the Cabinet will not be announced before the solemn assembling of both Houses in the winter palace.

Chancellor's Speech Will Be Scrutinized For Hidden Meanings

Premier Briand of France Sounds a Note of Warning—Allies Will Not Make the Peace That Germany Craves.

THE FIRST SHOCK

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The caution "watch out, take care," sounded by Premier Briand, in his address to the French Chamber of Deputies, "will also be Britain's guidance in continuing the German peace proposals."

After the first shock of the news of Germany's peace plan, and the first and instantaneous decision to reject it, there came to-day, with the strengthening of this determination not to make the peace that Germany craves. It is the belief that England and her Allies ought closely to examine the circumstances of the Teutonic move.

Britain and her Allies, therefore, intend to reject the peace proposals, but before that rejection they intend to scrutinize every word in the note, and the Chancellor's speech for hidden meanings, and to weigh all circumstances of its delivery carefully.

PEACE TERMS WERE NOT DISCUSSED IN THE REICHSTAG

Some of the Members Sought a Debate on the Peace Proposal—German Papers are Not Confident—Do not Believe Allies are Likely to Accept Peace Offer.

NO MEDIATION ASKED

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—If Germany's bid for peace is rejected by the entente powers, it is certain the Central Empires will not take the initiative again to end the war. The hopes of the German people for peace are whole-hearted, but if the present proposal is scorned, the rejection of the plan for discussion of terms would serve to cement the Empire even more fully in its determination and to dispel talk and speculation which has been current.

SILLY THREATENINGS.

Berlin newspapers were not sanguine that the peace proffer will be accepted, although applauding the Chancellor's steps. The comment of editor Theodore Wolff, of the Tageblatt, is typical.

"If the opposing Governments should decline the peace overtures or disdain them as a sign of weakness and suffering, the people will once more ask themselves whether they are not being driven senselessly and without urgent need to new sacrifices, and renewed massacres. The German people, if their opponents' answer is negative, will see clearly it is their duty to bear the heavy burden, or heavier burdens, as long as there is no possibility of agreeing upon an acceptable and sensible peace."

Die Post warns the entente "if German's hand is refused, her fist will be felt with increased force." The editorial also suggests that Germany's own peace offers indicate there is no necessity of neutral nations' offers for peace.

WON'T DISCUSS TERMS.

The speech of the Chancellor before the Reichstag was not marked by a single expression of dissent, while the significant passages were greeted with hearty bravos and cheers. It was noticeable, however, that Count Friedrich Von Westarp, the Conservative leader, and others of his following, sat silent and unmoved even when the galleries and newspaper men joined demonstratively in the applause.

When the Chancellor had concluded his speech, an attempt was made to force an immediate debate by the annexation bloc under Major Ernest Bassermann, leader of the National Liberals, and Count Westarp, supported by the Extreme Specialists. This move was firmly resisted by the leaders of the moderate parties who agreed with the Chancellor that a general discussion of possible peace conditions, before the attitude of the enemy powers was made known, would only injure the cause of peace and place Germany at a diplomatic disadvantage. Their attitude was that if the central powers exposed all their cards before peace negotiations began, they would be placed at a disadvantage.

The indefinite adjournment of the Reichstag by its own decision leaves the Government a free hand to conduct further negotiations, and is regarded as tantamount to a vote of confidence.

NO MEDIATION ASKED

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—A News Agency despatch from Berlin says:

Germany has not asked neutral powers to start peace negotiations. The American Embassy's understanding is that she has merely asked neutral powers to inform the nations of the entente that the central powers are willing to discuss peace—putting up to the allies the acquiescence or refusal of the tender.

Allies Will Demand The Following Peace Terms

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 14. — British Allies will demand the following terms for peace: The restoration of North France, Belgium, Poland, Serbia, and Roumania, with full indemnity to all. Restoration of Alsace, Lorraine, to France, and the ceding of the Constantinople Straits to Russia. Full indemnity to all the Allies for destroyed shipping and heavy punishment for all responsible for atrocities.

Provide For a Million Men By March 31st

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A War Office supplementary estimate to-day provides for an additional million men of all ranks in the army for the year ending March 31, 1917, making a total of five million for that twelve-months' period.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, Dec. 14.—By a vote of 314 to 166 the Government is voted full confidence. Premier Briand derides the peace proposals.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Butter prices have received a setback during the past week. Montreal quotes choicest creamery at 43c wholesale with seconds 41c. It looks like the end of the butter tether. Compare these figures and those locally quoted with New York's as follows: "The finest creamery butter is 2c still lower this week, at 37c to 38. Below that, the price is from 33c up to 36 1-2c per pound. Dairy butter is 36c to 37c per pound; and storage stuff from 30c to 34c per pound."

CREAM AT TORONTO.

The cream market is about holding its own, in line with the butter market. There is no apparent change in view from last month's values, when the Toronto Creamery paid 47c per pound net for butter fat. While there is a low ebb in the amount of cream shipped and some shippers who have been sending cream for four or five years are now sending less than ever before in all that time, still some new shipers are turning up since the cheese factories have closed. Sweet cream is unchanged at 50c per pound of fat, delivered at Toronto, according to the Toronto Creamery Co.

"Toronto cream men seem bound to have it at any price," says an Eastern creamery man, referring to cream.

TORONTO'S MILK.

The Sun says: "While there has been an agitation for $2.35 per 100 pounds for milk delivered to the dairies at Toronto, there is much opposition to the rise on the part of the smaller dairies, who protest that they will not be able to pay it. One of the large dairies is said to have expressed an inclination to pay an advance for the purpose of securing new customers, but the rumour is not confirmed.

"The present expense of milk, and the agitation on the other hand, for economy in its use, has led to a decrease in its use. The householders have been economising as far as possible, in order that the famine be not oppressive. In this they are fostered by the dairymen who would much rather be able to supply all their customers than to have to refuse them, as has so often occurred, even in the case of the big concerns."

EGGS UNCHANGED.

Live hogs are quoted at $11.40 locally this week. The grain markets have been steady of late.

WM. MACKINTOSH DEAD

SCHOOL INSPECTOR IN HASTINGS MORE THAN 40 YEARS—ONCE PRESIDENT O.E.A.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 13.—William Mackintosh, former Inspector of Public Schools for North Hastings, and later of Centre Hastings, died at his home in Madoc, aged seventy-two years. He was smitten with a cerebral hemorrhage and death resulted in a few minutes. He became Inspector in 1873, and resigned in June 1915. Before that he was Principal of the Public School at Campbellford. He was a Presbyterian, a Liberal, and an ardent temperance worker. During the campaign of the Committee of One Hundred he was Chairman for the county of Hastings.

As an educationalist he will be long remembered. He was at one time President of the Ontario Educational Association. His success in detached sections of Northern Hastings, where schools were few and some were very poor, was remarkable. At the close of his inspectoral career the teachers of Centre Hastings and many old friends raised to pay him the tribute of a complimentary banquet. Members of his family are well-known educationalists.

ONE MORE BODY RECOVERED

Death List Now Stands at Eight With Nine Missing

This morning the body of James Foster was recovered from the ruins of the Quaker Oats Company's plant. This brings the known death list up to eight and leaves the missing list at nine, making a total of seventeen with a number of severely injured men in the two local hospitals. The work of removing the debris in order to facilitate the search for bodies continued throughout the night. More extensive operations are contemplated to-day and to-morrow, when several parts of the building now standing will be levelled by the use of dynamite.

MAKING IT PLAIN.

A common mistake which some people continue to make is to accept from a druggist an "extract" of cod liver thinking they will get the benefits of an emulsion of cod liver oil.

The difference is very great. An "emulsion" contains real cod liver oil, which has had the hearty endorsement of the medical profession for many years, while an "extract" is a product which contains no oil and is highly alcoholic.

Scott's Emulsion is the standard emulsion of the world. It guarantees the highest grade of real cod liver oil, skilfully blended with glycerine and hypophosphites, and is endorsed by good physicians everywhere.

Wheat Markets Very Erratic

Yesterday's Market Was Purely Speculative—The Cattle Market

CATTLE MARKETS

Receipts at the Toronto Union Stock Yards yesterday were 109 cars, made up of 1,371 cattle, 140 calves, 3,421 hogs, 868 sheep and lambs.

There was a moderately heavy run for the midweek market, with a fair proportion of good loads of butcher steers and heifers. The extra choice Christmas beef cattle are now becoming scarce, with only an odd steer or heifer here and there which sells anywhere from $10 to $11. Choice butcher lands are steady to firm from $9.50 to $9.50, and fair to good loads steady around $7.75 to $8.25. Common to medium are not taken quite so readily, but hold about steady from $6.75 to $7.50. Canners and cutters steady to firm.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs steady.

Fair demand for good stockers and feeders, but prices are a little high for anything with fat on.

Wilson Will Keep Off The Grass

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON Dec. 14.—Should Premier Lloyd George, next Tuesday, express to parliament and the world a willingness to at least discuss Germany's peace proposals President Wilson will offer his services in the situation, his closest advisers said to-day.

On the contrary if Lloyd George continues his policy of fighting to a "knockout," the President probably will keep aloof or limit his expression to a hope that the present opening may develop into a serious consideration of peace soon.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

CHAPTER XII.

An hour later Mrs. Haswell sat before the cheval glass of her dressing table. Her dark hair, loosened now from its coils, cascaded abundantly over her white shoulders. She was thinking, and the charmingly chiseled lips and brow here in the privacy of her own room wore a rather calculating and somewhat satisfied smile. No note of contrition or self accusation marred their serenity. A knock on the door interrupted her reverie and with a smothered exclamation of annoyance she glanced at the clock and rose.

"May I come in a moment?" Her husband's voice was a shade thicker than usual and his face still wore the somber expression which seemed so out of place there.

"It's almost two o'clock, Len." There was an uninviting coolness in the quality of Loraine's tone—almost a protest. "Won't to-morrow do?" She stood still, holding the door only a few inches ajar.

"I won't keep you up long," he assured her.

"I am very tired."

Len Haswell laid his hand on the knob and opened the door in spite of her unwelcome. "If you please," he said quietly. He came in and lighted a cigarette, then he inquired with an unaccustomed irony, "What tired you Loraine? You did not seem to be dancing much."

His wife shrugged her shoulders. Beyond that she failed to reply.

The big man came over and took both her hands in his own with a half-savage affection. "Loraine," he said pleadingly, "I wanted to dance with you to-night. I searched high and low, but I could not find you. For my part, I have spent a very dreary evening."

"You know, Len," she casually reminded him, "you and I can't dance together. I'm a fair dancer and you are a very good one, but together we can not manage it. There were plenty of other girls, weren't there?"

The man's face for an instant appeared to work spasmodically, and in pain, then it grew dark. "For me Loraine, there is never any other girl. You know that. Why do you avoid me as if I were a pestilence? Why can't you sometimes be the girl you used to be? Presumably you married me because you wanted to. You had better offers, richer lovers. Have I changed so much in five years—and if not, what in God's name has changed you?"

She withdrew her hands from his, and sat again in the chair before the mirror. "Len," she said with a touch of petulance in her voice, "you get into grouches and spur your imagination to all sorts of absurdities. I'm very sleepy. Why can't you reserve your fault-finding until to-morrow?"

Len Haswell answered quietly, but obdurately. "For two reasons. In the first place, I shan't be able to sleep unless you answer me. In the second place I shall probably see as much of you to-morrow as I have to-day—which is nothing." His tone hardened. "You are too tired to give me a few minutes, but you found it both possible and agreeable to give Paul Burton the entire evening."

"Oh," she laughed easily and with well simulated amusement, "I should fancy from the contemptuous things I have heard you men say about Paul, you would regard him as quite harmless."

"Paul!" repeated the man accusingly. "When did you begin calling him by his first name? Does he call you Loraine, too?"

"Why not? We are friends." She looked up at her husband's face with an air of injured innocence and he paced a turn or two across the floor before he halted before her.

"I wish that you would see less of him. I don't want to talk business to you often. It bores you, but you know that we are always strained to hold the pace that richer members of our set cut out. We have to pay very high for a privilege which has no value to me except that you like it."

Loraine Haswell sighed—and masked a yawn behind a small uplifted hand. "I wonder," she mused as though to herself, yet quite loud enough to be heard, "why some men find it so hard to make money and to others it seems so easy."

Len Haswell flushed brick red to his cheek bones. He bit his lip and forced himself to remain silent for a moment, then he spoke gently. "I'm sorry I am not as brilliant a financier as some others. Nature does not endow us all alike. A good many people would regard me as fairly successful, I dare say. For myself a small house on the Sound would be good enough, if you were there—"

"Thank you," she answered with deliberate cruelty, "I don't think I'd care for that."

The man's scowl became ominously black. The hands at his side twitched and the temper which few credited him because of his perpetual control, flared out.

"No, by the Almighty, you would rather perish to be where the goods of life are pleasure and extravagance and selfish indulgence! Where the loyal love of a husband means less than the flatteries of a tame cat—"

"Forgive me," he implored, "I didn't mean that. But I am distraught and financial affairs are very precarious, Loraine. We may stand on the brink of a disastrous panic. It lies in Hamilton Burton's power to make me or break me—absolutely. Don't you see what that means?"

His wife shook her head. "I'm afraid that I don't understand the intricacies of finance." Her tone added that neither was she extravagantly interested in them.

"It means this," Haswell spoke gravely. "You have been seen with Paul Burton more perhaps than is advisable. Paul Burton is Hamilton Burton's brother—he is the one man with whom I can't afford to quarrel."

"I haven't suggested you quarreling with him."

"Then please don't drive me to it."

"Again I say that you are letting your imagination make you the victim of absurdities. Or just what are you accusing me?"

He came over and took her hand. "I am not accusing you of anything. I am willing to let my honour rest in your hands, but I am warning you against innocent mistakes."

He sought to put his arm about her but she slipped from his grasp, and after a moment he said, "Good night" with a sort of sullen resignation, and went out, closing the door noiselessly after him.

* * * * * *

Jefferson Edwardes had tramped far—when Mary Burton had gone to her own rooms, he had plunged into the thickets slopes of the hills, and had walked for hours. Since his long exile in the White Mountains he had always held to the idea that a man can think more clearly close to the rocks and under the open skies. Just now he wanted an untinged clarity to attend to his thoughts.

Although the occurrences of the evening had possessed an Arabian Night's quality of unreality, he felt no misgivings for the late he had announced and pledged. It was not as though he had looked back on a record of broken promises. He had no troubling memories to sweep from his conscience before his heart should be clear for a new entry. He had come away from the mountains with something hermit-like in his nature, and much of the idealistic. It had been a pleasanter thing to him to keep unsullied the more important dreams of life than to endanger them with the transitory pleasures of the philander. The Mary Burton he had known in the dilapidated farm house had of course been nothing more than a picturesque little waif of the country-side. Yet she had been a memory that remained distinct through years in New York and Russia, a memory which his imagination had quickened into life. Of Hamilton Burton's spectacular successes his world of banking and finance had given him cognizance but only such interest as one accedes to matters of impersonal news.

So a curiosity had arisen in his mind to see this young woman to whom he had once played the fairy prince and since he was a whimsical man that curiosity had woven and twisted itself into a dream. A dream long entertained may become something more than a dream. Perhaps it may be a menace. About their meeting to-night had been so much of the fortuitous that he might regard the whole affair as one operated from the knees of the gods and disclaim responsibility.

The house windows had darkened one by one by the time his tramp ended again at Haverly Lodge. The moon was near the western timber fringe of the mountains but Mary Burton still wide-eyed and wakeful had slipped out of her room to the balcony by her window.

The stone coping where she sat was partly black with shadow and partly platinum gray with the last of the moonlight. Her hair, falling in two heavy braids, caught the glistening light and her lips were parted in a smile. "It is strange," she told herself, "that once before he came along—and waked into a new self. His second coming is stranger still. It would almost seem that there is no chance about it. It would almost seem that it had been definitely planned." Then she laughed low to herself. "And if that's true I have no responsibility in the matter at all! Nothing I do about it is my fault—and I need not be very angry about his kissing me before he was introduced to me."

Then she saw a figure leave the shadow of the hedges and cross the moonlit lawn with confident stride. Mary Burton leaned a little forward, resting on her hands, and her lips remained parted.

"He seems just about as shameless about the whole affair as I am," she reflected, and when he was directly below she accosted him in a careful voice: "Halt! Restless Stranger. Does a disturbed conscience send you out to wander in the night mists?"

Jefferson Edwardes obeyed the command and raised his eyes to the commanding voice. "Perhaps," he announced in a guarded tone, "it is a fashion, dread of the wrath to come—though my conscience is clear. But you!"—in his half whisper she caught an eager note of hope—"why aren't you asleep?" She shook her head, and in the moon bath her face flashed into a luminous smile. "I am working up that wrath," she assured him. "I am preparing to be terribly angry with you to-morrow."

"And until to-morrow?"

"Until to-morrow I am very happy. Good-night."

* * * * * *

A many sided man was J. J. Malone, with a nature as brilliant and as capable of flashing varying lights from its facets as a diamond—and when need be as hard as a diamond. Had he lived in feudal times other barons would have said, "Where Malone sits there is the head of the table," and the monarch himself would have taken thought before provoking his wrath. In these days of alleged intolerance for tyrants he dispensed with the fanfare of trumpets and the tossing of flambeaux. The door of his office in a gray stuff-like building down-town bore the simple inscription "American Transportation Co., President's Office."

Many men to whom the mighty leverage of "Consolidated" was a familiar story had heard of J. J. Malone only in the casual sense. Yet the oligarchy had been built and rendered, supposedly, impregnable from the conceptions of his constructive brain. Concentration of power into one vast unit had been "Consolidated's" triumph — and his realized dream. Always the master tactician had been he who unobtrusively wore the title of president of "American Transportation." To others he had relinquished table roles, but unseen he had set and managed the stage.

EXPLAINING DEFEAT

Even German Pulpit Takes Up the Task—Enemy Opinions

A sidelight on German mentality is contained in a little conversation with a pastor in the province of Posen. He knew England well by residence and matrimonial connections. This is how he explained the Battle of the Somme to his parishioners. Here are his own words:

"Many wounded men are coming back to our church from the dreadful western front. They have been fighting the English, and they find that so ignorant are the English of warfare that the English soldiers on the Somme refuse to surrender, not knowing that they are really beaten, with the result that terrible losses are inflicted upon our brave troops."

In this exact report of a conversation is summed up a great deal of German psychology. For the Salvation Army a number of Germans have a good deal of respect, because it seems to be organized on some military basis. The Church of England they regard as degenerate as the Non-conformist. Both, they think, are mere refuges for money-making ecclesiastics.

Had Chronic Indigestion Thought She Would Die

After Years of Suffering Attributes Cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Eating too much or using foods that do not agree are the usual causes of indigestion.

The trouble usually begins not in the stomach, but in the liver, since it devolves on this organ to filter the excess waste matter from the system.

Now, since Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the greatest of these regulators, it naturally follows that they are unexcelled as a cure for chronic indigestion.

With the liver, kidneys and bowels active the poisonous waste matter is quickly removed from the system and there is nothing to interfere with the natural and healthful working of the organs of digestion. In this way only can lasting cure be effected.

Mrs. Rebecca Elliott, Magnetawan, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to write you in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had gastritis of the stomach for three years and could get nothing to stop it until I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I would have an attack of this trouble with my stomach every three or four weeks, and was so bad at times that my friends thought I would surely die. Thanks to these pills, I have not had an attack for six months, and believe that the cure is thorough. My husband has had very satisfactory experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. He was much run down, and very pale and weak. I persuaded him to use the Nerve Food, and after having taken five boxes he looks and feels real well."

It is such experiences as these that have made a place for Dr. Chase's medicines in the great majority of homes. They do not fail, even in the most complicated cases. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Limited, Toronto.

CITIZENS WASTE POTATOES.

"Don't Peel Them," Warns Dr. Hastings, M.O.H.

TORONTO, Dec. 14.—In the Health Bulletin issued by the Department of Public Health, Dr. Hastings, M. O. H., draws the attention of citizens to what he calls the enormous waste in material and nutritive value by the peeling of potatoes before cooking.

"There are thousands of pounds of potatoes wasted every day in Toronto, through the 'peelings,' he states. "To be convinced it is only necessary to notice the bulk of the peelings when you peel the potatoes before cooking.

"When peeled, potatoes are boiled in the ordinary way there is also a loss of nitrogenous and saline matter by extraction into the water which does not occur when potatoes are boiled in their skins."

He Lost a Rib and Got a Wife

By OSCAR COX

It was shortly after the great united drive began on the part of the French and the English against the Germans. They were bringing the English wounded to the rear, where the surgeons were attending to them in the recently constructed hospitals. A young officer was carried into one of these hospitals, where equipment for operating had been prepared in advance of the drive, and laid on the operating table. The only assistant who could be spared for that particular operation was a Red Cross nurse. The patient was in too critical a condition to notice his surroundings.

A fragment of a shell had struck the man in the breast and broken several ribs, so crushing one of them that the surgeon felt it necessary to remove it. When the operation was concluded and the patient returned to consciousness he feebly asked the doctor what he had done. He was told of the removal of his rib. He lay quiet while the doctor attended to another patient, and when he returned to observe the condition of the first the man, who meanwhile had been removed to a camp cot, said to him:

"You say, doctor, that you have taken a rib from my side."

"Yes."

"And this woman," pointing to the nurse "is the result."

Supposing that the patient was delirious, the surgeon, not willing to irritate him, assented.

"Well, then, I suppose I'm Adam and the woman is Eve. Were Adam and Eve married?"

"I don't know about that."

"Well, in these days couples are married. Bring a chaplain."

The surgeon looked from the patient to the nurse. She was regarding the wounded man with great anxiety.

"Come; hurry up," pursued the patient. "I may not pull through this and I want Eve to inherit my property. If I don't have a legal heir there'll be no end of a fight among a lot of vultures."

Again the surgeon looked at the nurse. She was very much affected. She gave the doctor no clew as to her willingness to be thus suddenly married and made heir presumptive to a fortune.

"You're not going to die," said the surgeon to the patient, "at least not of this wound. You may get another that will carry you off."

"Never mind that. You do what I tell you to do. Get a chaplain."

"Are you agreed?" asked the latter of the nurse.

Still he received no reply. But, assuming that with a woman silence gives consent, he called a hospital steward and sent him for a chaplain, who came from one dying man to another whom he thought to be dying. Kneeling beside the cot, he was about to offer a prayer when the patient interrupted him.

"Get up. I don't want to be prayed into heaven; I want to be married."

"Oh!" The chaplain looked at the surgeon for an explanation. The surgeon looked at the nurse, thereby referring the matter to her. The patient put out a hand, took hers and drew her toward his cot.

"Proceed," said the invalid.

Since the nurse offered no objection the chaplain proceeded with the marriage service. He had barely finished when he was called upon to attend a man in the agony of death and was about to hurry away when the groom called him.

"Hold on," he said. "The bride wants a certificate."

The chaplain, whose duties involved taking down farewell messages, was provided with writing materials, which he took out and, using the operating table for a desk, wrote out a certificate of marriage, leaving a blank space for the names. Then he turned to the newly married couple to supply the information.

"Captain Ralph D. Chamberlin," said the groom, "and Lady Gladys Penn Gaskell."

Both the surgeon and the chaplain looked from the groom to the bride, surprised.

"Witness this union," said the groom, "and don't you forget it. We two are not strangers by any means. We wanted to be married long ago, but Lady Gladys' parents had other plans for her. Fate has been a good friend to us in putting me into the war and making her a nurse. But fate might have done the trick without playing this Adam and Eve game. It doesn't hurt Eve, but it's mighty hard on Adam. Do you really think, doctor, that I can get on without her in my breast?"

"No," replied the surgeon, "you can't get on without her, but you won't die without your rib."

Despite the seriousness of the situation and the distressing scenes near them, a smile appeared on the faces of the little group, except the bride, who sank on her knees beside her newly made husband and folded him in her arms.

By this marriage the bride came into possession of a fine estate which otherwise would have been picked to pieces by a hundred heirs. She nursed her husband to health, but he returned to the front, was struck again and was killed. The case is referred to by those who know about it not as a wedding but a deathbed will. Captain Chamberlin could hardly have made a will at the time but the marriage certificate was much harder to contest than the other document.

The Non-cathartic Nature Cure for Constipation

Helps the System to Cure Itself.

You cannot cure constipation by violent methods. Violence is never effective against nature. That is why the use of morning salts and purgative pills so easily become a habit. These things do not cure the trouble; they only force matters, and in so doing weaken the bowels till natural action becomes impossible, and you have to go on taking your pills or salts indefinitely. Compare Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief. This great tonic laxative helps nature by strengthening the bowels, natural action is restored and a cure effected which is real and lasting.

Dr. CHAS. F. FORSHAW, B.Sc., F.R.M.S., a well-known British Scientist, writes:—"Never take Salines or Purgatives for Constipation — to force Bowel action is to aggravate the trouble and create the Constipation habit. I recommend as a superior and convenient treatment Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief."

Take Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief for constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, sick headache, dizziness, specks before the eyes, flatulence and windy spasms, acidity, heartburn, impure blood, and that dull, heavy feeling which is a sure indication of liver trouble.

DOUAUMONT REGAINED

Verdun Triumph of French Had Joyous Incidents

A French military eye witness relates episodes of the capture of Douaumont. One regiment alone took 1,845 prisoners in the day, besides 45 officers. This caused an officer in another regiment to say jokingly to the lieutenant-colonel, "Well, Richard, leave us some." "Rather help me to count mine," was the reply.

In the "Lady's Ravine" the Germans had dug an entire subterranean village holding two battalions. The Zouaves, falling from the sky with the shells, surprised this hornets' nest. It was about one o'clock, the hour of repose in Germany, when the unexpected guests came to disturb the Germans' digestion.

During the whole affair the Germans cried, "Pardon, Mercy," rather than "Kamerad." It was no longer the Germans of old, who invoked the comradeship of arms. Their attitude is one of humility. They were seen to go on their knees and cry "Long live France." They give up all they have on them. In the evening the Zouaves went along the trench with boxes of cigars, smoking calmly amid the bombardment, and offered cigars to the officers, saying, "A Boche cigar, captain?"

NO EVENING DRESS

French Theatres In War Times—Closed One Day Per Week

The French Under-Secretary of State for Public Instruction and Fine Arts, in agreement with the directors of the four subsidized theatres in Paris, decided that until the end of the war the public would not be admitted, whatever the nature of the performance, except in ordinary day dress. In compliance with the request of M. Malvy, Minister of the Interior, the directors of the theatres, concerts, and kinemas close their places of amusement for one day each week. The theatres close on Fridays, concert halls on Wednesdays, and kinemas on Tuesdays. The four subsidized theatres in Paris are the Opéra, Opéra Comique, Comédie Francaise, and Odéon.

Billiard Player's Sacrifice

A well known Irish professional billiard player, Joseph Brady, told a Dublin court-martial that he had sacrificed $3,500 a year in order to join the army. He had served, he said, with the Dublin Fusiliers in Gallipoli, and had been invalided home. Brady, who is a sergeant of the Dublin Fusiliers, was charged with having allowed a soldier to escape from his custody, but he was acquitted and given in court an excellent character as a "non-com."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

GREATEST OF SIEGES

British and Indian Heroes at Kut-el-Amara

In appeal after appeal General Charles Townsend, commander of this famous defence, held his men to marvellous sacrifice. At last on April 10, 1916, after four months of siege, he issued the following order: I am compelled to appeal to you all to make a determined effort to eke out our scanty means, so that I can hold out for certain till our comrades arrive, and I know I shall not appeal to you in vain. I have therefore to reduce the rations to five ounces of meal for all ranks, British and Indian. In my communique to you on the 26th of January I told you that our duty stood out plain and simple; it was to stand here and hold up the Turkish advance on the Tigris, owning heart and soul together.

Well, you have nobly answered the trust and appeal I put to you. The whole British Empire, let me tell you, is ringing now with the defence of Kut-el-Amara. You will be proud to say one day, "I was one of the garrison at Kut." And as for Plevna and Ladysmith, we have outclassed them all. So whatever happens now we have all done our duty, as I said in my report of the defence of this place, which has now been telegraphed to headquarters. I ask you all, comrades of all ranks, British and Indians, to help me now in this food question as I ask you above.—(Signed) Charles Townshend, Major-General, Kut-el-Amara, 10th April, 1916.

The fortnight which followed was one of indescribable misery and then came the inevitable surrender.

YOUTH WHO RUSHED SEVEN FOE FLIERS

Three Times Old Captain Ball, Aged Twenty, Win the D.S.O.— Describes His Methods

Commenting on an investiture by King George, an English paper said: A very interesting case was that of Captain Albert Ball, of the Sherwood Foresters and Royal Flying Corps, who received the D.S.O with two bars and the Military Cross. A man cannot win the same decoration twice over, and the bestowal of D.S.O. with two bars means in effect that Captain Ball has won the D.S.O. three times over during the present campaign, as well as the Military Cross. Captain Albert Ball is a native of Nottingham, and joined the Sherwood Foresters as a private at the outbreak of war. After earning his commission he transferred to the Royal Flying Corps and went to the western front. He is only twenty years of age, but has long been recognised as one of the most expert and daring airmen in the service. He holds the record of having brought down 30 German aeroplanes, 4 of them in one day.

Attacked Seven at Once

He won his D.S.O. for attacking single-handed 7 enemy machines, 1 of which he shot down at 15 yards range, the others taking to flight. Immediately afterwards he attacked 5 more hostile machines and shot 1 down. He attacked another, brought it down, and returned to the aerodrome for more ammunition and drove 3 more machines off. For equally daring feats he was awarded bars to his D.S.O.

Captain Ball in a visit to Nottingham, where his father is mayor, spoke of some of his methods. "As a rule," he said, "my favorite dodge when I get to close quarters is to pretend that I am going to attack from above. The Hun gets ready to fire at me and then I suddenly dive under his machine and empty a drum into his petrol tank and down he goes.

Flies Very Low

"Sometimes I fly very, very low to make sure that the machine is destroyed and fire another drum at it. The other day on the Somme I came as low as 200 feet after I had brought down one machine in flames and fired at it again. Altogether, I have been brought down six times myself, generally with my engine smashed up. Always I have been lucky enough to land in my own lines."

United Heart and Soul

L'Homme Enchaine, a Paris newspaper, says: "Nothing surprises the phlegm of the Englishman. With cordial simplicity he offers a smiling welcome to his comrades in the good fight. They have a common scorn of the detested Boche, an imperturbable confidence in their cause, the same disdain of death, the same indomitable valor, a striking unity in the exaltation of heart and soul."

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LIFE AND CHARACTER OF SIR DAVID BEATTY

Pen Picture of the Forceful, Winsome Fighter of Ships and Leader of Men

When Beatty first became head of the Grand Fleet, an English paper contained the following: At Jutland Sir David Beatty first met the German battle-cruisers steaming northward, his way the superior force, and the enemy turned and fled, with Beatty in pursuit. When the enemy's battle fleet came in sight Admiral Beatty, although out-numbered, followed Nelson's rule to attack "the enemy in sight." He courageously stuck to the foe, and kept up an unequal battle against disadvantages of mist and light, which made the enemy ships from time to time invisible until the British Battle Fleet arrived under Sir John Jellicoe, when, but for the mist and approach of night, which covered their flight, they would have been annihilated.

Idol of His Men

One great secret of Sir David Beatty's success in every command he has held is his wonderful courage and dash. He is the idol of his men, who literally worship him. A correspondent reports that not long ago he was talking with a stoker of the flagship Lion, who waxed enthusiastic over "our Admiral," and swore that every man on board would die for him at the word.

This admirable picture has been painted of Sir David by one who knows him well: "The extraordinarily forceful and clear-cut features, the compact, well-knit frame, the quick, almost bird-like movements, and yet with it all the curious effect of a restrained, contained, and most ponderable energy produce an effect at once distinguished and formidable. In general society he never talks shop or about himself, but chatters the ordinary tune of our trivial world. If the gods give him a chance before his command is up and he has had time to shake up his terrible leash of battle-cruisers, he will fight until either he or his enemy is finished."

A Religious Man

Admiral Beatty is of an intensely religious nature, and he carries his religion with him into his daily life. A short time ago he publicly declared that Great Britain would not achieve final and complete victory in this war until the British people turned to God and as a people consecrated themselves to a new life. His words created a great sensation, and inaugurated a revival movement in the British Isles.

Admiral Beatty is as popular socially as he is in the service, and his marriage with a daughter of the late Marshal Field, of Chicago, has made it possible for him (in time of peace) to exercise a generous hospitality, both in Scotland and in the hunting shires. Since the war began, Lady Beatty has been actively interested in organising British working girls for home defence. Admiral and Lady Beatty have two sons.

ALIEN TRADERS ACTIVE

Insidious Attempts to Capture Trade in London

The calling up of the last groups of married men in England synchronized with an energetic "offensive" of business snatching by "neutrals" in London. Mr. May, of Messrs. May and Rowden, estate agents, Maddox St. W., said that London was inundated with aliens of every sort trying to secure businesses and trades that were carried on by our men who have gone to the front.

"Between twenty and thirty aliens call here every day with inquiries for business premises. They are ready to pay any rent. Their favorite descriptions of their nationalities are 'Swiss' or 'Dutch.' Many of them are anxious to open women's clothing businesses in the West End. One 'Swiss' stated confidently that he could immediately capture good customers when he obtained premises. Many of the applicants give East End addresses."

"THE DEVIL'S COACH"

German View of Tanks and Effect Upon Defenders

Hearken to the wail of the General Anzeiger newspaper of Dusseldorf, Germany: Two mysterious monsters were crawling towards them over the craters. Stunned as if an earthquake hade burst around them, they all rubbed their eyes, which were fascinated by the fabulous creatures. Their imaginations were still excited by the effects of the bombardment. It was no wonder, then, that imagination got the better of these sorely tried men, who knew well enough that the enemy would use every means to destroy our steel wall of fragile human bodies. These men no longer know what fear is. But here was some devilry which the brain of man had invented, with powerful mechanical forces, a mystery which rooted one to the ground because the intelligence could not grasp it, a fate before which one felt helpless. One stared and stared as if one had lost the power of one's limbs. The monsters approached slowly, hobbling, rolling and rocking, but they approached. Nothing impeded them; a supernatural force seemed to impel them on. Some one in the trenches said: "The devil is coming," and the word was passed along the line like wildfire. Suddenly tongues of flame leaped out of the armored sides of the iron caterpillar. Shells whistled over our heads, and the sound of machine guns filled the air. The mysterious creature had yielded its secret, and the men came back to their senses; their vigor and tenacity returned when the English infantry rolled up in waves behind the "devil's coaches."

FIGHTING LONDONERS

Canon Woodward's Tribute to Their Joyous, Splendid Spirit

"I hardly know how to find words to do justice to the high and splendid spirit of the London men at the front." So said Canon C. S. Woodward, precentor of Southwark Cathedral. Canon Woodward, who has been awarded the Military Cross, was formerly curate at Bermondsey Old Parish Church. Canon Woodward saw some hot fighting on the Vimy Ridge, and later in the Somme advance, where he was wounded.

Said Canon Woodward: "I was struck off the thigh by a piece of shrapnel. At the time I was engaged among the wounded, endeavoring to identify some of our officers. I am now feeling fit again, and am going back to the front.

"And I should like," he concluded, "to pay a tribute to the endurance, the cheerfulness, and the courage of our men. I speak of the men from London, because it was they only with whom I had to do. In spite of the wretched weather and of having to carry on in conditions of much discomfort, they were all as keen and as jolly as one could expect to see them in the happiest surroundings."

MISUSED WHITE FLAG

Germans Began Their Tricks Very Early in War

The following from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's account of the war will indicate why very early the British had to lose faith in German fairness: From the story of the Battle of the Aisne—On seeing the white flag Captain Savage, of B Company, Northamptons, got out of the trench, and with Lieutenant Dimmer, of the Rifles, advanced to the Germans. He threw down his sword and revolver to show that he was unarmed. He found a difficulty in getting a direct answer from the Germans, so he saluted their officers, who returned his salute, and turned back to walk to his own trench. Dimmer, looking back, saw the Germans level their rifles, so he threw himself down, crying out, "For God's sake, get down!" Captain Savage stood erect, and was riddled with bullets. Many of the Northamptons, including Lieutenant Gordon, were shot down by the same volley. The Germans then attempted an advance, which was stopped by the machine guns of the 1st Queen's. Such deplorable actions must always destroy the amenities of civilized warfare.

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN

This famous son of a famous father had already wide parliamentary experience when the war broke out. He has filled many important posts since.

Scotch Trench Humor

From British Headquarters on the Somme the London correspondent of the "New York Tribune" relates the following story: "Some Scotsmen in the front line on a cold afternoon hunted around for wood to build a fire. An officer saw the smoke and asked the Scotties, 'Aren't you asking for trouble?' They thought not. A few minutes later the Germans began to 'strafe' the trench, and finally one shell exploded just in front of the parapet. Sandy turned round and said, 'Jock, throw on a bit wood; they nae ha' got oor range yet.'"

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial?

Peps is the discovery!

Peps are little tablets, containing certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

FREE TRIAL Cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps, 50c. box.

NATION OF SPIES: PRUSSIAN CHARACTER

Foreigners Underestimate This Essential Characteristic—Happily, Huns Cannot Estimate Other Races

A citizen of the United States writes from England: Prussian men and women hardly know the meaning of the word "private," and as they have Prussianized to a great or less degree all the other States of the Empire they have inured the German to publicity from childhood upwards. Here, in a land of individualists like Great Britain, the partners in any business prefer to go their own way and are not over-curious in regard to the methods of their competitors. Here, as with us in the United States, a man's business, fortune, and family affairs, though they may be discussed are not, at any rate in the great centres of population, systematically pried into by their neighbors.

No Privacy

All this is reversed in Germany, where an entirely different moral code prevails. The Fensterspiegel (projecting window mirror), from which the German hausfrau watches the movements of her neighbors in the street, is very typical of the spy aspect of the German character. Typical, too, is the annual tax return presented at every apartment house or block of flats. This return is a voluminous document, which is placed in charge of the porter—or janitor, as we call him. It goes the round of the whole of the flats, and each succeeding signer has the privilege of reading the previous entries and finding out exactly what amount his neighbor pays upon.

Too Egoist

With these elements in their character it is natural that the Germans should be past-masters in the art of espionage. It does not follow that they are equally successful in the deductions formed from their investigations in foreign matters; but they are so egoist and so literal, so fond of making reports, so fond of seeing things only from their own point of view, that while they may be successful in obtaining possession, by spying, purchase, or theft, of the plans, say, of a new battleship, they are not able to form an accurate estimate of the character and intentions of the people among whom they may be spying.

LUXURIES DURING WAR

English Papers Exposed Riot of Waste in Hotels

Waste in Britain was vigorously attacked by newspapers. A visit made to ten of the leading resorts in the West End of London by a Weekly Dispatch representative was an amazing revelation of luxurious living, of a vast expenditure of wealth on rich and costly dishes, careless and unheeding of the drain on the country's resources. Only a few hours after a two-days' debate in the House of Commons, in which the most urgent measures to husband the nation's food supply were proposed and accepted without demur, thousands of men and women were rushing to the food palaces and sitting down to "meals" of superabundance and infinite variety.

By eight o'clock in two famous hotels—the Carlton and the Piccadilly—there was scarcely a vacant table. The interiors were gorgeous pictures of gaiety and high living. Women in superb evening toilettes, glittering with precious stones, were arriving with officers in uniform and men in evening dress. Of course, they all drove up in taxicabs or private motor cars—as if petrol and the time and labor of the chauffeurs were the last things that matter in war time.

Practically all the tables had been booked beforehand. In the Carlton, where only half the men were in khaki, there were champagne bottles on almost every table, and the succession of courses of fish, meat, and fowl, and costly sweets seemed to [illegible] should be possible in the third year of the great war.

Quaint Custom

In accordance with a belief in the West of England, the boots last worn before the man of the house enlisted are hung over his bed, in order to ensure that he will return in safety to wear them again.

With certain exceptions, no officer may receive more than one foreign decoration; no man in the ranks may receive more than one.

About 12,000 soldiers have been returned to the mines, the Home Secretary stated.

Santa Claus Castle for the Dinner Table

THIS little model of Santa Claus' castle, built upon the summit of a mountain, makes an attractive centerpiece for the Christmas dinner table.

The first thing to build is the mountain, and for this you will need a large enough piece of cardboard to make a base about sixteen inches in diameter and a top nine or ten inches in diameter (Fig. 4). Cardboard from a suit box will do.

The lower portion of the castle is a square cardboard box (Fig. 5). Invert this box, and around its bottom glue a strip of cardboard having notches cut in the edge, as shown, for an embattled parapet wall. The lower tower stands upon the box base. It is made of a piece of cardboard notched along the upper edge, and bent into a cylinder with the edges lapped and glued together (Fig. 6). Make a roof out of a circular piece of cardboard with projecting tabs for turning down and gluing to the sides of the tower (Fig. 7). Make a second smaller tower and fasten it upon the lower tower (Figs. 1 and 8).

To complete the castle, paint a number of long narrow windows upon the walls, and fasten a slim stick flagpole upon the upper tower.

The mountain side must be covered with snow, and the best way to obtain the snow effect is by gluing cotton to the cardboard. Put the cotton on in varying thicknesses, to give the mountain slopes a rocky appearance. And from the base form a trail up one side to the castle, by dampening and pressing down the cotton (Fig. 1).

There must be trees, and excellent ones may be made by cutting long, slender wooden cones, similar to that shown in Fig. 2, driving a nail into the base of each, and then whittling the surface with a sharp knife so as to make the shavings stand out in the form of boughs (Fig. 3). The way to prepare the boughs is to start at the apex of the cone, and whittle in the same manner that you sharpen a pencil, but very carefully so as not to split off any of the shavings. Stain the trees a dark green. Then stand them erect upon the mountain sides, sticking the nails in their ends down through the cardboard. Pull the cotton up around their bases.

Santa Claus should be shown in his aeroplane about to alight at his castle (Fig. 1). His aeroplane may be suspended by a thread.

The aeroplane (Fig. 9) consists of a strip of cardboard 7 inches long and 1 inch wide (A), with a V-shaped piece glued to both sides of its center (B, Figs. 9 and 10), a tail plane (C, Figs. 9 and 11) glued to plane A, and a propeller (D, Figs. 9 and 12), pivoted by a pin run through its center into the edge of plane A (Fig. 10). Cut out the double picture of Santa Claus in Fig. 13, fold along the dotted line, and paste together the two halves with the exception of the feet which must be separate to straddle the framework of the aeroplane. Color Santa Claus' clothes and toy pack with water-colors or crayons.

Had Violent Coughing Fits

Looked Like Consumptive

Mrs. Mary Whelen, North Forks, N.S., writes: "Having taken five bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, during the past few weeks, to relieve a chronic cough and general throat trouble, allow me to express my unbounded satisfaction and thanks as to its sterling qualities. A short time ago I became subject to violent coughing fits at night and directly after rising in the morning. I began losing weight, and all my friends cheerfully informed me that I was going into consumption.

"After taking the 'Dr. Wood's' I am pleased to relate that the cough has entirely disappeared and I have since regained the lost weight. I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup."

There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" on the market so see that none of these so-called "pine syrups" are handed out to you when you ask for "Dr. Wood's." It has been on the market for twenty-five years, is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

BOASTED FORTS FALL

Villages Surpassing Port Arthur Untenable by Germans

Estimating the importance of the capture of St. Pierre and Beaumont-Hamel, an English writer says: The attack extended from the Grandcourt-Poziores road to a point considerably north of Beaumont-Hamel. It was a victory for Sir Douglas Haig and a blow to Hindenburg, who had declared only a few weeks previously that "the Somme could take care of itself." It was won in spite of every obstacle that the mind could imagine or the engineer invent—in spite of mud, which in that region is of the consistency of bird-lime (even though it is not as deep as on the Somme), in spite of bad weather, and in spite of fortifications of colossal strength. It was gained, too, against positions on which our attacks broke in vain earlier, and against the enemy's picked troops. For the Germans had been bringing up their finest fighting material, and had re-organized their artillery and air service, so that they fancied themselves perfectly secure.

St. Pierre and Beaumont-Hamel were fortresses stronger in every possible respect than Port Arthur, Plevna, Sebastopol, or Badajos. The construction of immense works there began on the eve of the Battle of the Marne, and had been continued ever since. The fortifications were the more formidable because they made little show above ground. They were almost invulnerable to direct gun fire, but they could be attacked by the giant howitzers which the allies had learned from the enemy to employ. Each fortress was furnished with dugouts of great depth—secure from everything except a hit which choked the entrances—communicating by underground tunnels, which were of such size and carried to such a depth that they resembled the excavations of a London "tube."

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The little girl in the picture is wearing a dress in the accepted style, plain and pretty. She can get ready for school without help, for the frock is slipped on over the head and there are no buttons to bother with, and when a girl is only eight years old and goes to school that counts quite a lot.

The girlie who already has her idea of style will be sure to like this version of the wide collar. Besides there is novelty in the way the front lacing meets it, and the button decoration is lovely. It is fashionable to have a belt at a lowered waistline on such frocks and quite becoming, too, as most little girls, as the illustration shows; the fulness of the skirt section is brought into folds that give a pleated effect at the sides, and to advantage. The long sleeves is cuffed to match the collar and belt.

Linen, cotton poplin, gingham and the like are suitable for a tub dress, for school wear, checked or plaided material trimmed with plain serge, gabardine and similar fabrics are to be considered. The dress could be completed in one evening.

The 8-year pattern No. 8045 cuts in sizes 2-8. To make in size 8 requires 2¾ yards 36 inch material with ¾ yard contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send 20 cents to the office of this publication.

Liquor Manufacture To Be Restricted

The Bodies of Two More Fire Victims Recovered

"ADEQUATE REPARATION FOR PAST ADEQUATE SECURITY FOR FUTURE"

Bonar Law Makes Partial Answer to German Peace Proposals by Quoting Statement Made Some Time Ago By Former Premier Asquith---Reduction of Liquor Manufacture in Britain Foreshadowed.

A VOTE OE CREDIT FOR TWO BILLIONS

LONDON, December 14.—Andrew Bonar Law to-day made partial answer to the German peace proposals by quoting the statement made by former Premier Asquith when the last vote of credit was asked for the House of Commons. "There must be adequate reparation for the past and adequate security for the future," he said, quoting Asquith.

Bonar Law prefaced this statement with the declaration that peace proposals had not as yet been received. He could not discuss them and would prefer that the Commons likewise refrain from discussion.

The restriction and practical extinction of the liquor manufacture in the British Isles was foreshadowed to-day in the Commons when Bonar Law announced that a new food minister would be empowered to prohibit the use of grain and sugar in the manufacture of beverages.

A vote of credit for two billion dollars was moved in the Commons to-day by Andrew Bonar Law.

The Government leader said the expenditures exceeded the year's estimate because of an increase in th output of muntions and additional loans accorded to England's Allies and England's Dominions. Loans to the Dominions, he said, have averaged approximately $1,948,000 a day.

Bonar Law said the average daily war expenditure had now reached approximately $27,807,700.

The new Government intends to create Ministers of food and labour. He said the Government had "taken such action as considered necessary" in the case of Captain Blaikie, of the Caledonian. Blaikie was taken prisoner by a German submarine and is supposed to be facing possible execution for ramming a submarine.

British votes of credit since the outbreak of the war have now reached a total approximately of nineteen billion dollars.

Peace Proposals Are Sent to the Allies

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, December 14.—Within a few hours after the receipt of the official text of the Teuton peace proposals, Secretary Lansing, at the President's order, to-day despatched it to London, Paris, Petrograd, Rome and to the provisional capitals of Roumania, Serbia and Belgium. It was sent without any suggestion or comment by the President.

Lloyd George Is Attending To Business

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 14.—Premier Lloyd George's illness still kept him indoors to-day, but he was attending to business as usual. His physicians said he was progressing favourably, but he was not expected to venture out of his house for a couple of days.

Bankers Invited To Discuss Finance

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, December 14. — Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, has invited the Canadian Bankers' Association to come to Ottawa tomorrow to discuss the matter of Dominion and Imperial finance in Canada during the coming year. The Dominion Government will require to make further public loans, and the Imperial Munitions Board will require such further funds as can be made available in Canada for the purchase of shells, explosives and other ammunitions here.

Allies Should State Their Basic Terms

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 14.—Sentiment increased to-day in favour of including in England's rejection of the German peace note, a clear and explicit definition of the Allies' basic terms.

The Pall Mall Gazette's comment was typical to-day of this view. It said: "We do not see why the Allies should not turn the incident to their own profit by fresh and vigorous proclamation of the fundamentals of our own cause.

"The essence of the Allies' answer must necessarily be that peace without justice is immoral and that, peace without safety, is a mere delusion."

Heavy Artillery Fighting in West

BERLIN, December 14.—The German statement to-day says of the western front:

In some parts of the Somme front there were temporarily heavy artillery engagements.

Near Le Four De Paris, in the Argonne, French patrols made advances after a violent preparatory fire was repulsed.

Another British Steamer Is Sunk by a Sub.

AMSTERDAM, December 14.—German submarines sank a British steamer bound from New York to England with a cargo of six thousand tons of war material, off the French coast, according to telegrams from Berlin.

The despatch also stated that between Nov. 28 and Dec. 8, German submarines succeeded in sinking vessels laden with 17,000 tons of coal bound from England to France.

Peace Proposals are a Great Encouragement

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 14.—"The man who asks for peace is generally the man who has had enough,' declared General Maurice, director of military operations to-day. "These peace proposals should be a great encouragement to us. Independent British and French estimates show that the Germans have lost over seven hundred thousand men since July 1st, including ninety-five thousand who were captured. In addition they lost 135 heavy guns, 180 field pieces, and 1,314 machine guns."

LONDON, December 14.—The sinking of three British steamers, Harlington, Harley and Saint Ursula is announced by Lloyds to-day. The crews are believed saved.

THE APPEAL IS DISMISSED

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The House of Lords to-day dismissed the famous appeal of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. R. Slingsby, of British Columbia, who sought the estate of the late Rev. Charles Slingsby for "Teddy" Slingsby, their supposed son. This finally declares the lad a "substituted" son, and he loses forty-five thousand dollars yearly income.

CIVIL ACTION ARISING OUT OF A LAND DEAL

Interesting Case Was Opened Last evening in the County Court—Mr. B. Heard of This City is the Defendant

"GOLD AND DROSS"

The case of Barrett vs. Heard was opened at eight o'clock last night before His Honour Judge Huycke, at the sittings of the County Court. In this section the plaintiff, George Barrett of Ottawa is claiming from Bert Heard of this city the sum of $499.00 due him on an agreement in which Heard agreed to purchase two lots in Tuxedo Park, Saskatoon.

Heard who was to pay $700, paid over $200 on these lots but ceased payment. The defence claims that the lots were grossly misrepresented to Mr. Heard when he bought them, and claim not only the right to refuse to make further payments, but are asking the return of the money paid by him on the property.

Mr. D. O'Connell is acting for the plaintiff and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defence.

A FRIENDLY TILT.

The outstanding incident of the trial of this case last evening was a friendly clash between Mr. Norman Harris, for seven years financial editor of the Saturday Night, Toronto and Mr. O'Connell. After the Plaintiff in the witness box had proved the agreement, Mr. Gordon called Mr. Harris to prove that the lots were not as represented to Heard. After the examination by Mr. Gordon, Mr. O'Connell opened the cross-examination by asking:

"How long were you financial Editor of the Saturday Night Mr. Harris?"

"Seven years" was the reply.

"During that time you had your hands full?"

"Yes."

"In many ways?"

"That sounds like an insinuation" laughed the witness.

"Well?"

"When I was Editor of the Saturday Night we did not deal in insinuations. We spoke right out."

"Well?"

"If you have anything to ask, ask it right out."

"When you were Editor of the Saturday Night you had your hands full?"

"Quite" was the answer.

"Why did you leave the Saturday Night?"

"Wrong again, laughed Harris", I resigned "for my own good."

"Suited both you and the paper?"

"I don't think so. I don't think the paper has been as good since."

"You think they would rather have

PEACE PROPOSALS DUE TO TROUBLES OF TEUTONS

(By Lord Northcliffe.)

(Copyright 1916 by United Press. Copyrighted in Great Britain).

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Germany's peace proposals are due to the fact which interned neutral correspondents in Berlin have not been allowed to indicate, that during the last few weeks grave internal dissensions have arisen, owing to food shortage and the reign of terror.

Moreover, relations have been greatly strained between various German and Austrian states and also with Turkey.

The Prussian Government has also learned that the British Empire will, during 1917, put forth an effort equal at least to that of Germany in 1914, and from the point of view of guns and shells, three times that of Germany at any period of the war.

The proposals have been received here with contempt.

We are gratified that American sense of humour and justice have seen through this bluff.

France, Italy and little Belgium are firm as Plymouth Rock.

OTTAWA, Dec. 13.—Over twenty chaplains in the third military division have been notified by the Militia Department that their services are no longer required. The chaplains are given one month's leave in order that they may procure work in other channels, or enlist as combatants.

A short time ago the Militia Department announced that there were enough chaplains in England to attend to the wants of the soldiers, and chaplains in units in Canada were not needed. The department is now considering what chaplains will be retained and who will be let go in the different divisions.

Practically every unit, especially every infantry unit, has a chaplain who is on the strength holding the rank of captain. Some of the clergymen have qualified for the rank of lieutenant and others have the honorary rank of captain.

London, Dec. 13.—The Canadian Press is authoritatively informed that the breaking up of units of Canadian forces in England by sending drafts as reinforcements to battalions already in France is a military necessity and under existing circumstances at the front cannot well be avoided. Casualties of men have been great and divisions at the front must be kept supplied with men and junior officers.

Naturally commanding officers keenly feel disappointment in not being permitted to proceed to the front with their units intact, but for reasons above stated senior officers cannot be absorbed here. It is, however, only fair to these officers to point out that the breaking up of the respective units is in no sense a reflection on their ability or qualifications or desire to serve in the trenches. It is well known that Canadian battalions were recruited, organized and trained by officers of high standing and long military experience and recognized military ability, but owing to the exigencies of the situation they have been called upon to furnish reinforcements and could not proceed themselves.

Everyone is conscious of disappointment suffered by these officers and likewise realizes the good and effective work done by them in recruiting, organizing and training battalions. With that in mind it is

The bodies of two more victims of Monday's explosion and fire at the Quaker Oats Company were recovered from the ruins today, adding the names of James Foster, Union street, and Wm. Mesley, 247 Wescott street, to the list of known dead, and bringing the total to nine, with eight men still missing.

The body of James Foster was found by the searchers this morning under a pile of debris in the wrecked boiler room. The unfortunate man had evidently been at work at the coke owens, as his body was found in front of one of them, badly crushed but not burned.

Early this afternoon the searchers uncovered the body of Wm. Mesley, 247 Wescott street, who was one of the firemen in the boiler room. He had been at work at the boiler when the explosion came as he was found in front of one with the door of the fire box opened. From the position of the two bodies it is clear that the men were caught without the chance of escape. They were pinned in their tracks by the huge masses of debris that came hurtling down through the roof of the boiler house.

A workman who had been in the boiler house and who just reached the door when the explosion came, and escaped unhurt because he was under the stone archway of a door informed the Examiner that he had passed Mesley just an instant before. The latter had been firing up and had closed the fire box door to allow the workman to pass with his barrow. He had evidently just time to get the door open again when the terrible explosion occurred.

Hospital Cases.

Five of the fire victims are located in Nicholls Hospital and ten in St. Joseph's Hospital. In the first named institution, J. C. Kemp is the most seriously injured of the five. He is not yet out of danger. Nearly all of the cases in St. Joseph's Hospital are of a serious nature and several of the patients are delirious.

The following are in St. Joseph's Hospital:

R. Healey, 328 Euclid Avenue. Has fractured skull and condition is serious.

J. W. Walsh, 547 Rogers street, broken leg and jaw. Is not out of danger.

J. Houlihan, 501 Sherbrooke street, very badly burned. Condition serious.

J. W. Tetreau, 500 Bethune street, badly burned. Not out of danger.

James Murphy, 109 Dufferin street, has been removed to his home.

TOO ATTENTIVE TO HIS BROTHER'S WIFE CAUSE OF TROUBLE

Tom McClellan Received No Sympathy in Police Court this Morning—Beat His Wife Last Night

NEWLYWEDS MUST GO

Thomas McClennan, teamster, residing on Bethune street, was fined $10.00 in the police court this morning, and in default of payment will spend twenty days on the hill for assaulting his wife last night. The bruises his fingers left on his wife's neck were still noticeable this morning. Domestic differences with the husband the aggressor, were ascribed as the cause of the trouble of which this morning's case was the effect. About a week ago McClennan's brother took unto himself a wife and the newly-weds took up residence at Tom's house. Before and after her marriage she said Thomas was attentive to his brother's wife. The straight talk Chief Thompson handed out and the wife's statement that she had seen her husband coming from the other woman's room, indicated a moral muddle that was apparently the root of the disagreement. Magistrate Dumble ordered the brother and his wife to find new lodgings at once, especially the wife, and the police were instructed to see that this order was carried out.

McClennan's purse, containing $2.80, was handed over to his wife for present needs.

FORWARD YOUR PARCELS EARLY

The local agents of the Dominion and Canadian Express Companies wish to draw the attention of the public to the fact that owing to the difficulties now experienced by the Transportation Companies, on account of a shortage in help in handling express matter, they would suggest that parties making their usual exchange of Christmas greetings by exchange packages would do well to forward them earlier this year in order to insure safe delivery by Christmas.

Investigation Next Week

Mr. E. P. Heaton, Provincial Fire Marshall, is Still in the City.

Mr. E. P. Heaton of Toronto Fire Marshall for the Province of Ontario is still in the city, making preliminary preparations for the investigation into the destruction of the plant of the Quaker Oats Company. It is altogether probable that the investigation will open in this city some time next week, following the coroner's inquest.

INDISPENDABLE WATERWORKS.

We don't know what we are capable of till we are put sternly to the test. We didn't know from practical ... what we believed and were proud ... that our waterworks system was ... of the best, if not the best, in ... purity of water and efficiency of ... civic service in the province. ... we know, by actual test, that, ... addition, it can be depended upon ... time of greatest demand. It put its ... to the great fire of Monday, and ... through, at the beginning, owing to the ... washing of a couple of mains by ... explosion, the water supply at that ... was unsatisfactory, that was ... the fault of the waterworks. The ... moment the fire alarm was sounded ... Monday morning the pressure ... went up to 100-110 pounds, and during ... the day it reached as high a point as ... pounds. During the fifteen hours ... the prevalence of the fire the ... works pumped six million gallons, ... more than double the twenty-four ... hours' supply of about three million ... gallons, and this enormous flow ... would have been increased if there ... had been necessity; the auxiliary ... plant had steam up, ready to renew, ... supplement, or speed up the work ... of the ordinary pumps. Our Waterworks has been weighed in the balance and found—there—ready and ... capable to meet the most exacting ... demands that can be made upon ... them.

OLEOMARGARINE.

The Customs Act forbids the importation of oleomargarine or similar substitutes for butter, and of course, involves prevention of its manufacture in this country. But why prohibit imitation butter as a clean, wholesome factor in reducing the high cost of living prices in respect of one commodity, and tolerate imitation statesmanship as a substitute for statesmanship—doing something ... dealing with the problem of high ... living in Canada. The Government's ... Ottawa-council is so ineffective; so complicated of processes, so inviting of inspection; so bristling with red ... entanglements; so beset with ... hiding places for the law's delays, ... it is condemned by all competent authorities capable of forming ... opinions as to the effect of the causes ... the high cost of living; that it is ... shunned as inspiness and inaction ... personified.

We don't know, because the government won't turn on the official searchlight, what interests are between the consumer and a reasonable price for many important items ... his daily bread. But there is ... doubt that every interest is anxious to maintain the high level of ... prevailing in respect of the commodity in which they are ... interested. One can, then, understand ... the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario, as reported ... the press, has petitioned the Dominion Government not to permit ... manufacture or sale of margarine ... Canada, which cannot be in... ...

We can easily comprehend the ... of the dairymen. The manufacture of a butter substitute in Canada ... would probably bring down the price ... somewhat and reduce the profits on an ... article whose high price is a puzzle ... to many persons and a punishment ... to a great many others, thus conferring a boon upon many who have ... now to choke down their bread unbuttered.

It cannot be that the health of the people is the concern of the government or the Dairymen's Association. Oleomargarine is hardly a substitute for genuine butter, for it can be made so good that it cannot be distinguished, by taste, from good butter. It is a pure food product that keeps well, and its highest recommendation is its low price. In Great Britain margarine sells for sixpence or twelve cents—per pound. It appears that it could be produced in Canada from clean, pure fats, to sell at a good profit for from 15 to 20 cents per pound. At this price people ... whom 40 cents or 45 cents per pound is prohibitory, could afford to eat something more tasty than dry bread. If the Government isn't going to do, ay better than its order-in-council to settle the question of the high cost of living it might help in one thing, at least, by removing its prohibition of the manufacture of margarine as a clean, wholesome, and reasonably priced substitute for, and virtual equivalent to, butter, unreasonably priced. The interests of the many should more strongly appeal to the conscience and action of the Government than the extortionate interests of the few.

SANITATION AND HEALTH.

It would be waste of words to speak of the universally recognized importance of health—individual and communal—if there were not need to impress what is too much forgotten or ignored. Sanitation — and health, cause and effect— furnishes its own justification of claim to consideration. Sanitary measures perfected and applied have had an important effect in this war, helping to maintain the health of soldiers in training or on service, keeping them fit and when wounded or ill more speedily restoring them to the ranks. Organized sanitation in communities plays a great role in the reduction of communicable diseases, of child mortality, and industrial diseases, in protecting and promoting the purity of food supply, especially milk, a medium, if not watched, of communicating disease. Statistics show the value of sanitation in the preventing of disease and death. In the typical case of Toronto, it is recorded that in the five years, 1910-15, the typhoid mortality rate had been reduced from 41.8 to 1.9, virtually 60 per cent. reduction; the diphtheria rate from 41.9 to 13.7, and scarlet fever from 23.8 to 3.

While sanitation in the general way is a concern of Boards of Health, its benefits can be largely added to by subsidiary and cooperative action. The most important subsidiary agency in Peterborough is represented by the Public Health Association, whose nursing activities—supplying nurses, especially to those who otherwise would have to suffer and die, perhaps with only the inefficient and unskilled nursing available in the home. If it is true that the physician is largely only an educated nurse, the importance of the nursing and incidental instruction in sanitation provided by the nurses of the Health Association cannot be over-estimated. Apart from the humanity involved in relieving suffering and promoting comfort, the saving of life and the promotion of good or better health conditions, the virtual saving of the city's manhood and womanhood make its work of material—monetary—value.

The Health Association is in need of funds to continue its great work and, in this connection, the reception at the Empress Hotel on Dec. 20th, should be remembered. It is in the interests of the general welfare of the city in its most vital concern; it is in the interests of humanity, that the claims of the Association to help should be considered. Every contribution—that it may continue to help—is a contribution to the funds of the Association as an investment—taking stock in an enterprise that yields large dividends—if not in material ways, in the larger way, of improved quality of citizenship, the more robust health of the community and reputation for a broad spirit of help to humanity, and for Christian charity—not in doles, but in the spirit of love and service for our fellow man.

SHOP EARLY

"Excelsior" Excelled in Point of Seasonable Appeal

The city shops were opening last ... as down the street a woman passed ... who wore a badge of good design inscribed with this inspiring line: "Shop Early." Her brow was bright, her eyes below were radiant with a restless glow, as like a Christmas carol rang the music of her merry tongue, "Shop Early." In many homes she had a chance to stop and talk; a circumstance not overlooked by women, still she kept right on and shouted shrill, "Shop Early." "Try not the shops," an old chap said as warningly he shook his head. "It's just as well to wait awhile." She answered briefly with a smile, "Shop Early." "Come in," a dear friend begged, "and try a slab of Christmas pumpkin pie." She put temptation on the side, and like a heroine replied, "Shop Early." "Beware the cars in crowded streets; beware the rush one always meets." She heard the call, but on she went as back her bravery reply she sent, "Shop Early." A ... in a shop was found among ... a hundred packed around, and when they'd shoved her plumb outside with nothing bought she bravely cried, "Shop Early." There in the morning, cold and gray, she made a firm resolve to stay, and when the shades of night appeared she still was there and faintly leered, "Shop Early." Next morning through her panes she saw, a throng obedient to the law of thoughtfulness, off to shops, heedless of obstacles or stops—in answer to the cry that gets appeal from motives high—"Shop Early."

Some Good Reasons Why The Teuton Plea For Peace Does Not Appeal To The Neutrals

"The government of the United States has learned with the greatest concern and regret of the policy of the German government to deport from Belgium a portion of the civilian population for the purpose of forcing them to labour in Germany, and is constrained to protest in a friendly spirit but most solemnly against this action, which is in contravention of all precedent and of those humane principles of international practice which have long been accepted and followed by civilized nations in their treatment of noncombatants in conquered territory."

Such is the wording of part of the United States note of protest last week to the German government regarding the German slave-driving in Belgium. Going back to April 18 last, the following is found to be the wording of the United States note of protest to the German government regarding the German submarine actions:

"The use of submarines for the destruction of an enemy's commerce is, of necessity, because of the very character of the vessels employed and the very methods of attack which their employment of course involves, utterly incompatible with the principles of humanity, the long established and incontrovertible rights of neutrals, and the sacred immunities of noncombatants."

Prior to the foregoing, the German government had promised the United States government "to take every possible precaution both to respect the rights of neutrals and to safeguard the lives of non-combatants." "But," proceeded the United States note:

"The commanders of the German government's undersea vessels have carried on practices of such ruthless destruction which have made it more and more evident as the months have gone by that the German government has found it impracticable to put any such restraints upon them as it had hoped and promised to put. Again and again the German government has given its solemn assurances to the government of the United States that at least passenger ships would not be thus dealt with, and yet it has repeatedly permitted its undersea commanders to disregard these assurances with entire impunity."

So we find the chief neutral nation of the world, which started out by complimenting the German government on its high character, coming to call the German government a liar defying the principles of humanity.

And we find today the Holland Section of the League of Neutral States characterizing the German action in Belgium as "hellish," and proclaiming:

"This tyranny is not to be borne in patience and the neutral nations can no longer stand idly by while in western Europe the most primitive laws of humanity, observed even by uncivilized races, are trampled under foot."

One would imagine that such indictments would have some effect upon even the skulls of Germans, other than Prussians. And surely it must have? At all events, there are signs of discomfort in some German-American quarters. The New Yorker Volkszeitung, a newspaper published in German, breaks loose with a wail over the German action in Belgium. After suggesting that things had been veering towards peace, the Volkszeitung says:

"Germany bursts upon the scene with this fresh oppression of the Belgians. Granted that perhaps she may have some paragraph of the laws of war on her side, granted that possibly the narrow bureaucratic brain yields to the illusion of being able to train the Belgians to diligence, and thus doing some good to the oppressed and enslaved people—does that in the least alter the fact that the entire impartial world is bound to be filled with the heartiest sympathy for Belgium, and with the sincerest loathing for the conquerors?"

There was no chance of peace. The Volkszeitung need not worry about that. There will be no peace for the Huns until their power is smashed. But for the nations which are fighting them, some gratification must exist in the proof that it is not merely Germany's foes who see her ghastliness.

Labour Difficulties at Henry Hope and Sons

Labour difficulties are affecting the munitions plant of the Henry Hope & Sons. In explanation of the difficulty, Mr V. Richardson, superintendent of the plant, states that the threatened strike arises out of an attempt on the part of the company to make a re-adjustment of prices in keeping with present production and cost of manufacture. Mr. Richardson states that the proposed schedule, which the men refuse to accept, practically establishes a minimum wage of four dollars a day with a few exceptions. The men demand the old prices, which Mr. Richardson says is unreasonable owing to the increase in the cost of manufacture. "The men," said Mr. Richardson, "evidently labour under the impression that there is a huge profit in the manufacture of war munitions. That is a mistaken idea. The demand practically amounts to a hold-up. We have looked carefully over our records and have convinced the representatives of the men that our prices are reasonable, yet the men refuse to accept them. We are even willing to publish the payroll. The wages some of the men get here would surprise you."

The company is taking on a number of new men.

Norwood Correspondence

Norwood, Dec. 13.—Miss May Fennell has gone to Toronto.

Mr. T. Lumsden was in Keene last week taking stock for Messrs. Anderson and Skinner.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church held their regular monthly meeting last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Cyrus Johnson.

Mrs. Hugh Scott, the retiring president of the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church who has gone to Kitchener to reside was presented with the following letter of appreciation:

Dear Mrs. Scott:—We the officers and members of the Ladies' Aid Society desire to express our very hearty appreciation of the services you have so willingly and cheerfully rendered amongst us for the cause of Christ.

You have been connected with our church almost all your life time and we feel that we are not only losing one of our greatest workers, but also a true friend. We deeply regret your departure.

We pray that God's blessing in its richest measure will be with you in your new sphere, and that you will be spared many years to work for Him.

On behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Mrs. C. Johnson (Vice President.)

Wm. Miles one of the Fire Victims Well-known in Dummer

WARSAW, Dec. 12.—The oyster supper and concert held under the auspices of the Baptist Church on Thursday last was a great success. The ladies of the congregation are to be congratulated on the splendid supper set forth. The following programme which began about eight o'clock was especially entertaining:

Solo—Mrs. George Taylor. "Canada."
Address—Rev. Mr. Clare.
Duet—Mrs. Taylor and Mr. Rufus Payne.
Solo—Miss Bessie Lonsdale.
Address—"The Work of the Canadian Army Service Corps"—Capt. Warren.
Quartette—Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Wason, Mr. Clare, Mr. Miller.
Solo—Mr. Roberts.
Address—Rev. Mr. Brown.
Trio—Mrs. Roberts, Mr. Clare, Mr. Roberts.

From the latest report it appears that Mr. William Miles is among those lost in the Quaker Oats Co., disastrous fire. Mr. Miles was a member of the Dummer Township Council for years, and had many friends in this community.

Captain Warren of the C.A.S.C. was in the village recruiting to-day.

Mr. Hilliard Payne returned home on Monday from Peterborough where he has been with the Quaker Oats Co.

His Lordship, the Bishop of Toronto visited St. Marks Church on Sunday. As it was "Bible Sunday" in the Anglican churches throughout the Dominion. His Lordship spoke eloquently on that subject.

In these days of uncertainty the spirit of speculation is forced on the man who keeps about, especially in a business sense. For instance it was this with a certain amount of forethought, that prompted us to lay in a stock of curtains when they could be had at a reasonable price, with the result that we can now offer them re-cleaned at the low price of 20 cents per pound. This will be of interest to housekeepers as will also the knowledge that the first shipment of new California raisins, seedless, seeded and seeds in, has arrived. We are also offering new stock dates, figs, prunes, peels, nuts, oranges and lemons.

In order to keep in line with the spirit of the times we have selected our Christmas Gift stock with the thought of thriftiness which pervades the country. This stock, therefore, will be found to consist of goods of lower price than during pre-war years yet capable of conveying between donor and recipient, fully as much sentiment and good-will as though the cost were double or treble as much. For instance, we have the finest stock of the daintiest handkerchiefs that Switzerland has yet produced, ranging in price from 5c. to 30c. each, china from Japan in the inexpensive hand-painted Nippon ware, Parisian ivory sets, hundreds of practical gifts such as sweater coats, mufflers, caps, gloves, mittens, silverware, table linens, waist lengths, sad irons, meat choppers, mustless mops, etc.

We also have in stock one only Gurney-Oxford 'Senior' Steel Range, the last of a most successful season in that line. This would make a handsome gift and will be sold at $38.50, being 20 p.c. less than it could be bought for to-day.

In case you contemplate brightening up a room or two at once, we mention that the new spring wall papers have arrived and are ready for inspection.

Should you desire a Columbia Grafanola, a Victrola, or a Heintzman piano or any special gift, we will get it for you.

WITH THE MIRTH MAKERS.

Teacher—"Now Johnnie, you may tell me the meaning of 'epercise'."

Johnnie—"Exercise is work a fellow likes to do because it isn't work."

Visitor—"Why, Willie, what are you crying about?"

Willie—"Cause I d-digged a h-hole in the back y-yard and m-mama won't let me b-bring it in the house."

Small Edna—"Oh, look at the cows!"

Small Edna—"But what's the difference?"

The shower was given in a unique manner, each lady drawing a favour attached to a string from behind a sliding door, Mrs. Coulter being the last, and drew into the room a cart laden with gifts and decorated with dozens of small Union Jacks. With the assistance of girl friends the gifts were untied, the cards read and presents duly admired, after which Mrs. Coulter in a neat speech thanked her friends.

The guests numbered about thirty. Mrs. Arthur Rutherford presided at the tea table, which was centred with an Irish lace tea cover and cut glass vase with large white 'mums. QUEER NEWSPAPER NAMES.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 14.—There is a man here whose chief joy is in a collection of newspaper titles.

Of course there are plenty of "Couriers," "Journals" and "Heralds" scattered over the country, and there are "Headlights," "Flashlights," "Bees," "Eagles," "Owls," "Mirrors" and "Newsletters," but when it comes to "Derricks," "Meddlers," "Telescopes," "Flags" and "Sunbeams," the class is more limited.

In Hot Springs there is published "The Arkansas Thomas Cat," and other titles just as unusual are, "The Sledge Hammer," "The Irrepressible," "The Silent Worker" and "Gall."

Frequently it is possible to tell from the title of a newspaper the state in which it is published. For instance "The Chieftain" is in Oklahoma, "The Rustler" and "The Lariat" are in Texas, "Big Hole Breezes" in Montana, and "The Round-up" in Wyoming.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THRILLING STORY OF CHARGE OF THE 38th CANADIAN BATTALION

Lieut. Hill Describes the Dash Over Parapet at the Ancre and Also Tells of an Exciting Time in Bringing in Dead Officer.

UNDER HEAVY SHELLING

A thrilling description of the charge made by the 38th Canadian Battalion, Ottawa, which resulted in a big gain for the British in the fighting on the Ancre River, as given by a well-known Peterborough officer, Lieut. Harold F. Hill, son of Mr. Wm. H. Hill of the Sun Life Assurance Company. Enclosed in the letter was a shoulder strap taken from one of the German prisoners and which was shown to the Examiner staff by Mr. Hill, yesterday. It is of grey material, embossed with red, a crown being part of the design.

Speaking of the charge Lieut. Hill says:

"The 38th went over the parapet on the 18th inst., and made a most successful attack, gaining about one thousand yards in all and about 350 prisoners. At 6.15 the start was made, and a few seconds later the artillery commenced. Their barrage was absolutely perfect, being more or less of a wall of iron. Needless to say the Boche could not face it, and hurriedly retired to his dugout, where they were bombarded out or came out and surrendered when the first wave reached them. Then their artillery started in, increasing the already terrific noise many times. The barrage was then lifted and the advance made to the next line. Here a more strenuous resistance was shown, but the objective was surely taken, and when the counter-attack was delivered some hours later it was easily beaten off with heavy losses. Our casualties were very heavy and the battalion certainly doesn't resemble its old-time self in the least. Two officers and myself now represent C Company, and one of the other companies is worse off, having only one, and he is a lieutenant.

'As you might imagine, the strain was something tremendous, but, as one man said in a letter to-night "It is a privilege to be in a battalion like the 38th after this and I'm proud to possess it.'

"The G. O. C., after extending numerous congratulations, said: "The 38th have always done just exactly what we thought they would do—never left a dirty billet, never objected to even the most strenuous work, and when they were called upon to go over they did so gloriously.'

"Now we are trying to re-establish ourselves as a battalion, and as soon as we receive a few drafts things had blown him up, for as you might least.

N.C.O.'s are as scarce as can be, and after all a battalion must depend to a huge extent on them. After the attack I had two left out of them; only one was killed, but some of the rest were badly injured.

Rescue of the Wounded.

"Four of the officers could not be taken out, and were left where they had fallen when the battalion was relieved, so the colonel asked (not ordered) me if I would mind taking charge of a party and do my best at it. Naturally, I readily consented, for they were all great friends and one was the O. C. of the company. So off we started. It was not a pleasant task by any means, for the Boche was shelling heavily, but I succeeded in locating three of the bodies and had them taken to the first field dressing station. I spent a lot of time searching for the other, but finally came to the conclusion that a shell ha blown him up, for, as you might imagine, the whole place was simply one shell hole running into the other and more being added every minute. I decided to get out of the danger zone as soon as possible, so with ten men to a body off we went. I had been congratulating myself on being so lucky in getting this far without a casualty and in fact thought we were all together safe, but it was not to be. We had covered about 300 yards and were getting on famously when it seemed to me as if every German battery on the front opened fire on us—apparently so, anyway—for the shells certainly changed the landscape around us and four landed in our midst. For some reason or other I escaped an injury, although I did hit the earth with considerable force, and the first words I could thunk of were "All right, beat it"; and luckily so, for shells still came over at a very unpleasant rate. About a second after there wasn't a person left nearby except another officer, and myself, and we were probably too stupefied to move. There were eleven casualties in all, six of which were very bad, but I got them out fairly rapidly under the circumstances, the men returning to assist as soon as they saw us there. I never saw so much grit in all my life. One little Scotsman named McCrae (a bad egg in Bermuda but a perfect wonder over here) had his leg broken below the knee and simply hanging about six inches above it, but though I ripped his clothes from the hip to the boots and fixed up his wounds as well as possible, he never uttered a sound and the others just as bad acted likewise. I never felt so bad about anything in all my life.

"Enclosed is one of the shoulder straps off one of the prisoners. I have a few more I will forward from time to time. I also secured a Mauser revolver with a few clips of ammunition, so in future some time I hope to have the pleasure of using it myself.

"Will close here. Hope this will give you some idea of what an attack means and is like. But I'm afraid I don't regard it in quite the manner required to write a really decent account.

"Your affectionate son,

"Harold."

ATTEMPT TO KEEP PRICE UP CHARGED

IMPERIAL OIL CO., HOWEVER, DENIES FIXING FIGURE AT WHICH ARTICLE MUST BE SOLD.

A few days ago the Minister of Labour was informed that the Brantford agent of the Imperial Oil Company had refused to sell coal oil to dealers in that town unless they agreed to keep the price up to the figure named by the company. He immediately wrote the agent for a statement of the case.

Yesterday he received a reply from the head office of the Imperial Oil Company in Toronto stating that they had no record of refusing to sell coal oil to any parties unless they kept up the price fixed by the company, but that they had written all their agents "advising them not to refuse to sell to any dealers."

The company also stated to the minister that it was not correct that they had a fixed price, and any dealer was at liberty to sell at any price he thought fit.

BRITAIN IS SENDING 10,000 CARS TO FRANCE

PARIS, Dec. 13.—The British government, it is understood here, has engaged to send immediately to France ten thousand freight cars, taken from British railroad companies. Ten thousand additional cars are to be sent over during the first months in 1917, with a certain number of locomotives. This is to be done, it is understood, because Great Britain's military operations in France have been requiring the use of 20,000 French freight cars.

A FREAKISH ANIMAL.

Boy—Mother sent me to show you the big bone you sent with the piece of beef this morning.

Butcher—Tell your mother the next time I have my cattle without bones I'll make her a present of a joint.

Boy—Yes, and the next time you find a bit of beef with a mutton bone in it, she'd like to buy the whole carcass as a curiosity!

BAZAAR A GREAT SUCCESS

Gala and festive is the scene at the rooms in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, where the bazaar in aid of the Building Fund of the Church of the Immaculate Conception is being held. Twelve tasteful booths, decorated regardless of trouble and expense, present a most fascinating scene and are in charge of the following:

Cigar booth—Miss Margaret McGrath, Mrs. A. Gainey, Mrs. L. B. Tracey and Miss Irene Hickey.

Candy and Ice Cream—Mrs. Abraham, Mrs. Rollie Hunter, Mrs. H. Quinlan, Mrs. Giroux, Misses Aileen Sullivan, Genevive Sullivan, Stella Morrow, K. O'Brien, Marcelle McNulty and Beatrice LaLande.

Fish Pond — Miss Annie Simons, Mrs. Lane, Miss J. O'Heron and Miss Ada Maher.

Handkerchiefs and Boudoir Caps—Mrs. David Conroy, Mrs. T. Cleary, Miss Josephine Conroy, Miss Madeline Rutherford, Miss Kathleen Conroy and Mrs. J. McCabe.

Doll Booth—Mrs. Jas. Malone, Mrs. Primeau.

Clothing — Mrs. J. B. White, Mrs. Tom McGrath, Mrs. T. Turcotte, Mrs. D. Maloney, Mrs. Cronin, Miss N. Devlin, Miss Crowley.

Fancy Work — Mesdames J. C. Sullivan, J. Coughlin, Popham, Girard, Legender, J. F. Crowley and Miss May Sullivan.

Fancy bags—Mrs. J. Dunn, Mrs. Frank Kane.

Sodality Booth, containing cards, stationery etc.—Misses M. Coughlin, E. Derocher, M. Wolfe, Madge Kelly, L. Hummell, and D. O'Heron.

Religious Booth—Miss M. Kylie, and A. Tobin.

Lottery—Mesdames B. Allan, J. Devlin and O'Rourke.

The prize table is in charge of Mrs G. Clancy.

Every booth has its particular fascination, but the fish pond is perhaps the busiest place between 4 o'clock and night, as scores of little school children come back again and again. In the 'boudoir booth' are some exquisite cape, the work of the Sisters in the different orders.

Another attractive feature is the table 'jockey racing,' in charge of Miss M. O'Connell and Miss M. Lynch.

The dinner and supper room continues to be a great success, and the receipts and comments most gratifying to Mrs. J. J. Doris, the convener, and the ladies assisting.

Fixtures at the Bazaar.

The electric fixtures in connection with the Bazaar of the Church of The Immaculate Conception, were all installed and donated by Grant and Thorpe, electricians, and have produced fine results.

The decorating of the Grill Room of the Bazaar was in charge of Mrs. Alex. Grant, assisted by Mrs. W. S. Merrell and Mr. A. J. Grant.

St. Alban's Mission Concert For Building Fund A Success

St. Alban's Mission Building Fund went off to a good start last night, when a most delightful concert was given to a large and appreciative audience in the Orange Hall, Brown-town. Mr. Spence, in a few brief remarks, explained the object of the concert, which was organized by Mrs. Poole, a valued member of St. Albans'.

The attendance at the Mission had grown to such an extent since its inauguration two years ago that the present building was quite inadequate for the needs and it is hoped that sufficient funds may shortly be raised to put up a more suitable building.

This was the only church in that locality, and was meeting a great want, as evidenced by the attendance. He most sincerely thanked the audience for attending the concert, and also the artistes who had come so far to entertain them, and assured them they were assisting in a worthy cause.

The enthusiasm evinced by them in responding so willingly when requested was most encouraging to him and deeply appreciated. The numbers on the programme were of a high order, and were all well received, Mr. Liddell's Scotch songs being particularly enjoyed.

The following is the programme:

Piano solo—Mrs. Poole.
Drill—St. Albans' Boy Scouts.
Vocal duet—Mrs. Scholley and Mr. Ridyard.
Recitation—Mr. J. John.
Comic song—Mr. M. E. Ketcheson.
Violincello solo—Mr. R. Farthing.
Vocal duet—The Misses Hartshorn.
Song—Mr. Albert Lee.
Song—Mrs. Jones.
Song—Mr. Liddell.
Recitation—Mr. J. John.
Song—Miss Hartshorn.
Song—Mrs. Scholley.
'Cello solo—Mr. R. Farthing.
Song—Mrs. Jones.
Comic song—Mr. M. E. Ketcheson.
Vocal duet—Mrs. Scholley and Mr. Ridyard.
Song—Mr. Liddell.
Song—Mr. Ridyard.
Recitation—Mr. Spence.

Jury Dismissed Charge of Theft Against H. Conners

After being out about fifteen minutes yesterday afternoon the jury in the case of the King vs. Hugh Conners, returned a verdict of not guilty. The defendant was charged with the theft of a quantity of lead pipe from Mr. George MacDonald's house on London street. The evidence disclosed the fact that while the house was being rebuilt, Mr. Conners had removed a quantity of pipe and subsequently sold it to Florence & Rollie, junk dealers.

Defendant's explanation was that he considered the pipe as debris or waste and that there was nothing wrongful in taking it away. It appeared, in evidence that he was still employed by Mr. MacDonald, and was giving good satisfaction. Character evidence was furnished by other citizens, including Mr W. H. Moore, Crown Attorney Hanton conducted the prosecution and Mr. F. D. Kerr the defence.

Music, Xmas and Victrolas

Go Hand-in-Hand

Picture the glee the little tots, and their joyous rompings on Christmas morn, when they find a Victrola in the home. Could you purchase anything that would furnish them with greater amusement? The delight will not be confined to the children—music has its charm for grown-ups, and particularly those who dance. The Victrola will furnish you with dance selections from such bands as Sousa's, Pryor's & Conway's; Orchestras, McKee's, Victor Herbert and London New Symphony.

REMEMBER:

All talking machines are not Victrolas as many people suppose. There is only one Victrola that is the Victor. VICTOR VICTROLAS have become so widely known and used that many people make this error.

Thiepval, Taken by the British, Typifies "Abomination of Desolation"

SO SAYS SOLDIER WHO LIVED THERE

BRITISH SHELLS CHURNED GROUND, ALMOST OBLITERATING THE GERMAN TRENCHES.

(By an ex-Inhabitant in the London Mirror.)

Before Thiepval was taken I watched it from an observation post, and saw our great shells constantly falling into it, hurling up columns of earth and smoke, and I wondered what the place in reality must be like.

To me then it looked simply a great brown hill, with a few stunted trees and a tiny red mound at the top, and all around its slope one narrow belt of green.

A few days later Thiepval was taken—I am proud to say, by our division—and the newspapers were full of the clan of our troops, the stability of the tanks, the strength of the fortress.

I lived just long enough in Thiepval to take a less romantic view of affairs. When first I walked in Thiepval it remained [illegible] to lay the interpretation of that mysterious phrase, "the abomination of desolation." The ground as far as the eye could see was broken, every yard of it, by shell-holes—of all sizes up to the vast 15in. shell-craters which looked more like the effects of deadly land mines; hardly a sign of a trench was left; everywhere I stumbled across the bodies of Englishmen and Germans lying in every attitude of triumph, agony and resignation (one was lying with an open Bible in his hand); the red mound that had once been the Chateau was no more than a mound with here or three hearded, tired men sheltering behind it; the famous cellars all choked and buried now.

GERMAN DUG-OUTS.

In the midst of all this chaos I stumbled across remains of houses—or saw pieces of an iron bedstead lying on the side of an old trench. Meaningless German signposts pointed to trenches that exist no more; I found strange siege engines nestling in hidden corners and shelters—minenwerfer of all shapes and sizes, including one great wooden cannon reminiscent of the days of Crecy and Agincourt. In places where I least expected them I found German dug-outs—one full of stores, and great cases that had never been opened, and silent as the grave. I shouted down them. "Is anyone there?" and for answer came sometimes silence, sometimes the smell of death sometimes an English voice, "We're wounded of the——Regiment; come in and join us, pal!"

We have all heard of those wonderful dug-outs, and the stories are not exaggerated.

I have lived in one that had before been a hospital—within 300 yards of what had been the German front line. It would hold almost a company; had electric light fittings with a dynamo and oil engine; oxygen apparatus; stacks of splints and dressings and drugs; acetylene lamps. All the beds were stretchers if need be. We found there a book neatly bound and very well "got up" which contained views of the various places occupied during this war by the German army. Amongst them were views of Thiepval Chateau—and one was bound to admit that we have made a good deal more mess of the place in retaking it than the did in taking it!

FINDING THE WAY.

The most hopeful thing about Thiepval is the map of it, which I have known to occasion a little mild humor.

It is amusing, for example, to be given instruction by someone who has no conception of the real state of affairs, that all you have to do is to walk up [illegible] main street till you reach the church and then turn to the left; in time I identified the main street, but to the best of my knowledge I never saw one stone of the church. Small wonder that we were for ever helping wanderers on their way, more especially at night, when it was very dark and when rain had made the ground underfoot a morass of mud; and there was always the hazard of a large shiny green pond for the unwary!

The only useful and sure landmarks in Thiepval now are the red Chateau and unusually large piles of dead. In time, I suppose, the Chateau will finally collapse and the dead will all be buried (I had some buried myself as well as time permitted), and when all these landmarks are gone—well, I for one, shan't recognise my old home at all.

CANNED GOODS ARE UNDER WEIGHT NOW

Government Will Take Action to See That Proper Weight is Stated.

It is understood that the government will introduce at the next session of parliament legislation to deal effectively with the situation created by packers reducing the contents of cans, packages, parcels and wrappers. This has had a vital effect upon the cost of living. What purport, for instance to be one pound packages of oats, biscuits and other food products are found to be several ounces short, and what is sold as a three pound can of tomatoes, peas or corn, is found to be as much as half a pound short in gross weight, besides containing more water than was formerly the case.

The proposed legislation will follow the American law, which compels those putting up articles of food to state on the outside of the cans, or other receptacles, what the net weight of the contents is.

All the members of Duke of Manchester L. O. L. No. 50 are requested to attend the annual meeting for election and installation of officers, Thurs., Dec. 14th.

AN EARNEST APPEAL

Every Young Man Should Read This

Dear Sir,—May I be permitted to use your valuable paper as a medium to convey a personal message to the eligible men, and particularly the young men, of Peterborough and surrounding localities?

In the following paragraphs, I speak as a young man to others of my class and hope I may be able to imbue them with the same spirit that actuates myself; to reveal to them the path of duty; to impress upon them the seriousness or gravity of the situation on all fronts; and arouse their chivalry and sense of honour— and they have both—to such a degree that they will feel they cannot longer resist that persuasive appeal of conscience that prompts them to enlist.

In the light of developments in the European theatre of war, in the past week, we must admit our enemies have made important gains. If they can hold, in the east, what they now have, till spring, it is beyond the power of the greatest military critic to forsee, what will result from the resumption of their campaign at that time. They have over-run Roumania; conquered Serbia; ravaged and pillaged Belgium; devastated a large portion of France, and are to-day in possession of much of the most fertile and richest mineral territory in the realms of our allies. They are daily transporting into Germany hundreds, possibly thousands, of helpless, hapless Belgians as slaves, not to labour in the commercial and industrial vocations of peace times, but to toil in munition plants, turning out missiles and death-dealing projectiles to slay their own kith and kin, who are fighting like heroes to defend them and their national liberties from the pulverizing grinding of the Prussian heel of tyranny.

The heroic sons of Belgium and France, assisted by the intrepid sons of Britain and her allies, have arrested this German monster in his wild, rapacious career. They hold him fast in a vise-like grip, as he wriggles and squirms to extricate himself, but they can't continue so to do, indefinitely. That squelching grasp must relax through sheer depletion of the ranks of casualties, inflicted, unless you and I speedily discern our duty and rally to their support. Neutral nations are protesting against such appalling outrages. Young men of Peterborough, do you by silence and inaction condone such diabolical treatment of our non-combatant allies? Can you and I as men, men with true British blood coursing through our veins, assume an air and attitude of placid indifference, follow our usual money-making vocations, and agree to permit these outrages to go on unchallenged? No! Certainly not! We as men, and allies, must protest, and protest with such vigour that "Billy the Bully" will think an earthquake has struck his throne and it's tottering to an ignominious fall. The best way to manifest our contempt for German kultur and impress it upon the Kaiser, with telling effect, is to don the khaki and play the man at a man's job. Don't leave it for the married men who have wives, and possibly little tots to care for. We are free, no home cares. Let the married men, the ineligible men, the returned soldier, or the women remain at home to manufacture munitions. Let them make the balls and we'll go overseas and fire them. Munition work is a woman's job in Germany; why not here?

It shouldn't be necessary for the young single man to be "button-holed" to enlist. Those now recruiting find it a disagreeable and unpleasant duty, and at the end of a whole day's faithful work, possibly only two or three recruits have been attested. Boys, these men have not donned khaki to go out and accost you on the street but to take the field. They can't train nor take the field till the ranks are filled, and they won't be filled till you perceive your duty and get into khaki. Your hesitation and indecision hold up the whole machinery of war. No drill, consequence, no assistance to the boys at the front, nor defence of the people at home, while all the time, the German army, one of conscripts is kept up to strength and your own hearths endangered.

Can any human words of entreaty arouse you from your lethargy? Boys, if this war is lost the fault is not that of the man in khaki. It's yours! You can't deny the fact. The destiny of Britain and her allies is in YOUR hands. Our freedom, purchased by the life blood of our forefathers is now maintained by that of your fathers, brothers or relatives, on every front. Our fate, your fate, now hang in the balance. You and you alone are the deciding factor. With awe and suspense we await your decision. Will you be true to your country, your own conscience, and your own brothers and friends now on the firing line, spring into khaki and by immediate action turn the balance in our favour, or will you by careless indifference, simply do nothing, fling your blood-bought heritage to the winds, and wreck the whole Empire? Young men, an awful responsibility is yours. You have reached the dividing of the ways. Two courses are open before you. Which will you choose? You can either enlist and help us— your old chums and associates — and your brothers in Europe, to preserve the grand old British Empire intact, or you can remain in multi, have a good time, earn big money and thus "do your bit" for Germany as effectively as if you were in the German ranks. If you're not for us, boys, you're against us. If against us you should be interned. Where are you? Are you in your proper place? Recruits should not be numbered by twos and threes each day but by as many score. You may be doing well, financially, but do not fail to recognize the fact, that possibly you owe your present success to the sacrifice some other fellow made who is now at the front, or on his way, while you hold down his job. If our heritage is worth fighting for let us hasten to relieve the boys at the front and take them out of the trenches for a rest at least. Many hands make light work and quick work so don't in freedom's name and for humanity's sake clog the wheels of recruiting and military training any longer by your tardiness in "signing up" with some corps, but preferably the 247th Battalion.

Boys, do you know if you would only rally to the colours, as young men of snap and vigorous manhood should, we could throw such numbers into the field and bring such pressure to bear on the German lines, that they'd soon collapse, and this war be ended in a few months. The trouble is we're trying to do it by a too piece-meal a method. We can't use more men than we've got, and at present we can't get men unless they volunteer. If they won't volunteer conscription is inevitable, for men and still more men we must have. Young men of Peterborough do you relish the idea of being conscripts? In a nation with voluntary service, a service that appeals to man's reason, dignity, sense of honour and duty the conscript is the subject of reproach. He is despised and hated by his volunteer comrades at the front and reviled by the people at home. He is ostracized and even after the war, when he returns to civil life the stigma, conscript, will remain with him as long as he lives. His own conscience will be his worst and most ruthless accuser, and smite him daily for not having heeded its pleading to volunteer to do his duty, when he could have done so with credit to himself, rather than hesitate, be forced, and lose all claim to the honour of defending his country. The conscript can claim no credit for being in the battle, though he assumes as much risk and endures as much hardship, as his volunteer comrade by his side, so come along boys, every young man of good strong physique, who loves honour, justice and British law and liberty, join the 247th Battalion and let us go NOW and forever crush this German menace out of existence. It can be done. It must and shall be done, and we're the boys that are going to do it. Young man, we want, we need and we solicit YOUR help. Is it ours? Let your name on the service roll be your answer.

CANUCK.

What Is The Fleet For? Prussians Ask

LONDON, Dec. 13.—"If we really have a fleet what on earth is it doing?" This question, according to a neutral correspondent, is being asked on an average twice a day by every German in the fatherland. After many months of "energetic waiting and gallant watching" in the Kiel Canal the Admiralty has made an attempt to answer this question by permitting a few discreetly chosen journalists to pay a visit to the barnacle fleet, of which the Berlin Tageblatt gives the following account:

"We were first conducted to a famous battle ship, whose name I may not mention, but when I saw it the word 'Skager Rack' immediately flashed in my mind. I asked the sailors, 'Were you there?' and they nodded with brilliant eyes, and were about to tell me their impressions when a submarine appeared and gave our conversation another turn.

"Soon afterward we left for the North Sea for shooting practice, but I was informed by an officer that they were only allowed to shoot with small calibre guns because every shot from the heavy artillery costs an enormous amount of money.

"You see these targets in the distance?' said one of the seamen. 'Well we were about as far as that from the English fleet on Jutland day.' The preparations for the shooting seemed to take an interminable time, but at last all was ready.

"Only two shots. I was informed were to be fired, and to my great disappointment one of these missed the target.

"Our gallant men, as is their rightful due, fare sumptuously on board. For luncheon we ate sauerekraut with bacon—such bacon as one never hears of on land except in books of fairy tales. Our tea was on an equally luxurious scale, and after justice had been done to it we were treated to some night shooting practice, with the aid of the strange mechanism of the searchlights.

"Each ship fired one single shot, and then the searchlights died down and all was darkness, and I joined the commander in a dinner fit for princes."

Dyspeptics Should Avoid Drugs And Medicines

Try a Little Magnesia Instead.

Some people instinctively shut their eyes to danger, and it may be that instinct, or custom or habit, causes dyspeptics to take drugs, patent foods and medicines, artificial digestants, etc.

But closing your eyes does not banish the danger, and it is certain that neither drugs nor medicines possess the power to destroy the harmful excessive acid in the stomach, which is the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia. They may give temporary relief, but ever increasing quantities must be taken, and all the time the acid remains in the stomach as dangerous as ever.

Physicians know this and that is why their advice so often to sufferers from digestive and stomach trouble is "Just get about an ounce of pure bisurated magnesia from your druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water immediately after every meal. This will instantly neutralize all the harmful acid in the stomach and stop all food fermentation, thus enabling you to enjoy hearty meals without experiencing the least pain or unpleasantness afterward.

MAYOR DUFFUS THANKS MAYOR OF LINDSAY

His Worship Mayor R. Kylie, of Lindsay, has received the following letter from Mayor Jos. J. Duffus, of Peterborough:

Dear Mr. Mayor,—The help which you so kindly sent to Peterborough yesterday at the time of the disastrous fire in the Quaker Oats Mills, and the sympathy which you expressed in your telegram, are highly appreciated in Peterborough. The members of your fire department who came to our aid with the motor truck and hose were of material assistance, for while the mills could not be saved they aided our department and citizens to save other property that was in grave danger of destruction.

Kindly accept our sincere thanks for your assistance and sympathy.

Jos. J. Duffus, Mayor.

ABOLISH HANDKERCHIEFS FOR HYGIENIC REASONS

Dr. F. Robbins of New York Says Handkerchiefs are Source of Infection.

Dr. F. Robbins, a well-known New York physician, urges the abolition of the pocket-handkerchief, because he firmly believes it to be a source of infection long after a person has recovered from such diseases as infantile paralysis and even common colds.

"The day will come," he says, "when the customary cotton rag is replaced by the cheap and clean Japanese paper napkin, which is burned after it has been used. Infants and children are helpless against the rubbing of strange handkerchiefs over their perspiring and grimy faces. The public roller-towel of the past was innocuous as compared to the family pocket-handkerchief. Bitter experience will drive home the lesson that neglected noses, mouths, and throats are largely if not exclusively responsible for the ultimate crippling of the unfortunate victims of disease and ignorance."

Men of Position Sent To Labour In Germany

HAVRE, Dec. 14.—The Belgian government, through its organized system of obtaining information of what is taking place in Belgium, has received lists of persons deported from various localities, their occupations and information as to whether they were working or not at the time of the deportation and whether they were of independent means or not.

Some of these lists which have just arrived from Nivelles, south of Brussels, show that among the deported were forty-two persons of position who owned property and who were neither idle nor indigent, such as farmers, small shopkeepers, the hotel proprietor, the station master and his principal assistant, students and artists. Another list from Nivelles names thirty-nine persons who were employed and were making a sufficient livelihood, but who were carried off to labour in Germany.

"The townspeople of Jamappes," says an eyewitness' account received here, "were assembled and examined as to their strength, age and general appearance, very much as though they were cattle. Five hundred were picked for transportation. Each was asked to sign a paper saying that he engaged voluntarily for work in Germany. The men were told that "if you sign, it will be easy to place you in Germany. If you refuse, you will probably be sent to the front to work in the trenches." Few persons signed the paper. One man of forty-two who signed was overcome by remorse two days later and hanged himself."

Numerous narratives received by this "underground railway" describe trains passing through towns packed with men who were being deported. Sometimes, it is said, they were singing the "Brabanconne" the Belgian national hymn, or the "Marseillaise," and sometimes they were cursing Germany and shaking their fists at the German sentinels and shouting insults at them.

TWO MORE BODIES FOUND IN RUINS

L. Robbins, slight burns, somewhat better.

John Weir. A little better.

J. C. Kemp, severe burns. Not out of danger.

R. Chowen Somewhat better.

Will Use Dynamite.

A consignment of dynamite has been brought in from Bobcaygeon to be used in the demolition of the standing ruins of the Quaker Oats. The levelling of the six-storey warehouse will be a big item in itself. The building is in such a condition that a well placed charge of explosive may have the desired result. Fire is still burning in some parts of the warehouse building, despite the fact that several streams of hose have been playing on the ruins since Monday. The work of digging out the boiler room is proceeding with all the rapidity possible under the circumstances. Before the week is out it should be possible to determine the actual condition of this part of the building, together with the boilers. So far they appear to be intact.

James Foster whose body was found this morning in the boiler room, was born in England 64 years ago. Besides his wife, Mary Langley he leaves a family of ten children, who hold a record for military service. Four sons: James, Matthew, William are with English regiments and John with the 8th C.M.R. on active service, while there are four son-in-law's overseas: C. M. Orford, C.M.R., Prisoner of War; F. J. Hall 8th C.M.R.; Pte. Hallett with an English regiment and William Mayall a reservist. Two sons George and Thomas reside at home.

The funeral notice will be published later.

The funeral of the late Thos. Parsons, who died on Tuesday from injuries received in Monday's fire, was held this afternoon from his late residence, Chamberlain street, at 3.30. A service conducted by the Rev. Mr. Mackenzie was held at the house before proceeding to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Philip Carboni, 72 Victoria Ave., another victim of Monday's catastrophe, was buried this morning at 9 o'clock. A service was held at St. Peter's Church before proceeding to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Inventory Will Be Taken In January

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, December 14.—The Ottawa Government's inventory of Canadian man power will be attempted during the first week of the new year. Theoretically all Canadian males between 16 and 65 are to fill out a card stating their business, their physical condition, and their willingness "or otherwise" to do the necessary war work at their present rate of pay, if not now so engaged. The cards are to be distributed bythe postmaster with assistance of whatever volunteer helpers he can muster and returned in ten days. The Government, however, has provided no penalty for their non-return.

Sends Congratulations to Lloyd George

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Ont., December 14.—Prior to his departure for England yesterday, Sir Geo. Foster, as Acting Prime Minister, sent the following cable to Lloyd George:

"Canadian Government sends hearty congratulations. Canada stands with you and the Empire for a vigorous prosecution of the war until complete victory is attained."

SENTENCED TO IMPRISONMENT FOR SIX MONTHS

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—In case of Lieut.-Col. Pagnuelo of Montreal is pretty well understood that the sentence imposed upon him by the court martial under Generald Lessard is six months' imprisonment. Chief charge against Pagnuelo was that he encouraged men of the 206th Regiment to desert.

It is announced that legislation to be introduced at the approaching session will include bill to provide for the settlement of returned soldiers on lands.

suggested that arrangements be made to give as many as possible of such senior officers a chance to go to France in order that they may personally witness operations there before returning to Canada. Some may be given employment in England, but many will go back to Canada, where they may again take civil employment or be used in assisting further recruiting.

Mrs. Bartlett, Murray Street, has received word from Trooper C. Bartlett to the effect that he is in the hospital. The nature of his affliction was not stated.

AS THE STORY GOES.

The prison visitor on his usual round noticed that a new man occupied a cell that had been empty for some time.

"My friend," he began, "may I ask what brought you here?"

"The same thing that brought you here," replied the convict; "a desire to poke my nose into other people's business, only I generally used to go in by the basement window."

Once in a great while you meet a bright woman who successfully boasts of the skeleton in her closet.

DR. AMYS WILL ORDER MEAT SEIZED IF OFFERED FOR SALE

Dr. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, accompanied by Dr. Clinton, District Officer of Health, and Dr. Baker, a prominent veterinary surgeon, conferred with Magistrate Dumble this morning at the conclusion of police court, regarding the remains of the meat, the condition of which formed the subject of a police court case on Wednesday.

Dr. Amys stated that he simply desired to now his position in regard to the disposal of this quarter of beef. Magistrate Dumble replied that he had given his judgment yesterday on the evidence produced. It was shown that the animal had a tumour but this was not regarded as a disease. Dr. Amys replied that both Dr. Johnston and himself had given the opinion that the carcass was unfit for human food, and the Magistrate recalled the Ottawa report that was practically entirely to the contrary. Dr. Amys stated that the officials had seen only a small sample of the meat and proceeding to the personal consideration stated that he did not think Magistrate Dumble would eat the meat.

He felt it his duty to prevent that beef from being presented for sale, and he desired to know Dumble's attitude toward that action.

The Magistrate replied that Dr. Amys would have to use his own discretion, and the M. O. H. replied that he would order the meat confiscated if it was offered for sale.

RINK IS FLOODED HOCKEY PRACTICE FRIDAY

Mr. Jack Meharry has taken advantage of the cold snap to secure a good foundation of ice at Brock street rink, and if the cold weather continues, the rink will be open for skaters on Saturday night. The first hockey practices will be held to-morrow (Friday) night, both of the 247th intermediates and the Peterborough juniors will be out. The management of the Peterborough juniors invites all candidates for the team to turn out. Youngsters who wish to try for the position of goalkeeper are especially wanted, as a new goalkeeper will be needed this winter. There promises to be a merry battle for positions all along the line.

Urgent Need of More Tobacco For Boys at the Front

Mrs. H. A. Cranfield, Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—We are in most urgent need of your further help. In spite of the fact that a small ration of tobacco is issued to the troops, and in spite of all our efforts to supplement this by means of voluntary effort, there is a great shortage of tobacco amongst the Canadian boys at the front, and I have just received an urgent appeal for increased supplies.

You are doubtless aware that our work has now received official approval and that we are authorized to speak of our Tobacco Fund as "Approved by the British War Office." This shows the value attached by the authorities to the work we have accomplished.

Sir Edgard Ward, the Director-General of Voluntary Organizations in connection with the Record Office, writes:

"I am anxious that your Club should know how great is the demand for cigarettes, tobacco, etc., in the various theatres of war, and also in the Army Hospitals. The assistance given by your Club in meeting these demands has indeed been excellent, and I know how fully it is appreciated. I want however, to appeal to you to continue and, if possible, extend this branch of your work, by providing even greater quantities of tobacco and cigarettes for general distribution to the troops. Nothing is more appreciated by our soldiers than gifts of this nature.

I am enclosing you one of our collecting books, and shall be glad if you will take immediate steps to circulate it amongst your friends, who probably at this particular time of year will be more willing than ever to assist.

It is simply dreadful to think that our boys are suffering for the need of tobacco, and it is almost impossible to over estimate the comfort, and help, which is afforded the men when they are kept well supplied.

If you can further help us by giving on the enclosed card the names and addresses of some of your friends likely to be interested in the Fund, I shall be happy to send them collecting books by mail. Believe me,

Yours faithfully,
Francis R. Jones,
Organizing Secretary

BODY LEAVES FOR TROY, N.Y.

The body of Mrs. Louise Kleeman, who died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Loescher, 135 Hunter street, was taken this morning to Troy, N.Y., to be cremated, thence to Schnectady, where interment will take place.

It was stated in the Examiner Tuesday that Mrs. Loescher had been reluctant in giving information to Dr. Eastwood when he was called in. This apparently was a mis-statement of the facts. The inquest will be resumed a week from to-day.

If it were not for his wife and the banks men the average citizen would be able to save a lot of money.

Civil Action Arising Out of Land Deal

had you remain?"

"I think so."

A little later witness offered to look some questions up in a book and invite Mr. O'Connell to continue the cross-examination while he was seeking the information.

"Can you answer questions and look up the information in the book at the same time" inquired the Counsel, with signs of sarcasm in his voice.

"Well, I can answer most of the questions you ask," returned Harris slowly to the amusement of the court.

THE JURY.

PLAINTIFF'S EVIDENCE.

George Thomas Barrett, of Ottawa, the Plaintif was called. He owned some land in Saskatoon, known as Tuxeda Park. Here witness produced a map of Saskatoon, and upon it was shown in a square the property known as Tuxedo Park. This was shown to the Jury by Mr. O'Connell. The Park property, comprising 160 acres and 1400 lots, was within the city limits. They were put on the market in 1912. The witness produced the agreement and identified it. Upon the agreement $490.69 was still owing.

An advertising pamphlet produced was admitted by the witness to be the same as one used by him in selling the lots. The Walsh Land Company had authority to sell this property of appoint agents to sell it.

"Did you know this agent Hale was dismissed on account of misrepresenting?" asked Mr. Gordon

"Not until recently."

"Is Tuxedo Park a Park?"

"Just as it is called a park."

"Is it built up?"

"No."

A MIS-STATEMENT.

Saskatoon had a population of 16,000 in 1912, and the area was 3 1-2 square miles. He was not interested in the Walsh Land Company.

"What was paid for the Tuxedo Park?"

"One hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

Witness admitted that in the agreement there was a clause by which the purchaser could return the land and get his money back if he wasn't satisfied. If Heard had ever asked for this privilege witness had never been advised of it.

Mr. Gordon produced letter dated October 1912, in which Heard mentioned the refund clause in the agreement, but witness said this letter was only forwarded to him by the Walsh Land Company. Here a letter was produced from the Walsh Company to Heard, telling Heard that the man Hale who sold him the lots had been dismissed. This was the only sub-division in the West, witness had put on the market.

This concluded the Plaintiff's case.

The first witness for the defence was Mr. Norman Harris, until recently, financial Editor of the Saturday Night, Toronto, and the author of the "Gold and Dross" column of the paper. In 1912 witness went, West to look into the real estate situation for the Saturday Night, and he visited Tuxedo Park, Saskatoon. It was 2 1-4 miles from the Post Office, and about a mile and a half of this distance was over the prairie. The building area was exhausted a half mile from the Post Office. There was no car line in Saskatoon at that time. As to the words "Saskatoon's Best Residential Property" in the pamphlet, Mr. Harris said that that was an absolute mis-statements. And as to the claim of "being convenient to the business section" the witness said that this was "another absurdity". Instead of being the best residential property it was a mile and a half from the best residental property. There were no buildings near it. In 1912 there was nothing on it to indicate that it was a residential sub-division.

VISITED THE WEST

To Mr. O'Connell, Mr. Harris said that for seven years he was financial Editor of the Saturday Night. He resigned some months ago for his own benefit. On his trip to the West he examined several hundred sub-divisions. In thirteen years the population of Saskatoon had increased from a few hundred to many thousands.

"WELL BUILT UP."

The second witness for the defence was Bert Heard, the Defendant, who had purchased this property. He is a grocer in this city. He purchased the property from an agent named Hale who represented Mr. Barrett. Hale told him the property was well built up, and within five minutes walk of the Post Office. The Post Office, said Hale, was in the centre of the city. Said Tuxedo Park was in the central part of the city and was built up on the east, south and west. Hale produced a map of the City of Saskatoon, and Tuxedo Park appeared to be in the centre of the city. There were marks representing houses, which were particularly thick on the east side. The map showed a street car line running to and past the park. In May 1913 he stopped his payments because he got information that there was no car line or houses near the park, and other information absolutely discrediting Hale's report.

A letter was produced which Mr. Heard identified as one he received from the Walsh Land Company. It said that Hale, the agent who had sold the lots to Heard had been dismissed on account of the methods he used in selling the real estate.

PERCHERONS WIN FAVOUR IN ENGLAND

Their Superiority as Artillery Horses Leads to Importation of Stallions And Mares for Breeding.

One of the interesting results of the war in Europe is the introduction of French Percheron horses in England for breeding purposes and the prospects of an English Percheron stud book in the near future. The active, docile, powerful, willing French artillery horses have made a hit with British army men in France ever since they first came in contact with them, and some of the progressive English live stock journals have for some time advocated the importation of Percheron stallions.

At a recent sale held by the French government the initiative was taken by Lord Lonsdale, Major General Birdwood and Henry Overman, the latter an arm yveterinary surgeon. They purchased two gray stallions and several mares, with a view to trying out the French breed in Britain, where there is a conviction among military authorities that the half-breed Percheron fills the bill "best of the many types bought for us the world over since the outbreak of war," as one critic has said.

Many of the grade Percherons purchased for the British army have gone from the United States, and of these the London Live Stock Journal says: "The best of the artillery horses imported from America are as good as anything produced in the United Kingdom, being sound, strong, docile and active. They show strong indications of Percheron blood."

Black varnished leather is dotted with white or green or bright blue or other sharply contrasting colour and made up either plain black leather or with black silk, sometimes with silk of the colour of the dot.

3 CLUBS PAY HIS SALARY.

National Commission Orders That Ted Cather be Paid.

The National Commission has guaranteed Ted Cather, the former Toronto, Montreal, Jersey City and Boston player, full salary under his iron-clad contract for $2,000 during the season.

The case is a complex affair, as the Braves originally sent Cather, along with Moran and Whaling, to the Vernon Pacific Coast League team in payment for Outfielder Wilhoit.

Cather's release from Jersey City to Vernon was brought about by the Braves, who entered into an agreement with Vernon by which that club should pay Cather $525 a month and Boston would make up the rest of the contract.

Later Vernon decided that it could not afford to pay that much salary, and Cather subsequently went to Montreal, where he is getting $250 a month.

The commission has ordered that Vernon must pay Cather the difference between $525 and $250 a month, in accordance with their Boston agreement, while the Braves still make up the rest of the contract. Three clubs, therefore split up Cather's salary.

WHAT MILADY SEES.

That the football season has killed 15.

That the new slogan runs, "Ballots for Both!"

That white cats are fashionable this season.

That the department stores are feeling the paper famine.

That rabbits are soon to be turned into "hot dogs."

That in the last 12 months the anti-suffragists in the States have had seven victories—New York, New Jersey, Iowa, Massachusetts, West Virginia, South Dakota, Pennsylvania—and no defeats.

That a husband considers it an insult to be told he's "just like a man."

That it is advised that every owner of a plot 50 by 100 should keep a dozen hens.

That if your clothes stay in style three months you are lucky.

WOMEN RAISING $10,000

Equal-suffragists in Monroe county have begun to raise $10,000 for work in this campaign district between now and the election in 1917. As Rochester is the largest city in the district, a good share of this money must come from here, it is believed. The effort to raise the fund was announced yesterday at a meeting of the Woman's Suffrage party, held in the headquarters in the Mercantile building, by the treasurer, Miss Rebecca Rochford.

Heavy Dynamite Charges In Ruined Wall Failed To Bring It Down

The solicitude of the Quaker Oats Company for their employees, the factor that formed the industrial esprit de corps in other days, is the same spirit that actuates the work of recovery of the dead in the ruins on the north side of the plant. Since Tuesday morning, as previously stated, gangs of men as large as the space could accommodate with facility, have been removing the debris. The men were completely equipped with the necessary tools, rubber boots and clothing, electric lamps were installed, and the work has been hastened with night and day shifts. It is not the warmest spot in the country up on the river bank but the men are well clad and even at night the hill affords considerable protection. That the despatch with which the rescue work has been sprung from the management, is the obvious source, and Mr. Denham has made frequent trips to the plant every day since Tuesday morning. The assistant superintendent, Mr. George Edwards, has given this work his particular attention and made conditions as comfortable as possible for the workmen.

In the same scale might be mentioned the promptitude with which the families of the injured and dead employees have received attention. Their needs have been provided for until the established forms of relief are brought into operation. In fact it is only in this late hour of trial that the happy conditions of the regular order of industry at the Quaker Oats Company as they existed between the employees and department heads have been brought to light.

The present removal of debris from the north end of the plan around the old engine room will be continued until the missing bodies have been recovered. Such is the urgent duty. Of the subsequent activity there is no definite or official information yet.

BLASTING HIGH WALL.

Mr. Wm. Drain, an employee of the company who has had much experience in the handling of explosives, has been engaged since yesterday mining the high wall on the north side of the plant at the foot of which the workmen are digging. It was felt that its removal would safeguard the men from possible danger. Three heavy charges of dynamite failed yesterday afternoon, and another big charge this morning merely cleft a portion of it.

MAYOR OFFERED HELP

Mayor Duffus and City Clerk Armstrong waited on Mr. Denham yesterday afternoon proferring any assistance within the city's means.

Lindsay's suggestion that an idle mill in that town might be temporarily operated by the Quaker Oats Company brings no response from the local office to-day.

Official Petrograd Has Not An Atom of Sympathy For The Peace Proposal

Foreign Office Official Sees in Appeal Merely Another Trial Balloon Which is Designed to Throw the Responsibility For the War Once More on the Entente Powers.

THE MANY VAIN EFFORTS

PETROGRAD, Dec. 16.---Russian Duma Formally Rejects Kaiser's Peace Proposals. Fears Premature Peace Would Lead to Another Struggle.

PETROGRAD, December 16. — The peace proposal of the Central Powers is regarded by the Russian government as "an attempt to court public opinion and encourage the people of Germany by appearing to put the responsibility for the continuation of the war upon the Entente Allies."

The proposal has been received by official Petrograd without an atom of sympathy. An official of the Foreign Office made the following statement, which has been issued by the semi-official Petrograd news agency:—

"The new appeal of our enemies is not their first attempt to throw upon the Entente Powers the responsibility for the war they let loose. In order to obtain the support of the German peoples, who are tired of the war, the Berlin government many times has had recourse to fallacious words of

BIG BREWERY TO CLOSE.

Manager of St. Louis Plant Says Prohibition Is Inevitable.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 15.—The Excelsior Brewery, one of the oldest breweries in St. Louis, will close Jan. 1 on account of the progress of prohibition. Paul Schaus, manager of the brewery, said to-day that it had made little money in the last two years and will be closed because prohibition "is inevitable and will come in six or eight years."

Schaus gave as other reasons for the shutting down of the plant the fact that it would require between $125,000 and $140,000 to make improvements necessary for continued operations, and the fact that "people do not drink beer any more, but whisky. Furthermore," Schaus continued, "the small brewer cannot exist longer. He is crushed out by the high wages of union labor and strong competition."

The brewery occupies property valued at about $1,200,000 and is owned by the St. Louis Brewing Association, of which the Excelsior is a member. The brewery was built when there was no refrigeration and has great cellars 40 feet below the level of the street.

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefitted by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from ever getting glasses. Eye trouble often disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved if they had cared for their eyes in time

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said "Bon-Opto, is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family". Sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co. and other druggists

Either that the tremendous expenditure of munitions saved thousands of our soldiers' lives by protecting them during an advance, or that the enemy attack was smothered before it reached our defences.

These "curtains of fire" use up more munitions in an hour than were used in a month during 1915.

This may help you to realize the importance of munitions to our soldiers.

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

CHAPTER XIII

Mary Burton was discovering some things about June. She had often watched lovers leaning silently on a deck-rail, with eyes fixed on a moon-lit wake and hands that crept surreptitiously together. She had envied the credulity of these people and turned away with an ache and emptiness in her own heart.

Now at twenty-five she awoke each morning with a smile for the sunlight and a proprietary joy in the blue of the skies and a delight for the roses whose hearts were no younger than her own had become. Bridge-tables and tennis courts saw little of her, because the woods were waiting and Jefferson Edwardes was there to tramp and ride and fish and be companion and guide.

It was most beautiful far back from the oiled roads and trimmed hedges, for here were only woodland voices and languorous forest fragrances. Here, too, hid all those wild flowers that in childhood she had known and fancifully christened—and since forgotten, and here two people with the lilt of this abundant June song in their hearts could leave a few of their years by the roadside and forgot them. To Mary Burton it was all a rediscovery and a miracle. He had promised to give her back the message of her hills. He was giving her back the joy of life.

One afternoon she and Jefferson Edwardes were tramping toward a brook where the trout would be flashing like phantom darts, and as he led the way along a narrow trail she followed him with a smile on her lips.

At a sheer twist around the hill's shoulder he stopped and pointed his hand. The view from there was almost county-wide, billowing away across heights and depths to a blue merging of hill and sky.

As she stood by his side her eyes and parted lips spoke her unworded appreciation and the man's gaze came back from the broad picture and dwelt upon her.

"It's strange," she said finally with a vaguely puzzled expression, "that I who was born in just such hills as these should now be realizing their wonder for the first time."

But her companion laughed at her seriousness. "When you knew them first," he reminded her, "you had nothing else with which to compare them. It is one who comes from the north who finds a marvel in the bigness and softness of southern stars. Now you have been away and have come home, dearest."

She was standing very lancelike and straight by the slender bole of a silver birch. A golden sun flooded richly through the greenery. Overhead was a tunefully unflecked sky and in the shadows crept a richness of inwardly underlying colour and echoes of colour. It was all vivid and beautiful and the girl standing there seemed to dominate its vividness and its beauty. But her eyes were grave, even when a shaft of the radiance struck her delicately blossoming cheeks and played upon the escaping locks with which the breeze played, too.

"Do you know, I suppose in a way I ought to hate you?" she told the man, and he swiftly demanded.

"Hate me? In heaven's name, why?"

"When a woman has been deluded into believing herself a paradise . . . and has been content with her feathers, it doesn't precisely help to discover that —" her voice grew self-contemptuous—"that after all she has only lived the life of a Strasburg goose and has been fed to death until she is no earthly good for anything except to be some glutton's delicacy."

"Strasburg geese don't search their consciences," he smiled. "They are too busy being fed to death. If you had lost your soul I should help you to find it—thank God, you don't need my guidance."

"Yet your coming crystallized all the self-accusations that had begun to stir in me. It made me feel my utter emptiness."

"Which only means realizing—that you might have become empty and have not." He came close and bent upon her the eyes whose honesty was so convincing and whose fealty was so clearly writ. In a voice that lost a little of its steadiness he demanded tensely. "Do you hate me?"

Mary Burton stood motionless, almost rigid, but some heart-wave welled up until she felt physically weak, yet spiritually stronger than she had ever felt. Her two hands clutched tautly at his shoulders and her eyes gazed into his. Slowly they widened until they had unmasked all their depths and shown what was in her heart. Then as the man's pulses leaped to the elation of what he read there, he heard her shaken whisper inviting him very softly. "Look at me—and answer for yourself. Do I hate you?"

With sudden self-recovery, as he sought to take her in his arms, she slipped aside and after a short space the same voice that had just been tense rippled into whimsical laughter. "No," she commanded. "It mustn't become a habit." The laugh died and her words and pupils were grave once more. "Why should I lie to you, dear? It is no use trying. I'm absurdly mad about you—but I've doubted my power really loving so long that we must both be content to put it to the test of time. It's too new to trust. I can't tell how much of it is my own heart and how much is your hypnotism."

"I have come a long way," he said quietly. "I have waited a long while. I can wait longer, if that's the relief, but not as he waits who fears the issue. You are going to love me and marry me."

"I hope so. I pray so." Her answer was vibrantly eager. "I have longed vainly for a day that should make my heart leap beyond control. You brought the day—and it, between us, we can keep it—"

She broke off, and he took both her hands in both of his.

"You are going to marry me," he repeated. "Don't make me wait too long, my sweetheart and comrade. Life is all too short to waste when it can be happy."

"Are we wasting it?" she demanded; then she smiled at him and added: "Thank you, for introducing me to the wonderful originality of being natural. On the whole I don't think I hate you—much."

All that afternoon her eyes held a starry happiness and sometimes they twinkled with a mischievous ripple. Once she demanded, "Suppose Hamilton were to go broke to-morrow. Stony, flat, hopelessly broke. Would you still want me?" And before he could answer she broke into a merry peal of laughter. "Don't trouble to answer that question," she commanded. "I already know—and I'm fairly contented."

The Duke de Metuan had come and gone back—for his answer, and Paul, too, had left Haverley Lodge. For Paul's return there were two reasons. The music-room which Hamilton had built as a gift to his brother was nearing completion, and the finishing touches demanded personal supervision. As the heart of a high priest turns to his temple, so he turned Paul Burton's heart to this spot at this time. It was a temple but decidedly a pagan temple. Porphyry columns went up from a mosaic floor to a richly encrusted ceiling, and in conception and detail it was lavishly beautiful and perfect. Hamilton had conceived and planned the structure with a very ferocity of tense interest; though to Hamilton a music-room was in itself about as absorbing as a steam laundry.

In the undertaking he saw a monument to a dream and the fulfilment of a promise that one ragged boy had made to another ragged boy standing by a panel of broken fence. Hamilton had never forgotten that moment when first his pent-up ambitions had broken into fiery utterance while his little brother listened with eyes wide and wondering—yet full of faith. Then he had promised Paul an organ in a cathedral of dreams, where the imaginary self which was his greater self might find expression.

This was to be the worthy realization of that boast.

The second reason for the younger Burton's withdrawal from the house-party was the departure of Lorraine Haswell.

Now, finding himself in town, he had accepted one of those invitations which meant the acknowledgment of his licensing in Fashion's world of music. Paul had little in common with those struggling men whose passion for violin or piano leads them through poverty and hunger in pursuit of their bays. But to face and stir with his art's hypnosis an audience of the smartest men and women in town, was meat and drink to his soul—with his soul's vanity. Of all his vanities it was the least weak—since the most sincere.

To see faces awaken from ennui and kindle into attentiveness then soulfulness as he swayed them with the touch of his finger on the keys was no mean triumph. To draw men out of lolling ease into tense and unconsidered attitudes; to cause women's lips to part and their pupils to grow misty as he carried them with him

"Through the meadows of the sunset, through the poppies and the wheat,
To the land where the dead dreams go"

—these were his delights. There are meaner pleasures.

But then he had played a little while, the composite pattern of faces always faded and darkened into a blur and he forgot them, forgot himself, forgot everything except the instrument that had become the mouthpiece of his soul. Then he, like his audience, was swept away into an inapalpable world where nothing remained save the marvelous travelling and crashing tides which were the tides of golden sound. At such moments Paul Burton was almost a master.

This evening it was a benefit recital at the Plaza. He did not recall precisely to what worthy cause he was dedicating his gifted services, but that did not matter. He was bowing with a winning and boyish smile on his cameo features. Such fashionables as lingered in town so late as June were there to do homage, and other anonymous human units drawn from the millions followed where the fashionables led.

As Paul Burton looked out over the seated humanity, secretly searching for Lorraine Haswell, he became conscious of another face near the front. It was that of a woman, who seemed quite alone and who was simply dressed. Paul wondered why the features held his interest. It was not precisely a beautiful face, but in its gray-green dwelt a distinctive quality and as some thought parted the lips in a smile there came a sudden flooding of light which was better than ordinary beauty. This girl was frankly looking forward to the evening, for her expression mirrored that rapt anticipation which comes only to the eyes of the true music-lover. The small head under its brown hair was modelled as though a sculptor had spent loving care upon it, and Paul Burton thought that she was inwardly purring with the expectation of pleasure. A responsive glow at once awakened in him. He was subtly flattered because he recognized in that attitude of mind a tribute to his art for its own sake.

Then he began, and as the tide of his emotion swelled and lifted him out of himself, individual countenances grew misty yet, for some reason this face stood out clear and single for a moment or two after the rest had faded.

Afterward he was told that even he had not played so well before.

As he returned from a congratulatory group when the recital was ended, one of the women whom he knew only by reason of her activity in arranging the entertainment stopped him. "Mr. Burton," she said, "I want you to meet Miss Terrell." It was a general form of introduction and the man turned to bow—and recognized the face that had been the last to fade. The girl gave a small and well-gloved hand. She smiled, but said nothing, and her sponsor talked on [illegible]

"I was in the midst of a heated suffrage discussion when you began," she declared. "But of course it was forgotten—at once."

"I'm sorry," laughed Paul Burton, "if I broke up a good argument."

"Oh," she assured him with a prepared quotation. "I can always leave off talking, when I hear a master play."

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Nutrition and Economy: Many years ago I worked out the formula for a new bread mixture that would serve the purpose of much greater nutritional value, greater economy, better keeping qualities and at the same time be much more palatable than ordinary baker's or home-made bread. The flour mixture is as follows: Very finely ground whole wheat flour, 7 pounds; rye flour, 2 pounds; barley flour, 1 pound. Mix these three flours thoroughly by sifting several times and then mix according to your usual or favourite method of making whole wheat bread. The best method of making whole wheat bread you will find fully described on page 150 of your Home Health Club book, Vol. 5, also many other methods of making nutritious and palatable bread with but little labour and much greater economy than common white bread.

When you make up your dough for the bread mixture described above you will find the dough much different from ordinary whole wheat dough. The barley flour gives it a different consistency. You must bake it longer than you would the ordinary loaf, in fact I would suggest that the first trial be made with a very small quantity, say not more than one or two loaves. Do not have the oven too hot but maintain a steady heat. When this bread looks to be well cooked on the outside the inside of the loaf will appear to be sticky. Do not, however, imagine that the bread is spoiled. Wrap it up and put away in your bread box as soon as it is cool and at the end of a week or even two weeks you will find it the most delicious bread you have ever eaten. It is good after only 24 hours, but better after it is a week old.

Here are two more recipes for making delicious and economical, because more nutritious, bread. These recipes are taken from my book, Vol. 5 of the Home Health Club series. The first is called:

Perfect Bread.—Two small quarts of milk heated over hot water. When cool dissolve in it one cake of compressed yeast. Sift into crock four quarts of flour, four tea [illegible] of salt, two tablespoons [illegible]. Warm the flour if it is too cold. Make a hole in the middle of flour, put in the milk and yeast and knead well. Put in a greased warm crock, let rise, grease on top. In the morning (early) work into this mixture one tablespoonful of butter. Work into loaves. Let rise, and bake.

Aunt Jenny's Nut Bread is made after a recipe given to me by the wife of a wealthy manufacturer. She delights in making this delicious bread herself and I assure you that it is the best I have ever eaten. When my boys go to see "Aunt Jennie" they always prefer the nut bread. It is made in the following simple manner:

Mix and stir together four cups of flour, four tablespoonfuls of sugar; four teaspoonfuls baking powder, one cupful of nuts, one and one-half cups of sweet milk. Let rise 20 minutes and bake one hour.

FASHION HINTS

Many novel cravats are worn.

Long overskirts are still with us.

Russian blouse coats are still in favour.

Belts are very important this season.

High white shoes are very fashionable.

All the pile fabrics are still in high favour.

The fan grows more important every evening.

Tailored garments have full-length sleeves.

There is a possibility that skirts will be longer.

Voile blouses are trimmed with soutache braid.

Men who have nothing to do are kept busy doing it.

Some people are so rich they don't use a to support a dog.

Few men would trouble themselves to look for work if they didn't need the money.

It isn't so easy to fool a man who knows himself.

Did you ever see a pretty girl who did not know it?

Cigars are often alluded to as "weeds" and the reason is obvious.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

THE OLD, OLD HOME.

When I long for sainted memories,
Like angel troops they come,
If I fold my arms and ponder
On the old, old home.
The heart has many passages
Through which the feelings roam,
But its middle aisle is sacred
To the thoughts of old, old home.

Where infancy was sheltered,
Like rosebuds from the blast,
Where girlhood's brief elysium
In joyousness was passed,
To that sweet spot forever,
As to some hallowed dome,
Life's pilgrim bends her vision—
'Tis her" old, old home.

A father sat, how proudly,
By that old hearthstone's rays,
And told his children stories
Of his early manhood's days;
And one soft eye was beaming,
From child to child 'twould roam;
Thus a mother counts her treasures
In the old, old home.

The birthday gifts and festivals,
The blended vesper hymn,
(Some dear one who was swelling it
Is with the seraphim.)
The fond "good nights" at bed-time,
How quiet sleep would come
And fold us all together
In the old, old home.

Like a wreath of scented flowers
Close entertwined each heart:
Though time and change in concert
Have blown the wreath apart.
But dear and sainted memories,
Like angels, ever come,
If I close my eyes and ponder
On the old, old home.

Every school boy knows that a kite would not fly unless it had a string tying it down. It is just so in life. The man who is tied down by half a dozen blooming responsibilities, and their mother, will make a higher and stronger flight than the bachelor who, having nothing to keep him steady, is always floundering in the mud. If you want to ascend in the world, tie yourself to somebody.

Let us all remember that the higher and happier our home life, the more wisely and better we may hope to do the work that lies waiting for us beyond it. A pleasant place to "come home to" is the greatest energizer a man can have. Then let us strive with an earnest and constant purpose to make and keep the home cheerful, inviting and pleasant.

* * *

The woman of to-day is a different being from the woman of fifty years ago. The shrinking, trembling, weeping heroines of Thackeray and Dickens have disappeared. It is better that it is so. Not only has the woman of to-day shaken off those old time weaknesses, not only has she assumed a stern independence, which to some is well nigh disheartening, but she has made her determination known to the world, has waved it defiantly in our faces in the shape of certain signs and symbols which have a tendency to add emphasis to her emancipation.

The truest and most respected of all neighbours, is the one who always speaks well of everybody, who devotes the largest share of her sympathies to her own affairs, is chary of administering unsolicited advice, and who always waits until her social and useful capacities are requested, and never renders herself officious even in her most sanguine efforts at proving to be a good neighbour.

Labour is honourable, and the ignoble are those who will not work. Get you a home. Fence a field and plow it and plant it, and gather around you the comforts of home. And when you have made a character for energy and thrift, ask some young lady to share your home with you. We would say to every young lady, mark these men who are lounging around attempting to live with their wits, or on the interest of their debts; and when they ask you to share the lot of an aimless life, pass them on, for you cannot afford to marry a man without prosperity or business habits, unless you wish to sell yourself for a mess of pottage.

A girl who is brought up to earn her own living never will "just settle down to nothing." She will understand the value of money, having earned it, and can give her husband wise counsel and sympathy in his business difficulties. She can take entire charge of the money expended for the house and do it in such a way that will give her husband infinite satisfaction. She can earn a little something for herself, perhaps, and at least she will have the comfort of knowing that whatever happens, she will fall on her feet.

There are men defeated in life because they have at home an unsympathetic or uncongenial wife. And many a man has passed safely through a financial crisis because he knew that at home was a cheerful, sympathetic woman who was thinking of him all the day long, and would be ready and willing, if worse came to worse, to give up her handsome house, take a room in the back street, and play the "Song of the Shirt" on the sewing machine.

Sports Clothes and the Most Fashionable Sport---Skating

The Color Note is Most Prominent in the Dashing Costumes

CHARMING MUFFLER AND TURBAN SETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—The fashionable sport to indulge in this winter is skating—there is no doubt about it. Everyone has taken to skating with as much ardor as they took to dancing several winters ago. Last year everybody skated, and this year they are to be just as enthusiastic about it. Before the winter season really came in officially, the rinks were thrown open and thronged with sports-loving crowds.

7530

Is it the love for sports that has created the charming sports clothes we see, or is it just the irresistable charm of these clothes that has fostered the craze for sports?

Whatever answer the psychologist may have to this question, the fact remains that sports clothes have never been so popular or so attractive as they are to-day. They have risen to such a prominent position that even those who do not pretend to be sportswomen may wear them with all propriety.

There are sports clothes of every type, showing as wide a variety in colour, cut and fabric as anyone could wish. To go skating, you may wear a long, warm coat such as the one pictured here, with a one-piece dress, or else a two-piece suit of wool jersey, corduroy, velvet, zibeline or duvetyn, or a separate short coat with a skirt of contrasting colour and contrasting material. Both hip-length and longer coats are used, and the skirts are worn quite short.

The Colour Note in Sports Clothes.

More striking, perhaps, than any other feature of sports costumes is the colour note. Bright, vivid colours are used to a larger extent than the lighter colourings, though all white and black and black-and-white combinations are very well liked. White coats of chinchilla or corduroy trimmed with black fur are very attractive and some of these have muffs to match, combining the material of the suit and the fur with which it is trimmed.

Some very striking costumes consist of plaid wool coats, the plaid including many colours, with wool jersey or corduroy skirts in [illegible] orange or emerald green. With these costumes are worn Scotch plaid wool hose to match the coats. This is one of the very latest novelties. Russian green, purple, brown and yellow are some of the other colours in demand.

New Skating Sets.

There are lovely sets of long muffles and caps to be worn with sweaters and separate skirts. These come in all the gay calf colours, and often two colours are combined. A charming set recently seen was of black velvet with bands of Paisley at either end of the muffler. A Shaldr velvet tam-o'-shanter with a band of Paisley and a rosette of the same at the side, went with it. Paisley was also combined with light-brown wool in another set of muffler and turban.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Very much in style this season is the Russian suit for a small boy. This type of suit has been well tried out and proves to be the most favored.

Your boy can go anywhere if decked out in a suit like the one in the picture. The blouse is made with a plait in each half of the back and the plaited section is joined to a yoke, giving a very pretty line across the shoulders. At front, a backward turning tuck is made at the left side, where the blouse fastens, as suggested by the button decoration; a similar row of buttons at the opposite side cleverly introduces the much loved double breasted effect.

The collar is detachable, and the tie, of course, makes the boy quite manly looking. The patch pocket will easily win Tommy or Johnny, but suit yourself about making the bloomer trousers with leg bands or elastics.

Serge, homespun, cheviot and the mixtures are good for this style, and the pattern promises an exact duplicate whether or not you have used a pattern before.

The suit pattern, No. 8057, cuts in sizes 2, 4 and 6. To make in size 4 requires 3¼ yards 36 inch material, with ¼ yard contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

peace, and has frequently, in order to animate its troops, offered prospects of an early peace. It promised peace when Warsaw was taken, when Serbia was conquered, forgetting that such promises, unfilled, would create profound distrust.

"In its further efforts, which are similarly due to the same interested considerations, the German government is obliged to carry this question outside of Germany. All the world recalls these attempts, notably its balloons d'essai, which were sent up in neutral countries, particularly the United States.

THE MANY VAIN EFFORTS.

"Seeing the inanity of such methods, which deceived nobody, Germany attempted to create a peace atmosphere, which would allow her to consolidate her aggresive and imperialistic tendencies while sowing discord among the Allies, by seeking to make public opinion believe that separate pourparlers were in progress between her and the Entente Powers. There were also persistent reports of a separate peace.

"In view of the fact, however, that the Allies with strong unanimity rejected all these attempts, our enemies had to think of a more serious effort. They to-day are making, in spite of their confidence in their military and economic power, an appeal to the United States, Spain and Switzerland, announcing their anxiety to enter into negotiations for peace.

"The lack of sincerity and the object of the German proposals is evident. The enemy governments have need of heroic measures to complete the gaps in their armies. Germany is projecting a sort of serfdom in the guise of compulsory military service. The German government, in order to uphft the hearts of its people and prepare it for fresh sacrifices, is striving to create a favourable atmosphere with the following thesis: — 'We are struggling for our existence; we are proposing peace; it is refused us. Therefore the responsibility for the continuation of the war falls upon our enemies.'

"The object pursued by Germany, however, is clear. She speaks of respect for the rights of other nations, but at the same time she has already introduced into Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Poland a regime of terror and violence. As for the future, Germany has proclaimed an illusory independence for Poland. She proposes to divide Serbia between Bulgaria and Austria, economically to subjugate Belgium and cede to Bulgaria part of the Roumanian territory.

NO GROUND FOR NEGOTIATIONS.

"Everywhere the idea of the hegemony of Germany predominates. The latest speeches of Von Bethmann-Hollweg show the true aspirations of the German government. But to-day, when the Entente Powers have proclaimed their unshakable determination to continue the war to a successful end and to prevent Germany from establishing her hegemony, no favourable ground exists for peace negotiations.

"Our enemies knew of the speeches of Lloyd George, Briand and Boselli and the statement of Trepoff; they were, therefore, assured that their proposal would be unecceptable. It is so, not because the Entente Powers the friends of peace—are not inclined that way, but because the peace offered by Germany is a snare for public opinion. That is why the enemy governments carefully avoid mentioning the conditions of peace.

"We are sure that this new enterprise of the disturbers of peace will lead no one astray, that it is condemned to failure, like the previous efforts.

"The Entente Powers would assume a terrible responsibility before their peoples, before all humanity, if they suspended the struggle against Germany's latest attempt to profit by the present situation to implant her hegemony in Europe. All the innumerable sacrifices of the Allies would be nullified by a premature peace with the enemy, who is exhausted but not yet brought down.

"The firm determination of the Entente Powers to continue the war to a final triumph can be weakened by no illusory proposals of the enemy."

Iron Acts Wonders on a Week, Run-Down Nervous System

Puts Roses in Pale Cheeks

Dr. Mainprise of Saskatchewan, advises people who are weak, run-down, anaemic and nervous, to start to-day to strengthen themselves by taking Iron for their blood. It has always been an understood fact that Iron was an excellent remedy for the blood, but owing to its constipating, nauseating effect it has been eliminated from use. Doctors have overcome this by combining the Iron with phosphorus which forms a new Iron and at the same time the phosphorus used acts as one of the greatest nerve tonics known to medical science. You now have what is known to your druggist as Bonised Phosphorus with Iron. Dr. Mainprise finds this tonic to be four fold in action. It charges the system with new blood, stronger nerves, greater strength and a new Digestion. Your stomach will now be ready for good, big hearty meals that will be thoroughly digested. Start to-day and take Bonised Phosphorus with Iron if you are thin, pale, weak, tired, run down, anaemic, nervous, etc., and in ten days you will be full of pep, bright, vigorous, alert, attaining the glow of happiness. Stop taking all sorts of worthless patent medicines, cheap laxatives, for what you imagine with cure kidney troubles, stomach pains, rheumatism, etc. What you want is good strong pure blood and strong nerves, making your system immune to all these everyday complaints.

Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, as spoken of here does not contain one atom of arsenic or strychnine, which is found so harmful in almost every tonic. Arsenic and strychnine act only as a temporary stimulant, making you feel better only for the time you are taking them; while Bonised Phosphorus with Iron goes to the root of the trouble, builds you up, strengthens your nerves, giving you a new lease of life. It is dispensed only by one druggist in each city. Agent for Peterborough is F. C. Weber, Charlotte Street.

YOUNG SPAIN'S MOTHER HAD A PREMONITION OF A TRAGEDY

WINNIPEG, Dec. 15. — Two outstanding features in connection with the capture of young Spanish in Toronto Tuesday night developed in the case yesterday. One was the discovery that the young man's mother in England had a premonition of the double tragedy, and the other was that the youth made elaborate efforts to throw the police off his track while he was in Winnipeg Saturday.

A letter received at Stonewall Post Office Wednesday addressed to the alleged murderer from his mother, told of the dream she had recently.

"I dreamt you were in awful trouble," the mother wrote. "In my dream I saw blood all over your clothes. Write to me at once." The letter is in the possession of the police.

Spain made elaborate plans to throw pursuers off his trail while in Winnipeg Saturday afternoon. He bought a new suit of clothes at a north end store, discarding the suit he had bought just an hour before in Stonewall. He told the clerk his name and said he was going to Vancouver. He persuaded the clerk to accompany him to the Canadian Pacific Railway station, where he bought a ticket for Vancouver. He gave the clerk a $50 "tip" and said goodbye.

His plan apparently was to lead Winnipeg police astray if they discovered where he had purchased new clothes in Winnipeg. It is supposed he gave the Vancouver ticket away or destroyed it, and then bought another ticket for Toronto, leaving Saturday night.

HOW FAT FOLKS MAY BECOME THIN

By Elizabeth Thomas

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orthene capsules. Take one after each meal and one before going to bed. Weigh yourself so as to know just how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orthene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any large druggist can supply you, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00 postal note or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240 Montreal, Can.

DECEMBER WHEAT PRICES SLUMP

Ontario Flour Takes a Drop of 50 Cents—The Cattle Market

Wheat and flour prices have piled onto the toboggan, and in company with speculative prices in the options market are sliding gaily down to the lower levels. All the markets were in a state of collapse yesterday as a result of the energetic peace talk emanating from across the line. December wheat at Chicago tumbled 11c, while the same option at Winnipeg closed off 15c. Cash prices on Manitoba wheat at bay ports are quoted 5 1-4c lower than Thursday. Ontario flour following the 40c decline for Manitoba Thursday went off 40c to 50c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

The bulk of this season's Christmas beef cattle has already been marketed, though a few more loads are expected to be shipped in the early part of next week. The past week has seen the highest average price on record in the Toronto market, and many individual prices for single steers or heifers which went beyond all former records in previous seasons for Christmas cattle. For the general run of good butcher loads of steers and heifers, outside of the special fancy qualities, prices have also averaged very high, and holding steady right up to the closing market for the week at around $8.75 to $9.50 for the best loads. The big demand for butcher cattle made it harder to fill orders for good stockers and feeders, for anything with a little fat on was taken for killing. Prices all round, therefore, have been correspondingly high.

There has been a steady demand for choice milkers and springers, the choicest milkers selling well over a hundred dollars.

Choice veal calves in good demand.

Lambs eased off slightly the latter part of the week.

Hogs were steady to strong all through the week, with prices inclined higher towards the latter end.

CATLE RECEIPTS

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 289 cars, with 7,345 cattle, 980 calves, 17,565 hogs, 9,381 sheep and lambs and 611 horses.

City Cattle Market—91 cars with 1,437 cattle, 1,261 sheep and lambs, 965 hogs, 103 calves, and 20 horses.

To Ward Off Winter Complexion Ills

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all winter, there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Rough, chapped or discolored skin, unsuitable to this weather, is gently absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, the latter being applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand are apt to appear conspicious at this season, because of alternating expansion and contraction of the skin, is due to changing temperatures. You are advised to try this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once, and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably youthful and healthy.

Winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every wrinkle, however produced, by using a harmless face bath made by dissolving one ounce powdered saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel.

MEDIEVAL REALM OF LITHUANIA REHABILITATED

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 12.—It's a dull week to the chronicles of diplomatic maneuvres when the birth of a new kingdom or the rebirth of an old one is not announced in the family of nations.

The khedive of Egypt, a dependent of the Turkish sultan was deposed early in the war and a sultan of the Nile country enthroned under the British protectorate; the grand shereef of Mecca recently solicited felicitations in the name of the infant "kingdom of Arabia"; the Teutonic allies only a few days ago announced the restoration of the ancient kingdom of Poland and now comes the rehabilitation of the medieval realm of Lithuania, carved from provinces which Germany has conquered and others which she desires to conquer from Russia.

HOPE TO RECRUIT 150,000.

Concerning Lithuania, from which, according to cable advices, the Germans hope to recruit 150,000 citizens for serving under Field Marshal von Hindenburg, the National Geographic society gives the following information in a war georgaphy bulletin:

"When the third and final dismemberment of Poland was accomplished in 1795 practically all of the medieval principality of Lithuania, which had been amalgamated with the kingdom of Poland nearly 300 years previously, passed into the possession of Russia. Its area at that time was about equal to that of Connecticut, New York, and Pennsylvania combined, and comprised the territory now embraced in the Russian Governments of Kovno, Grondo, Vilna, Minsk, Mohileff, Vitebsk and Suwalki. Much of this land is now occupied by the German armies of the east front.

"Lithuania is an uninviting region as a whole. It is succession of fens and forests, ill suited to agricultural pursuits of any sort, and the 2,000,000 Lithuanians and 1,800,000 Letts who inhabit the land gain a livelihood chiefly by the culture of bees and the raising of cattle and horses.

GEDYMIN FOUNDER OF KINGDOM.

"The Lithuanians are an independent branch of the Aryan race, and, owing to the swampy nature of their homeland, were able to maintain their integrity as a people in spite of the fact that during the early middle ages they suffered constantly from invasions by their more powerful neighbors. The Order of Teutonic Knights and the Livonian Knights of the Order of the Sword were especially vigorous in their onslaughts upon the semi-savage tribes which adhered to their pagan worship long after most of Europe had accepted Christianity.

"One of the legendary heroes of Lithuania's early struggle was Ryngold, but the first definite historical facts concerning the country and its chiefs date from the time of Mendowg, Ryngold's son. This chieftain was recognized by Pope Innocent IV and rules for twelve years, from 1251, but the real founder of the kingdom was the resourceful and statesmanlige Gedymin (1316-1341), who built the city of Vilna, which became his capital.

"Gedymin extended the bounds of his domains far to the south and east, at the expense of the Russians, and in his recognition of the advantages of western civilization, as indicated by the welcome which he extended to immigrants, he anticipated the far sighted policies of Ivan the Terrible and Peter the Great.

"Gedymin had seven sons, who, after a protracted period of rivalry, acknowledged the supremacy of Olgierd, the most adroit of their number. Olgierd's heir, Jagello, founder of the Jagellon dynasty, was one of the most potent factors in the advancement of Lithuania's power. He introduced Christianity in 1387 and erected a cathedral in Vilna on the site of the ancient pagan temple.

"In Napoleon's Russia campaign the Lithuanian capital of Vilna was made the center of strategy of the French lines, and after the disaster at Moscow the retreating emperor again visited the city, leaving it in disguise on the night of November 24, 1812.

"Unlike their Russian and Polish neighbors, the Lithuanians have blue eyes, light colored hair, and fair complexion."

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel rundown and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

NO CALL UNTIL FEBRUARY

Trade Workers in Berlin Will Not Enter Army Just Yet.

BERLIN, via London, Dec. 15.—Berlin workers in the various trades will not be drawn into the Government service or called upon under the new Home Army Law until February, according to an announcement by Gen. Groener, head of the War Bureau, to the Berlin Chamber of Trades to-day.

That much time will be required to organize the new National Service, questions of transportation and raw material problems.

Gen. Groener's announcement was made in order to quiet uneasiness over rumours that the trades workers would be called out immediately.

Save Costly Shoes And Doctor's Bills By Wearing Rubbers In Bad Weather

Rubbers and Overshoes Practically The Only Things That are About the Same Price as Before the War

Have you bought a pair of shoes lately, either for yourself or for one of the children? If you have, you will realize just how expensive leather is now. It is scarce, and getting scarcer—and the soldiers are needing enormous quantities for shoes and equipment. Clearly it is a patriotic duty, as well as common sense, to save shoes in every possible way.

The best way, of course, is to wear rubbers whenever it is wet or snowy overhead or underfoot. Nothing rots and cracks shoe leather like getting it wet, particularly if it is none too good, as is often the case now, even in high-priced shoes.

It is fortunate, indeed, that rubbers have not joined the general upward movement. Crude rubber, in fact, costs no more than before the war, thanks to Great Britain's benevolent control of the supply. So, in spite of the 50% to 100% increase in the cost of cotton and other materials used in rubbers, prices are still normal.

As a pair of rubbers, costing 60c to $1.25, will almost double the life of a pair of shoes costing eight or ten times as much, there would be no doubt about the economy of wearing them, even if they did not save many a cold and worse sickness, with the attendant expense and loss of time.

But saving shoes is more than private thrift—it is public service! The leather so thoughtlessly wasted is needed at the front to help win the war, and saving it for that service is real, practical patriotism.

Every Member Of Your Family Should Wear Rubbers This Winter

Rosie's Santy Man

By IRENE BEACH

"Oh dear! I wish he'd come," sighed Rosie Perrone.

"Maybe he be sick," said the brother, as he dusted carefully the array of fruit arranged with such a holiday air in the narrow window of his shop. "He come if he not sick. You wait. Santy man no forget."

But Rosie in spite of her brother's encouraging words became very impatient. Finally she started in search of the kind friend, who was none other than the Santy of her street. Not the real Santy of Christmas eve, but a man who just pretended he was the same jovial friend of holly and cheer and wore a cloak and hat of red, faced with fur, and carried instead of a long whip to urge tired reindeer, a sign which told of a wonderful toyshop just around the corner.

A week before Pietro had seen from his little shop windows this same Santy man stagger and fall. Then both he and Rosie had helped the stranger into the fruit shop, where food and sympathy had been generously given. Now, it was the day before Christmas and the stranger who each day had stopped at Pietro's little shop had failed to appear.

"Maybe—he up the street somewheres," the brother had called to Rosie. "When you see heem, tell heem, to-morrow we look for him to eat with us. Yes?"

Rosie nodded and went on down the long avenue. There was a gentle snow falling, just enough to add to the street the touch of Christmas. But nowhere could Rosie see the kind Santy man of her street, who had told her such wonderful tales of toys, fairies and of the real country of deep hills and red sunsets.

Suddenly she thought of something, a something so different that it made her heart go thumpty-thump. She would go to the wonderful toyshop, just around the corner, and see for herself, if her friend was there.

But not a tired, hurried clerk of the shop had time to answer Rosie's questions. Finally she approached a tall gray-haired man standing in the centre of the long aisle. She felt certain he would know something about the Santy of her street.

"Please, do you know our Santy man?"

"Who?" asked the man.

"The Santy man, who wore a red coat, cap and carried a sign?"

"No, I don't. What is it you want to buy, little girl?"

"I don't want to buy nothin'. I'm just lookin' for the Santy man of my street. He—" Then Rosie could say no more. The lumps would stick in her throat, no matter how ahrd she swallowed.

Just what might have happened is hard to say, if a lady standing near hadn't heard what Rosie said and wanted to help her. She knew exactly what to do.

An hour later, after seeing Pietro at his little shop, Rosie rode away with the lady, who was very beautiful, by the way, in her big automobile, to the hospital, where the poor Santy had been taken the night before.

It was a wondering, curious little Rosie, who followed her friend down the long, cool hall to the ward where the sick Santy man lay. Timidly she walked to the man's bedside. He saw her. He held out his hand. Rosie grabbed it and held it close and fast in her own little hands.

"Oh—I'm so glad you're found. Me and Pietro love you so much. I never would have found you if the beautiful lady hadn't—"

But Rosie didn't finish the sentence, for Santy hadn't heard a word she was saying. He was staring with deep, strange eyes at the lady, who had drawn nearer the sick man's bed.

"Ria," he whispered.

"Bob," she answered.

There Rosie sat with shining eyes and a little heart thumping and listened to the wonderful story of her Santy man and the lady. Santy was none other than the lady's brother, whom she hadn't seen since the day, years ago, he ran away to sea. And the lady? She was the beautiful fairy of the toy-shop.

"And did you know all the time she owned it?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't you go and see her?"

"Because, I was too poor, sick and proud."

Now, of course, like all stories where fairies and Santy hold forth, everybody was glad and lived happy ever afterward. It was a wonderful day for Rosie and Pietro.

And up and down Rosie's street, too, there was gladness; for the good news had spread to the children, Rosie and the sparrows told, that the Santy man of their street had found a sister.

SLINGSBY BOY A SUBSTITUTE, LOSSES $45,000 PER ANNUM

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The House of Lords yesterday dismissed the appeal of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. R. Slingsby, of San Francisco, who sought the estate of the late Rev. Charles Slingsby for "Teddy" Slingsby, their supposed son.

This final declaration of the highest court in the land puts an end to the claim that Charles Eugene Edward Slingsby is the lawful child of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. R. Slingsby and he is branded a substitute child. He was declared the lawful child by a British court in 1915 but last March the Court of Appeal reversed this decision and is now upheld in the reversal by the Lords. Thus the child loses estates which have been in the Slingsby family since the reign of Henry VIII.

Sixteen years ago Commander Slingsby, the son of an Anglican clergyman in Yorkshire, married his wife. She is a Roman Catholic and his family do not seem to have liked the marriage. Ten years later Mrs. Slingsby, who was living with her husband in British Columbia, went to San Francisco. She had expectations of a child, and she went to San Francisco, as she said, in order to be nursed by her friend Mattie Blain. A child was born which she said was hers, and soon after the war began, an action was brought in the Probate and Divorce Court for a declaration that the child was legitimate. If the child was legitimate, he was heir to estates worth about £9,000 a year; if not, they would go on the death of the reputed father, who had only a life interest, to the remainder-men.

American evidence went to show that the child was a changeling, the son of a woman of no particular character in San Francisco. Mrs. Slingsby said that she had the child at the flat of Hattie Blain in San Francisco. On the other hand, Hattie Blain, after supporting the story at first, afterwards denied it. The certain facts are that Mrs. Slingsby advertised in the local paper for a child to adopt, that she denied at first that she had advertised, and only admitted it later when confronted by overwhelming evidence. The doctor in the case was a certain Dr. Fraser whose surgery was in Chinatown. The birth certificate gave the mother's name as Anderson and the place of birth as his surgery. According to his evidence Mrs. Slingsby induced him to strike out the name of Mr. and Mrs. Slingsby as the parents; later Mrs. Slingsby went to the Record Office and produced an alteration of the place of birth from Dr. Fraser's surgery in Chinatown to Hattie Blain's flat in a more respectable part of the city.

OFFICERS IN THE MAKING

Fine Material in the "Devil's Own" From Dominions

Among the Hertfordshire hills the stuff that officers the British army comes from was seen in the making. The Inns of Court Officers Training Corps is turning out officers for the Expeditionary Force in great numbers down there, and the boys of Harrow School and Berkhampstead who are nearing the age of qualification for the army joined them in a field day.

Nowadays the "Devil's Own" is not entirely recruited from the Temple and Lincoln's Inn. Most of the available men of the legal profession have long been in the army. But other professions still furnish their supplies of young men prepared to accept commissions, and there is a steady flow of young Englishmen from foreign countries and the far Dominions, from the Argentine and the Eastern Islands, who have returned at their own expense to do their part in the great war.

They had hard fighting when they found themselves opposed to the boys of Harrow and Berkhampstead. The schoolboys were the attacking force and came over the series of ridges which the men of the corps were defending with such eagerness and speed that all the efforts of the umpires were powerless to stop them.

You put the clip of cartridges in here. These little things on the barrel are the sights. You look along 'em when you take aim. Then you fire by pressing this little thing, which is the trigger. By the way, what was your previous occupation?" "What—Me, sir?" said the recruit. "Why, I was a gunsmith."

Good for the whole family

A good cough remedy is one that can be depended upon to cure coughs. Not one that cures some particular cough, but coughs in general.

While the causes of all coughs are primarily the same, yet the condition of the patient is what makes the difference in the nature of the cough itself. Coughs of healthy persons are easier to cure than the coughs of invalids. The more powerful convulsive cough of a big man is harder to cure than the cough of a baby. If you get a remedy that will cure a big man's cough and yet not be too powerful for the baby, you have a good cough remedy.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

St. John 11th chapter, 5th to 10th verses.

"Now Jesus loved Martha and her sister, and Lazarus."

These words were written by the beloved disciple who leaned on Jesus' bosom, and knew what was in the heart of Christ, for the Holy Spirit revealed it unto him, and taught him what to write. This is then the testimony of John, that Jesus loved Martha and Mary and Lazarus. They had sent this message to Jesus: He whom Thou lovest is sick, and it was really true that Jesus did love him. God's people know that Jesus loves them. Christ has a way of making His love known to those who are His own, for the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. We tell our secrets to those that we love; so does Jesus to those that love Him. Ye are My friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. He says: I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee. — Jer. 31st and 3rd.

Jesus loved all the house. It would seem that Mary was the most heavenly minded of the family; she sat at the feet of Christ; when Martha was cumbered about much serving she was evidently more humbled under this trying dispensation than her sister was, for it is said she fell down at His feet. She seems to have had grateful affection, for it was she who took a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Christ, and wiped His feet with her hair. She did what she could to show her love and affection, and yet Jesus loved them all. Every one that is in Christ is beloved by Him; just as a mother loves her children, even those who are weak and sickly, those who have doubts and fears, who have heavy burdens and temptations. He asks the weary and the heavy laden ones to come unto Him and He will give them rest, for His yoke is easy and His burden is light. We should follow Christ's example and be like Him, stooping low and being kind and gentle to the feeble ones, being charitable and kind. Cover their faults — assist them by counsel and advice and pray for them.

When the message came to Christ that Lazarus was sick He abode two days still in the same place where He was. This seems very strange to us. This is the way we love our friends when we hear that any are sick: We hasten to the bedside to minister and to comfort them, travelling long journeys and sparing no expense so as to reach them quickly. Our love will brook no delay. The sisters had received His message and they knew that Jesus loved them, but why this delay? So it was with the woman of Syrophenicia. He delayed helping her to try her faith—yet why does He delay? Because He is God, and sees the end from the beginning. Known unto Him are all His works from the foundations of the world. Although He was absent in the body He was present in the spirit. He saw every tear and heard every sigh. He saw when Lazarus died. The future was before Him and He knew what He would do—that the grave would yield up its dead, and that their weeping would soon be turned into songs of rejoicing. So when Christ delays answers to our prayers, let us be still, and know that He is God; let us wait patiently and at length he will incline His ear, answer us, and put our feet on the rock and establish our goings. So to increase their faith He gave them a promise to hold by, and His word was true, and when they had gone through their experience their faith was stronger after. They were taught to believe the word of Christ, even when outward circumstances were against them. See Matt 8th chap., 18th verse. One evening Christ gave commandment to go on the Sea of Galilee, to depart to the other side, and as they roved on, He was weary and fell asleep. The storm arose and the waves covered the little vessel, but they were in their Master's service, and in the line of duty, and above all His bodily presence was with them. Yet they were afraid and cried out: Master! save us, we perish. He arose, rebuked the storm and there was a great calm, and He said: Where is your faith? So by this trial of their faith it was ever stronger after. And so it is with all the trials of our faith. God is working out His plan for us and fitting us for His plan. When God gives a promise He always tries our faith. Just as the roots of trees take firmer hold when they are contending with the wind so faith takes firmer hold when the blasts of adversity bear down upon us. Had Christ healed Lazarus at first when the sisters sent the message we never would have known the love of Jesus that showed at the grave of Lazarus, when He shed human tears. We would not have heard those words from His enemies: Behold, how He loved him! We would not have known the power of Christ over death. The bright forthshinings of the glory of Christ would have been lost both to the Church and to the world. Therefore, it was well that He waited two days. The honour of His name as thus spread abroad; the Son of God was glorified.

The noblest friendship ever shown
The Saviour's history makes known.

Yours Sincerely,
James Sutherland.

DENMAR RETALIATION IF CAPTAIN HARMED

LONDON, Dec. 15. — The Times editorially demands retaliation if the Germans harm Captain Blaikie of the British steamer Caledonia, taken prisoner after his ship had been sunk by a German submarine. The Times insists that the government treat the highest ranking German naval or military prisoners in precisely the same way as the Germans treat Captain Blaikie.

Rammed the Submarine.

BERLIN, Dec. 14. — The Press Bureau's version of the sinking of the liner Caledonia, was as follows:

"The British passenger steamer Caledonia tried to ram a German submarine in the Mediterranean without being attacked by the submarine, shortly before the submarine was hit by the steamer. The submarine then shot a torpedo, which hit and sank the Caledonia. The submarine was slightly damaged by the ramming shock."

Two Passengers Captured.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Two passengers, Major-General Rananshaw relieved commander of the 27th British division at Salonika, and Captain Vickermann, of the general staff, with James Blaikie, captain of the Caledonia, were taken prisoner by the submarine which sank that steamer on Dec. 4, according to a despatch to the Associated Press from Berlin via Sayville.

Best Nerve Specialist in England Was Consulted

Nervous disorders frequently result from injury to the nerves in accidents or because of the shock to the system.

The writer of this letter was corralling a bunch of colts when his horse fell over a barbed-wire fence, and he was carried to the Royal Inland Hospital, Kamloops, B.C., in an unconscious condition, remaining in this state for three weeks.

Not being able to obtain restoration of the internal nerves which control the action of the digestive and other vital organs, he travelled to Europe and consulted England's greatest nerve specialist, Sir Victor Horsley. Relief was only temporary, in spite of many treatments used.

His letter gives the facts briefly, and tells how he was finally cured by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Can you imagine any more severe test of this great nerve restorative?

Mr. Henry F. Venn, Cefu Ranch, Malakwa, B.C., writes: "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has restored my nervous system and gives me new health. Having met with a severe accident seven years ago, from which I was unconscious, and which left my nerves in a very sore plight, I was treated by doctors galore, and consulted one of the greatest nerve specialists in England, but nothing seemed to do me much good. Hypophosphites and, in fact, all and every kind of nerve mixture in almost every form was used, but never with more than temporary benefit.

"But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has acted very differently, for it has built up my nervous system until I feel like my old self again. If this medicine will do for others what it has done for me I shall not regret having written this letter. I have recommended the Nerve Food personally to many, and shall always esteem its great restorative value."

Bertrand Spain Says He Shot Wife Accidentally—Husband in Self-Defence

VALUABLES MISSED

Farmer's Savings of $2,000 Taken — Also His Wife's Jewelry.

TORONTO, Dec. 14. — The Toronto detective department broke records for quickness when Detectives Robert Croome and Alexander Montgomery arrested in a down-town hotel Bertram John Patrick Spain, a 19-year-old youth, who is wanted by the Provincial police of Manitoba in connection with the double murder of Mr. and Mrs. James Vincent on their farm at Stonewall, Manitoba, last Saturday. Shortly before ten o'clock Tuesday night Sergeant Alex. Macsis was informed by the Manitoba police that Spain was thought to be in Toronto, and with a bare description of the fugitive, Croome and Montgomery started out on their hunt through the downtown hotels. After a brief search they found Spain, registered as "J. J. Young," of Winnipeg. They waited for him to return, and in a few minutes he walked into the hotel. He was arrested, and admitted that Young was an alias and his real name was Spain. He also admitted that he had been living with the Vincents in Stonewall, Manitoba.

Spain Admits the Shooting.

Spain had been in Toronto only a day and a half and was 1,800 miles away from the scene of the tragedy in which he is alleged to have been implicated, yet within a few minutes of receiving the warning the Toronto detectives had him in their hands.

Spain appeared in the Police Court to-day and was remanded for a week to await the arrival of the Manitoba Provincial Police. He was defended by W. K. Murphy, jr. To Mr. Murphy the young lad admitted that he had shot Mr. and Mrs. Vincent accidentally.

When arrested Spain had over $1,000 in bills in his pockets and a large amount of valuable jewelry.

How the Tragedy Took Place.

To Mr. Murphy Spain related the double tragedy. He said that he was cleaning a gun in the kitchen of the Vincent home, and was adjusting a catch. To release a piece of the mechanism he had to cock the gun, and Mrs. Vincent was leaning over the stove preparing a meal when the gun went off. Vincent stated he did not know it was loaded. Mrs. Vincent fell on the floor dead. Hearing the discharge of the gun, Mr. Vincent who was in the yard, started towards the house. Spain rushed out with the gun in his hand and told Vincent that he had shot Mrs. Vincent accidentally. Then Vincent, according to Spain, grabbed a gun and said he was going to shoot him. Spain loaded his gun and shot Vincent dead in self-defence.

After Spain disappeared a search followed and $2,000 in cash and Mrs. Vincent's jewelry were missed.

Questioned by the Toronto police, Spain stated he was an Englishman by birth, and had secured a situation with the Vincents through an agency in London, as he desired to learn farming. He said he left Stonewall right after the shooting on Saturday and came to Toronto on Tuesday. He was undecided whether he would stay in Toronto or go to England. He tried to enlist, but was rejected. When arrested he wore a new outfit of clothes.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to secure health.

POKROVSKI APPOINTED.

He is the New Foreign Minister in Russia.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 15.—The semi-official news agency announces that M. Pokrovski, controller of the Empire, has been appointed Foreign Minister.

M. Pokrovski was appointed controller of the Empire on Feb. 8, 1916. He was formerly a member of the Imperial Council.

GUELPH WOMEN GET DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

Suggest to City Three Definite, Simple Measures to Cut Cost of Food.

GUELPH, Dec. 15.—At a meeting of women called by the city and held in the City Hall, resolutions were passed as follows:

Calling upon the City Council to purchase potatoes in carload lots and sell these at the actual cost price if the local dealers did not sell them for at least $2 per bag.

Pledging the people to serve meat at their tables but once a day.

That not more than 45 cents a pound would be paid for butter, and eggs. This resolution, however, was not carried unanimously.

This very definite action was taken in response to the request of a civic committee who asked the women of Guelph for practical advice re. cutting the cost of living.

THE SECRET OF MY SUCCESS

CROWDING TWO LIFETIMES INTO ONE AND DIE AT FORTY

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—The composite physical American looks smooth, pink, and healthy, but he is trying to crowd two lifetimes into one, E. E. Rittenhouse of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, declared before the Association Life Insurance presidents here. "He is having some success, but the strain is telling on him."

Rittenhouse made a plea for physical preparedness, declaring 800,000 Americans are annually rejected by life insurance examiners.

"The average American as a good liver, hurries, has no time to waste, and dies at forty," Rittenhouse declared.

"His digestive organs have been given so many new and arduous duties to which they were not trained that they are showing signs of rebellion," Rittenhouse continued.

"He is more than well rounded at the belt and slightly so at the shoulders.

"Under exercise he is short-winded due to lack of exercise, or a bad heart. He lies down by night and sits down by day. He never walks when he can ride.

"He would not think of mixing bricks or scrap iron or gravel with the fuel of his furnace, yet he feeds his stomach with all sorts of tasty junk, much of which cannot be fully digested. With every pound he gains of excess fat his chance for a shortened life increases."

In opening the convention to-day President W. A. Day sounded a warning against the extraordinary wastefulness of the American people.

"This nation cannot long wallow in luxuries and prodigality and endure," he said. "We cannot longer view with indifference the great modern American sin of extravagance."

Mr. Day urged that insurance men should be "keenly concerned in the remedy of excessive life waste that is going on in this country, for altruistic, patriotic, and good business reasons.

Contrasted with this expenditure of life were figures presented by Alfred Hurrell of the Prudential Insurance Company, showing that the United States, with a fifteenth of the earth's population, has more life insurance in force than all the rest of the world combined. Over twenty billions was his estimate of the insurance on American lives, and it is increasing at the rate of over a billion a year.

American life insurance funds form a preparedness found available for Government loans in time of war, Mr. Hurrell said. He pointed out that one-tenth of the war loans of Europe have been subscribed by insurance institutions of the countries involved in the war.

"If it be true," says the Toronto News, "as Liberal newspapers contend, that Nationalism controls the Borden Government, the country has no reason to quarrel with the results." What about recruiting in Quebec. Is the News satisfied with Nationalism's performances there? The Globe.

Was It Supernatural or a Scientific Novelty?

By F. A. MITCHEL

Mary Richards sat in the dock house working her typewriter. A northeaster was blowing in from the ocean, and the waves as they rolled under the dock shook the structure built on it. There was a telephone instrument screwed against the wall, and suddenly there came a sharp ring. Whether the electric current was stronger than usual or that Mary was influenced by the terror of the storm, the bell seemed to call her to hear some bad news. She hurried to the instrument and, unhooking the receiver, held it to her ear.

"Mary," came the voice of John Talbot, to whom Mary was betrothed and who she supposed was coming up from Florida in a coast steamer of which he was third mate, "take up a board in the northwest corner of my room at home."

There was a click, and Mary knew that communication was shut off. She waited for it to be renewed, then rattled the book that held the receiver, called, did everything she could think of to attract attention, but could not break the silence. At last, impressed by a feeling of awe, she hung up the receiver and, trembling, returned to her seat.

The George Brewster, in which John Talbot was coming north, was not due to arrive till the next day. Had she put into some port on the coast below? She might have done so to avoid the storm, for she was an old vessel and not considered very seaworthy. But what did this fragmentary message mean? "Take up a board in the northwest corner of my room at home." Mary and John were to be married soon after his return from this voyage. Could the message have anything to do with the preparations that were being made for the wedding?

The next morning news was published of the loss of the George Brewster and all on board. She had foundered at sea off Cape Hatteras. Wreckage had been washed ashore identifying her.

Mary Richards when she began to recover from the shock of her loss remembered her telephone message. How had her betrothed been able to communicate with her while at sea? There was no wireless telegraph apparatus on the Brewster by which he could communicate with the shore. Besides, the voice she had heard was his, and he addressed her direct.

John Talbot's mother had died when he was a little boy, and his father had married a woman who had made life miserable for her husband and her stepson. As soon as John was old enough to earn any money she insisted that he should go to work and forced him to bring all he earned to her. This continued till he grew to manhood, when he began to retain his earnings. He had told Mary that he had accumulated several thousand dollars and before leaving on his last voyage had taken the precaution to make a will leaving it to her. But he had not told her where either the will or the property was to be found.

Mrs. Talbot was aware that John was saving money, and as soon as news came of his death at sea she began to hunt for it, or, rather, evidence of it. She believed that John had invested his savings in stocks or bonds and that he had kept his securities at home instead of placing them in a safety deposit company; but, although she hunted high and low for anything that would represent money, she found nothing.

Mary for a long while was so crushed by her loss that she thought nothing of the matter of her lover's possessions. One day she met Mrs. Talbot, who said to her with a view to learning something about the missing property:

"I suppose John turned over his savings to you before he went to sea the last time."

Mary replied that he had not done so, and that was all that was said on the subject between them. But Mrs. Talbot's words and manner set Mary to thinking. In this connection she remembered the telephone message—"Take up a board in the northwest corner of my room at home."

Wherever the message had come from, whether transmitted by natural or supernatural means, Mary now connected it with the missing property. After deliberation she concluded to go to a lawyer and ask his advice as to what to do. He agreed to send some one to the Talbot house, watch an opportunity to take up without Mrs. Talbot's knowledge the board in the floor in the northwest corner of John's room. This duty was assigned a detective, who employed a confederate to decoy the stepmother away while the detective went into the room designated and removed the board.

One morning Mary received a message from her attorney to call at his office, and on arriving there he showed her a will executed by John Talbot, leaving all his property to her, and handed her bonds the interest on which was sufficient to meet her annual necessities.

The story Mary told has been the subject of much thought among scientists, especially those who are working on new lines of transmitting the human voice without a material conductor. Some of them believe that John Talbot hit upon a natural law as yet unrevealed to the world. The psychical research people believe that the message was sent by what we call supernatural means.

Parliamentary Economies.

War economy has prevailed for some time now in the Houses of Parliament. Quill pens usually provided in the writing rooms have disappeared, and ordinary wooden penholders, with steel nibs, have taken their place. There is also a reduction in the quantity of notepaper and envelopes. Instead of the unlimited supply available in the writing rooms, the quantity is limited, the object being to discourage waste and prevent depreciation by exposure. It is also stated that paper inferior in quality will be provided shortly. Another direction in which the Government is economizing is in the smoking-rooms. Instead of the free and ample provision of boxes of matches, members must now fall back on the wooden spills that the new thrifty Office of Works has provided.

Irish Get New Markets.

A bold bid for the capture of several markets hitherto dominated by "enemy traders" is being made by Irish manufacturers. Toys, carpets, and cigarettes are the most successful examples of new industries thus developed. The new workshops for the manufacture of dolls and toys have attracted large numbers of girls and women workers who were thrown out of employment by the hard times prevailing in the lace and embroidery trade in Belfast and Dublin.

WOUNDED MEN ARE COMING HOME

OTTAWA, Dec. 15.—Hitherto the military hospitals commission has only had to deal with soldiers in the convalescent stage. The Canadian authorities overseas, however, have now advised the commission to prepare for several thousand soldiers still needing active surgical and medical treatment. The commission is actively engaged in this preparation, and has already arranged for the care of 1500 such men. They will be sent over in instalments, beginning at once.

A hospital train is being constructed, for the safe and comfortable carriage of these "bed cases" from the Atlantic ports to their destinations inland. The hospital train will run as far as Winnipeg, distributing patients at Montreal, Kingston and Toronto on the way.

REVOLTS IN LITHUANIA.

Peasants Armed With Hatchets Attack German Military Commission.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Wireless Press gives out the following under date of Berne: "Forcible deportation of Lithuanian peasants to work in Germany has provoked several revolts in Lithuania. There was a formidable rising in the Samogitian province of Suwalki. Peasants, armed with hatchets, attacked the German military commission sent there to enroll workmen. In other districts many peasants are hiding in the forest and marshes. In many parts of Lithuania bands of peasants have destroyed railways, bridges and telegraph lines."

Will there be Real Music in your home at Christmas?

There is no one so unmusical as to believe that a talking machine produces real music. At best, a talking machine, no matter how much it costs, no matter what artists make records for it, no matter what claims are made for it by its manufacturers, gives only a hollow imitation of the original music.

The NEW EDISON is not a Talking Machine

This new invention of the world's greatest inventor is in no real sense a talking machine.

It represents more than two million dollars spent in research work by Mr. Edison.

It represents the achievement of his ambition to produce a musical instrument which Re-creates all forms of music so perfectly that the original cannot be distinguished from the Re-Creation.

By hundreds of tests, before hundreds of thousands of music lovers, it has been proved conclusively that when an artist sings or plays—in comparison with the New Edison's Re-Creation of that artist's performance, it is impossible to distinguish the original from the Re-Creation.

The music critics of more than 200 of America's leading newspapers testify to this fact in the columns of their own papers. We shall be glad to show you what the critics say.

Hear this new Invention

Come to our store and let us give you a concert of Re-created music. Come at any time. You will always be welcome. There is no obligation to buy. We merely want you to hear what we consider the world's greatest musical instrument.

AN UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL OF THE VALUE OF DR. BANTA'S KIDNEY & RHEUMATIC PILLS

To Cure Kidney & Bladder Trouble is given by Mr. JAMES JACKSON of 232 Perry Street, a life long resident of this City.

Read what Mr. Jackson says in the statement he gave at his own request

I have suffered from Kidney and bladder trouble for the past twelve years, and during that time I spent more than a hundred dollars with doctors and for different medicines, and was unable to procure any relief.

I was beginning to lose faith in medicines, and I considered my case more or less hopeless. Hearing so much about Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills, I decided to give them a trial, and before I had finished one box, I felt like a different man; and am now completely rid of an ailment which had bothered me day and night for the past twelve years.

I procured Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills at Lynch's Drug Store, and when I purchased them I was told to return for my money if they did not help me. I can recommend these pills and I would willingly pay $100.00 a box to get the relief that I did from them.

This testimonial is given at my own suggestion, and I take pleasure and I consider it my duty to recommend Dr. Banta's Pills to anyone suffering from kidney or rheumatic ailments of any description.

JAMES JACKSON, 232 Perry St., Peterborough, Ont.

Witness JAMES LYNCH.

Dated at Peterborough this 8th day of December, 1916.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills have cured and given relief to dozens of sufferers in this city who are just as enthusiastic in their praises of this great medicine as Mr. Jackson.

If you are troubled with Lame Back, Kidney Trouble or Rheumatism get a box of these pills at once. They are sold and recommended at

Do Your Christmas Shopping Early Next Week

If You Want To Help The Merchants and Yourself

Better Service and Better Selection Will be Your Reward if You Buy What You Want on Monday or Tuesday. There is no advantage in Leaving Everything Until the End of the Week---Customs Receipts Indicate how Peterboro Industries Have Been Flourishing---Peterboro Workmen are Making Huge Wages but are They Making Proper Preparations for the Future.

WITH Christmas only a week away it may seem that another warning to "shop early" is belated, but the slogan still means a lot. The people of Peterborough can help the merchants and themselves if they will carry out the spirit of early shopping next week. Don't wait until Friday or Saturday for gifts that you may just as well buy Monday or Tuesday. Saturday, the Christmas market day, will be marked by the influx of farmers from far and near. It will be their shopping day, and the citizens of Peterborough should see that the visitors have the right-of-way. This can easily be accomplished if the city folk will complete their shopping early in the week. This is the greatest Christmas gift that can be given the clerks, the delivery men and the merchants themselves. People will find better service, a better selection and more agreeable conditions generally at the beginning of next week than they will in the rush and crush of the last couple of days. They will be sure that their parcels are delivered in plenty of time, and in view of the scarcity of help, the delivery problem is a big one for the merchants this year.

The stores are at their best right now. They are full of Christmas gifts, offering suggestions of all kinds and suitable for all purses. There is no reason to delay in this matter. You can do your shopping just as easily Monday as Saturday. Think it over and start the week right.

During the past year the Customs duties collected in Peterborough showed a big increase over the previous year. As Customs duties are taken out usually on raw materials brought in for manufacture, the amount for completely finished goods being, on the whole, very low, it can be seen that Peterborough's industries are flourishing. The greater the Customs duties, the larger the amount of raw material imported, and, therefore, the greater output of the local factories. This in turn means prosperity for every class of citizen — the worker is given steady and well-paid work, the merchant benefits by this, as does the real estate man, the life insurance man and many others. This is shown by the great demand for men at the present time. True, Peterborough and district has sent many men to the colours, but even allowing for this there is still a good margin to prove that the industries are being worked full blast and the city is benefitting.

Peterborough is prosperous. Let every citizen unite to make her more so.

The Examiner often wonders if the public of Peterborough generally realize the high wages that are being made by workmen in local concerns, and if these same workmen are saving any portion of the big sums they are receiving. In some of the factories it is not unusual to hear of men making $35 and $40 a week, mainly on shell work. These are big wages, but they will not last, and the workmen should realize this and make some provision for the future. When the re-adjustment comes after the war there will be a different scale of wages, for some time at least, and the men who are making big money now, after contributing liberally to the calls of the various patriotic efforts, should see that there is a nest egg away for the period that will come at the end of the war, when the boys come back from the front and no more shells are needed. That is one way that they can help to build up Peterborough.

How To Address Canadian Soldiers Who Are Overseas

TORONTO, December 15.—Once a Canadian soldier leaves the shores of the Dominion for overseas all mail matter should be addressed to him at the Army Post Office, London, England. This was the reply made at the Toronto Post Office when inquiry was made about the C.A.P. cable yesterday, which stated that the Army Post Office, so far as England was concerned, was non-existent.

The Post Office states that whether a soldier is in England or France does not matter. In either case mail should be addressed to the Army Post Office, care being taken that his regimental number and unit (that is, battalion, battery or squadron) are clearly written, as well as "Canadian Contingent" or "S. E. F." Mistakes occur because a letter may be addressed to a man in the 14th Battalion without anything to show that he is serving with the Canadians. As every British regiment has now a 14th Battalion, as well as the Australian and other contingents, this address is entirely insufficient.

The only exception to the use of the Army Post Office as a destination for letters, etc., is in the case of a wounded man, who may be addressed to the hospital in which he is lying, where this is definitely known. The Canadian postal service in Britain has access to the records of wounded men, and can keep track of their movements. If a wounded man is addressed care of the Army Post Office the letter will still reach him, but by a more circuitous route.

FRENCH CAPTURE EIGHTY CANNON

GREAT ALLIED WINS ON TWO FRONTS A DIPLOMATIC VICTORY IN GREECE

Week Closes in Enthusiasm and Optimism For Britain and Her Allies--Great Smash by the French Near Meuse River Resulted in Capture of 80 Cannon, Eleven Square Miles of Territory and Fifteen Important Villages.

British Advance in Mesopotamia is Continuing With Great Success---Heavy Capture of Turkish Troops, Guns aud Material.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(BULLETIN) LONDON, December 16.—Eighty cannon were captured by the French in the advance yesterday at Verdun, in addition to machine guns.

Special Cable:—

LONDON, December 16.—The week closes in enthusiasm and optimism for Britain and her Allies. Four big military and diplomatic victories are proclaimed by to-day's papers as showing a tremendous fillip to the Allies' cause induced by the recent drastic reorganization in the British and French governments. Britain settles down to Christmas shopping and the cultivation of the Christmas spirit with a great load of uncertainty and anxiety lifted. The French advance near the Meuse River, with the capture of probably nine thousand German prisoners, fifty machine guns, large stores, and many guns of larger calibre, with eleven square miles of territory, including fifteen important villages, farms and other points of advantage was a welcome thrust for the Allies. Even more unexpected was the news of the big advance of Major-General Maude's columns in Mesopotamia against the Turks, right up to the very gates of the famous Kut-El-Amara.

Saturday afternoon reports from Cairo say this advance is continuing with great success, and heavy capture of Turkish troops, guns and materials.

To-day's Athens despatches corroborate the report that King Constantine's Government has completely acquieced in the demands of the Allies' latest ultimatum.

Another "diplomatic" victory more local to Britain is the possibility of the more immediate prospect of settlement of the Irish question as developed by debate in the House of Commons yesterday. On the whole it is a much better Christmas in prospect than appeared last week.

PARIS, December 16.—General Nivelle's great thrust at Verdun has advanced the French positions to within short distance of where the Germans stood at the outset of the great Verdun drive. The military authorities describe the victory as complete and crushing, and carried out without a hitch.

A terrific artillery preparation flattened the German defences, then French guns were elevated and threw a curtain of steel behind which the infantry from every trench from Pepper Hill to beyond Damloup dashed forward on an enemy still stunned by the bombardment.

One after another Vacherauville and Louvemont village, Chambrette Farm and the Hardaumont and Besonvaux works fell without the defenders having time to carry away either guns or material, and nine thousand prisoners began to stream steadily rearward to the pens prepared for their reception.

The weather, according to hitherto accepted notions, was all against the offensive. It was wet and misty, and the French officers believe that this fact undoubtedly led the Germans to miscalculate the probabilities of attack.

The big victory is regarded as General Nivelle's farewell to Verdun before assuming the command of the entire French army on the western front.

PARIS, December 16.—(French Official)—Four divisions of French troops won the victory north of Verdun against German troops of at least five divisions to-day's official statement said. The enemy made no counter attack seeking to win back the ground they lost.

The men taken prisoners in the French advance came from regiments in five different German divisions.

The official statement also detailed lively shelling during the night over the entire front from the Meuse to the Woevre.

"Nothing important" was reported from the Macedonian front to-day.

BERLIN, December 16.—A German thrust reached the British second line southeast of Zillebeck near Ypres, to-day's official statement claimed.

The Berlin statement details the advance to the second line of the enemy, the garrison of which had fled.

Regarding the Verdun front, the War Office simply said:—"The French have succeeded in pushing back German forces from some of their most advanced positions in the Verdun district. Teutonic troops, it was said, had gone into prepared second line defences.

The foregoing claim of a German advance into British trenches may be put forth by Berlin to offset the Verdun defeat. The German statement does not go into details and may mean much or little. It is quite usual for troops to forsake trenches while a heavy bombardment is going on, only to reoccupy them later. Berlin does not claim the Germans retained the trenches, but merely says they "advanced into" them.

WASHINGTON, December 16. —In German Embassy circles here, there is great optimism over the peace outlook. It is pointed out that already a tremendous change has occurred in the attitude of British officials and in the public attitude. That Germany has started talk which will reach into the hearts and homes of every belligerent country until a demand for stopping hostilities is irresistible, is the confident belief of Teutonic sympathizers here.

SOFIA, December 16.—The occupation of Peresti was announced in the Bulgarian official statement to-day.

LONDON, December 16. — The condition of Premier Lloyd George, striken with chill last week, continues favourable.

ALLIES CONSIDER NEUTRAL OPINION.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—The British and other Allied Embassies have advised their foreign offices not to return a flat refusal to the German peace proposal for the sake of neutral opinion, it was learned to-day.

RUSSIAN SQUADRON SHELLS BALLCHEK.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 16.—Successful bombardement of Bellchek by Russian warships was announced in to-day's official statement. Despite attacks by enemy shore batteries, seaplanes and submarines, the Russian attacking squadron was unharmed.

INSURANCE ON QUAKER OATS PLANT TOTALLED $1,223,000

$505,000 of This Was Carried by Companies With Ontario Licenses —No More Bodies Have Been Recovered From the Ruins

DEATH LIST THE SAME

To-day, for the first time, there is no change in the casualty list of the Quaker Oats fire, the total of known dead remaining at ten. Inquiries at St. Joseph's and Nicholls Hospital this afternoon showed that there have been no new deaths since Thursday and that the majority of the patients are doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Although the force of men employed in the searching operation has been increased, no more bodies have been recovered from the ruins. The searchers have a big task in front of them, so great is the mass of debris. Six or seven of the battered fed tanks have been removed from the wreckage, but there is a very large quantity of heavy material still to be moved before an effective search can be made. The portion of wall left standing has so far defied all blasts of dynamite that have been used and is still apparently unshaken.

In regard to the insurance on the plant the Examiner has received the following despatch from Toronto to-day:

TORONTO, Dec. 16.—The insurance which was in force upon the Quaker Oats Company plant at Peterborough, destroyed by fire this week, totalled $1,223,000. Of this $505,000 was with licensed insurance companies, and $789,000 with companies unlicensed to do business in Ontario. Upon the insurance paid by the unlicensed companies the Provincial Fire Marshall's Office will collect a tax of one per cent.

The loss of the company is not yet fully completed, but it will likely be around one million dollars.

DEATH'S CALL WAS SUDDEN

Special to The Examiner.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 16.—Prof. Munsterberg, aged 52, the famous German psychology professor, died suddenly while addressing his class at Harvard, here, to-day. Heart failure was the cause. He fell to the floor and died within a few minutes after being assisted to a chair. Munsterberg was probably the most important pro-German 'kultur' advocate in the United States.

PROTEST AGAINST THE DEPORTATION OF BELGIANS

NEW YORK, N.Y., December 16.—The extension to all the United States of a movement of protest against the German deportations of the Belgians was planned here to-day. Cities all over the country, large and small, will be urged to hold public demonstrations. Resolutions adopted at the meeting here condemning "Belgian bondage" will be forwarded to-day to all representatives of Germany and to the President. Three thousand persons in Carnegie Hall last night cheered denunciations of German deportations. Elihu Root denounced the German acts as "hideous crimes." Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's denunciation of Germany was read. James M. Breck demanded that Count Von Bernstorff be handed his passports unless deportations are stopped.

Havelock Is Still Leading The Procession Of 247th Recruits

Pte. James Nelson Drain the Latest Recruit From Railway Town to Join the New Battalion---Pte. Harry Dawkins is Recovering---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Havelock continues to send recruits to the 247th Battalion, and in proportion to population, the railway town is miles ahead of any other section of the battalion's recruiting area. The latest recruit from Havelock arrived last night in the person of Pte. Jas. Nelson Drain, who was taken on the strength to-day.

The announcement that the 93rd Battalion Band is on its way home has been joyfully received by Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his staff at the Armouries. The lack of a band has been sadly felt in recruiting efforts, and the arrival of the 93rd organization will mean valuable assistance to the 247th Battalion.

GALT, Dec. 16.—A local Soldiers' Aid Commission to look after the interests of returned soldiers has been formed, with the following officers: Chairman, A. S. Wilkinson; Vice-Chairman, F. D. Palmer; Secretary-Treasurer, Leon Shupe. The organization meeting, attended by representative citizens, passed a resolution, moved by Mayor Edwards and J. G. Turnbull, urging the Dominion Government to discontinue the practice of employing able-bodied civilians on the work of inspecting munitions, and to replace them with men who have returned after serving with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

PTE DAWKINS RECOVERING

Mr Geo. H. Dawkins, 85 George street, Belleville, section foreman of the Canadian Northern, received a cable message Thursday from his son, Pte. Harry Dawkins, formerly of the G.T.R., who enlisted in Peterborough, containing the gratifying news that he was 'getting along fine' and would 'soon be out again.'

It will be recalled that Pte. Dawkins was wounded very seriously in the abdomen over a month ago, and for a time he was in a critical condition. A letter received by Mr. Dawkins from his son a day or two ago, told of the fine progress he was making towards recovery. The cable confirms the good news. The letter was written from Le Treport, France, under date of Nov. 28.

Pte George Ambrose Jefferies, an old Peterborough boy, now of Orillia, is overseas with the 157th Battalion, C. Company, Simcoe Foresters, Bramshot Camp, England. He belongs to the Orange Order and W. O. W. in this city.

VIEWS OF THE FIRE TAKEN BY ROY STUDIO.

Fire Insurance Appraiser Complimented the Studio on its Work.

In todays Illustrated section of the Examiner we show three views of the Quaker Oats Company fire taken by the Roy Studio. Under the circumstances and conditions the series of photographs taken by Mr. Roy are remarkable. The day was quite dull and the smoke from the fire made conditions worse, but the results obtained were so good that the Fire Underwriters complimented the Roy Studio on their work. The set of views are of material assistance to the Fire Insurance Adjusters and the Company.

Transformation Of Neglected Children

Every Man or Woman Who is Saved From Becoming a Ward of the State Represents a Saving of $800 According to Report Submitted by Mr. Jos. Wearing, Secretary of the Children's Aid Society.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon. Mr. E. A. Peck, president of the Society, who presided, said that a number of changes had been made during the year, resulting in a depletion of available funds. This, he hoped, would be remedied in the future. Reports submitted by Mr. Joseph Wearing, Secretary and Solicitor for the society, Mr. C. A. G. Spence, inspector and assistant secretary; Mr. Horace Walkey, Treasurer, and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Society, were submitted and unanimously adopted. Mr. Spence, in his report, suggested that the Society make application to the County for a minimum sum of two dollars a week for each child committed to the custody or control of the Society. This is provided for in the Children's Protection Act which distinctly states that when committing a child to the custody or control of the Children's Aid Society, the judge shall make an order for the payment by the Corporation of the municipality to which the child belongs of a reasonable sum and not less than two dollars weekly for the expense of supporting the child by the Society. Up to the present the Society has been in receipt of an annual grant of three hundred dollars, which is taken in lieu of a specified weekly amount for each child. Just how the works out is indicated by figures produced by Mr. Spence which show that the actual cost of maintenance of children belonging to the county for this year, amounted to over eight hundred dollars, whereas the grant from the County was only three hundred dollars.

Bill the County.

Mr. Spence's suggestion to bill the municipality for each child taken care of was endorsed by those present. Mr. Peck suggested that the Society wait upon the 1917 County Council, and ask for a substantially increased grant. Mr. Peck was of the opinion that a direct levy would tend to shut off voluntary contributions. The matter will be taken up at the first of the year.

Secretary's Report.

The following report, prepared by Mr. Joseph Wearing, was read by Mr. Spence on the unavoidable absence of Mr. Wearing:

Children's Aid Society of Peterborough City and County.—I have much pleasure in submitting my first report as Secretary of your society.

During the year important changes have taken place in the administration of the work, which will, it is confidently expected, be of material advantage to the Children's Aid Society enlarging its scope and influence.

Mr. George Cochrane, who had for so many years been our able and energetic agent, found it necessary, owing to increasing age and infirmity, to relinquish his position, and Mr. C. A. G. Spence was unanimously appointed by the Executive to take his place, entering upon his duties on June 1st last.

Publicity Campaign.

He has been busy reorganizing the work, visiting wards throughout the County, investigating complaints, etc. He has now started a publicity campaign to cover the whole of the county, forming county committees in the more important centres. A good motion lantern is required for this work. As we hardly feel justified in view of the condition of our finances, in making this purchase, perhaps some friend of the Society would make us a gift of this description, which would be greatly appreciated.

JURY RETURNED A VERDICT OF GUILTY AGAINST AND. MAGEE

Yet To Be Sentenced For Concealment of Birth—Daily Taylor Goes Free—John Armstrong Gets $500 Damages

COURT RESUMES ON MONDAY

After wading through sordid cases with which its docket was top-heavy, the County Court glimpsed the first gleam of ordinary litigation this morning in the damage action of Tully vs. Ruth. At noon Judge Hayden announced that he had an engagement at the North Monaghan town hall in connection with certain errors in the township's voters' list. It was further stated that the Tully case could not be concluded to-day. Hence, the jury accepted the option of an adjournment until Monday morning at 10 o'clock. In this action Miss Edith Tully of Smith, claims damages from Thos. Ruth, of Peterborough, arising out of a traffic accident in which the horse she was driving became alarmed at the defendant's automobile and, getting beyond control, upset the buggy.

Mrs. Clark, a resident of Smith, was driving into the city with Miss Tully on that occasion and was the first witness called this morning. She testified that she had signalled to the automobile three times as it approached, but that the car did not come to a stop until about eight feet away. Witness was holding her baby on her lap, and together with Miss Tully all three were thrown from the buggy. Only one witness has thus far been heard in this case. Mr. F. D. Kerr is counsel for Mr. Ruth, and Mr. G. K. Gordon is acting for Miss Tully. The hearing had scarcely got under way before Judge Hayden issued a familiar reminder to the two solicitors regarding the keenness with which they followed each other's examinations.

Magee Found Guilty.

Daily Taylor was acquitted by the jury on two charges, one of concealment of the birth of her child, and the other of neglect to provide adequate medical and other attendance for her accouchment.

A verdict of guilty was brought against Andrew Magee who was charged with concealment of the birth of the child. He has not yet been sentenced by Judge Hayden. This practically terminates the Asphodel cases involving Magee and Miss Taylor, who have become familiar figures in the affairs of the county officials. The investigation began early in July when Inspector Miller of Toronto, uncovered the body of the child where Magee had buried it in a henhouse at the rear of his home. The evidence has been disclosed in the several hearings and scarcely requires reiteration.

Gets $500 Damages.

Another case was wound up this morning when a jury awarded $500 to John J. Armstrong, a section man residing in Smith, in his action against Frank Ballantyne, against whom he had brought action for damages arising out of the seduction of his daughter, Margaret 16 years old. The plaintiff is a widower and his daughter had been taking care of the other children and performing the household duties. As the result of the birth of her child, Mr. Armstrong claimed that he had been deprived of the services of his daughter and put to considerable expense. The jury in this case was composed as follows: Henry Starr, H. C. Buchanan, Levi Campbell, George Hill, F. Cavanagh, A. E. Barry, M. R. Hoover, John Garvey, Frank Young, Wm. Lambkin, Isaac Adlum, and H. E. Butler.

The hearing took up all last night until eleven o'clock, and the argument was completed this morning.

Monday Ann Pennington as Susie Snowflake in a Comedy Drama

To-night is the last opportunity to see Pauline Frederick in "The World's Great snare," a picture that has been seen by hundreds this week at the Empire. Take the time to-night to see it. On Monday we will show Ann Pennington as "Susie Snowflake, the hero in the play of the same name, which is a fine comedy drama of Broadway, and the Home Town that we can recommend. Also a good comedy "Almost a Widow." Always see the pictures at the Empire.

THE ANSWER.

Though the formal official British reply to the pacificatorial peace proposals of the Germans is postponed till next Tuesday, the real answer was given in brief and strong terms in the British House of Commons on Thursday. The reply took the practical form of a vote of credit for 2,000 million dollars for war purposes, and the issue of a supplementary estimate providing for an addition to the army in the field of a million soldiers of all ranks during the coming year. No matter what Lloyd George may say in reply to Germany's peace proposals, the action of Parliament in voting so enormous a sum as 2,000 million dollars and providing for enrolling and equipping a million more soldiers, is a case in which "money talks," and men get ready to fight. That doesn't look like chattering about peace that is impossible, while the power of German militarism has not met the conditions laid down by Asquith—"until the military domination of Prussia is finally destroyed." Nor will there be, or can there be, a peace considered or concluded without "adequate reparation for the past and adequate security for the future." These words, a multum in parvo declaration of truth, were uttered by former Premier Asquith in connection with the last previous credit vote, and were quoted by Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in moving the last 2,000 million vote of credit; and they still represent, as they did when uttered by Asquith, the inflexible determination of the British Government and people to wage the war till conditions are created that will commit to Britain and her allies the dictation of terms to the beaten and broken enemy of civilization and humanity.

MUST ENROLL MORE MEN.

A year ago recruiting in Canada fell off, though the need for men, and still more men, grew greater. Appeal to the Government to begin in the third year of the war to take some little official, some effective, some business interest, in the work of recruiting, came from all quarters. It came from the press; it came from patriotic citizens who had splendidly exhausted all the material and means—body and spirit—of voluntary recruiting; it came from the hard-beset Canadian soldiers, in the fighting line, in the trenches, in the dug-outs, in the hospitals, in German prisons.

Lastly, after much repetition, the appeal seems to have touched the half-awakened conscience of the Government, and the "National Service" campaign is the result. Sir Robert Borden is touring the Dominion accompanied by Mr. R. B. Bennett, Director of the National Service Board. It seems that speeches are the indispensable preliminary to Government action in all countries; but the vital thing is to do something, to put the machinery in motion. The call comes to the country to help the national service campaign; for in large effect whether wisely or not, the Government has chiefly put the work in the hands of the people to make the details of the National Service undertaking work out successfully; and the people, as they are earnestly urged to do, must co-operate.

Speaking at Edmonton, Mr. Bennett said this would be the last trial of the voluntary system as an aid to, and medium of, recruiting. Though the voluntary spirit seems to have [illegible] yet we must, since there is [illegible] other way suggested—no compromise between voluntarism and some measure of conscription—make the most of the occasion offered, and unite in co-operation to make it the greatest possible success.

We've got to furnish more men. The fight is still on. Germany's fraudulent peace proposals point to the necessity; she encompasses them with threats of "fighting eternally." And though these threats are of the same quality of bunkombe as the peace talk, they show the necessity of waging the fight to a finish, and eternally humbling the braggarts and brigands of Prussian militarism. Great Britain says she is going to raise a million more men and fit them for fighting. And what she says she does, and her measures to keep her promise won't be half measures; won't be sending written invitations to enlistment through the post office. She will raise the men she undertakes to do, and there's "an end on't."

ONE REASON AGAINST PEACE.

The German Chancellor states as one reason for demanding peace, that the military power of Germany is unbroken; that it still retains all its malignant efficiency. That is the one strongest reason against a peace at the present time. The world and Europe have had bitter experience, in terms of tears and blood and suffering, of what can be expected with Germany's power of rapine, murder and bestiality unbroken.

The world will put no trust in Hollweg's cant, his plea of interest in humanity, as a motive in Germany's desire for peace. The world will set such ghastly hypocrisy against the hellish deeds Germany has committed, the destruction of property—the more sacred and venerated, the better—in the countries occupied; the stealing of the property of the people, and destroying where not stealing; the outraging of women; the murder and mutilation of children; the crucifying of prisoners; the burning of people; deportation from Belgium [illegible]erate schemes for starving a whole people; deportation from Belgium of men of working ability—slave raids in which families are smashed apart with rifle stocks, or are prodded apart by bayonets, the men taken from their wailing wives and children, and carried off into worse than Babylonish captivity. These actions are the climax of a "horrible and hellish programme that calls for the united protest in action of the whole civilized world."

While these things, and like things have been done in Belgium, and are being done there, as in all the spheres of outrage controlled by the allies of Germany, peace talk is folly, and worse, a crime. While the Huns have the power, as they boast with, unfortunately, a good deal of warrant, while their power and will and instinct to nameless acts of cruelty and outrage remains in any degree there can be no talk of peace. The allied powers, the smaller nations of Europe, the civilized world, cannot afford to make peace while remains a shred of Germany's power and will to world domination and enslavement of the nations—bringing them under the dominion of her brutal cult of force. While it remains there can be no peace.

The forces of civilization have a hard task before them. It will involve tremendous struggle and sacrifice, but it will be worth all that confronts us, to destroy forever the menace of remorseless militarism, that will work its will upon the nations unless it power for outrage is broken. The waging of this war to a victorious conclusion, demands the services of every man, and woman, too, in Canada and the Empire. What Belgium has suffered will befall this country, unless the power of Germany is broken, and that cannot be done without every able Canadian entering the ranks to help do the breaking.

THE TELEPHONE SERVES A VERY USEFUL PURPOSE.

Ways by Which Central Can Help You When You Are in Trouble.

People sometimes feel that they are abused and are not receiving very good service from the telephone operator at Central if they have to wait a few seconds for a number, but the extra service that a telephone exchange is called upon to give on occasions such as that of the fire on Monday is not generally known by the public or 'phone users.

A call to Central to get doctors, nurses, ambulances, etc., was promptly attended to at the Telephone Exchange, which resulted in the victims being more speedily rushed off to the hospital. What was done on Monday is being taken care of almost daily in a much smaller degree.

A sudden sickness at home, an accident in a factory or store requiring a doctor necessitates only the taking of the receiver from the hook and saying Doctor. If there is a fire the same procedure, only calling fire. The telephone operator can tell your number and knows where to dispatch the doctor or the fire brigade.

This is something worth knowing and is being taken advantage of daily by those unfortunate enough to require the help of others in their misfortune. When in trouble of this kind the best way is to tell it to the operator and she will do the rest, seems to be the principle on which the Local Branch of the Bell Telephone is entering into the lives of its subscribers and daily becoming a source of help in other ways than merely an easy way to converse at a distance.

THE PROBLEMS THAT CONFRONT THE QUADRUPLE ENTENTE ALLIES

Germany's threat of perpetual war is merely a natural accompaniment of the arrogance of her bogus peace proposals. Her power to shock and disgust or even surprise the civilized world, is exhausted. The fiendish will for perpetual conflict may exist, but gratification is impossible. Production, as outlined, may be made to balance war's consumption in coal, iron and all munitions. Food and clothing supplies may be produced in sufficient quantities for both the military and civilian population. It is easy to make good the yearly losses of a fleet in biding. Collapse must come in the human element, for in this the waste cannot be restored. In two years of warfare Germany has lost permanently for fighting purposes over two million men of serviceable age. In prosperous times the excess of births over deaths in the German Empire is only about a million, and the number of males annually reaching the fighting age is negligible compared with the war's fatalities. The elaborate organization of the nation on a basis that would restore the yearly waste of war ignores the most important requisite. In times of peace the waste, loss and destruction of wealth make a record of unexpected magnitude. The waste of effort, obstructed and misdirected, would be appalling if records were possible. But in spite of industrial conditions which provoke occasional protests on behalf of mothers and children the working force is not only maintained but slowly augmented. New economies in wealth and in effort may offset war's destructions, but cannot sustain the rapidly depleted ranks of the fighting forces. In these must the German plan for perpetual warfare be broken.

Britain's new war loan and her call for a million more men are the best and the most fitting answer to the impossible peace proposals and to the threat of impossible prolongation of the war. The Allies are fighting for a cause, the only cause that can justify this saturnalia of bloodshed. They do not want the needless prolongation of war for a single day, nor the needless sacrifice of a single human life. Civilization must be rendered safe from organized and plotting barbarism. Weaker nations must be exempt from attack by predatory strength. Atonement must be rendered by the perpetrators of national villainy. Plunder must be restored to rightful owners. Proposals that do not assure these results cannot be entertained. Neither can the Allies grant respites that would facilitate the perfecting of new plans for treacherous aggression. The Allies are dealing with a military autocracy to whom no oath is sacred, whom no pledge or promise can bind. They are dealing with a people who openly repudiate that regard for obligations which makes civilization possible. An unscrupulous assassin among the nations, fair of face and falsely pretending honest intentions while reaching for a concealed weapon, the German Empire has personified the lowest and most dangerous depth of human degradation. Forced at last to tear off the mask, the rulers hope to terrify with the threat of making their wholesale murder perpetual. The worse than failure of their frightfulness has not taught them a lesson. But for the awful tragedy impending their hope to intimidate the Allies would be laughable. If there be no other alternative, if the peace of Europe and the safety of civilization cannot be assured at a less terrible cost, the Allies are prepared to accept the sacrifices involved in a protracted war, made terrible by all modern engines of destruction. The power which threatens the liberty of the human race must be made to yield. The Allies have all the requisites vaunted and boasted in this German threat. They have also a cause worthy of every sacrifice—a cause in which they are assured of decisive victory.—The Globe.

undersome alteration. It was thought expedient by your Committee to place Superintendents of the Shelter on a salary basis, instead of the method employed previously.

This was carried into effect, but on account of inharmonious relations subsequently occurring between the Superintendents and the Committee it was finally decided to advertise for applicants. After careful consideration of the applications Miss Coulson who had had experience in this work, was appointed.

Mr. Spence has prepared a report of the statistical work of the Society, as far as he is able, dealing particularly with his own work since his appointment, so that it is not necessary for me to say anything upon this point.

The Receipts.

The receipts for the year ending Nov. 30th amounted to $3,482.02 while the expenditure reached $2,682.10, leaving a balance of $799.92.

It was most gratifying to note that in spite of the many calls on the purses of our citizens that the Tag Day receipts amounted to $1,308.84, an increase of $138.84 over last year.

This we take it, is a proof that the public recognize and appreciate the important work that the Children's Aid Society is doing. This is a Society that should not be allowed to suffer because of the war, if only just because the war makes its work more vitally indispensable. With the awful elecimation in the human race as a consequence of the present almost world-wide conflict, any work that has for its object the preservation of the rising generation, and the transforming of neglected children into reputable citizens should be heartily supported, if only for national economic reasons. The Hon. Mr. Hanna has stated that for every man or woman who is saved from becoming a ward of the state or of the public, whether represented by the municipality or the province, a saving of $800 is effected, so that a donation to such a society as this is simply an investment that will yield a profit in actual cash.

In conclusion, I desire to thank the ladies who so kindly and untiringly worked for the Tag Day Campaign, the citizens who have from time to time made donations in cash and clothing, and the Fraternal Societies who responded to our special appeal. All of which is respectfully submitted.

Joseph Wearing.

Inspector's Report.

Mr. Spence's report contains the following:

To the President and members of the Children's Aid Society of the City and County of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—The following figures will convey some idea of the work that I have been able to do covering the period from June 1st to November 30th, 1916, and in addition, it should be noted that much time has been occupied in revising records pertaining to the wards of the Society and other office work.

Statistics for 6 months ending Nov. 30th, 1916.

Applications for children	37
Children brought to Shelter (not wards)	8
Children placed on parole (not wards)	5
Children returned to parents (not wards)	23
Children involved	108
Children made wards	9
Children sent to Industrial School	2
Complaints received	46
Investigations made	46
Mail sent out	443
Meetings addressed	8
Mileage (approximate) covered	2350
Office interviews	78
Places visited outside of city	67
Police Court Attendance	30
Wards placed out	17
Wards returned to Shelter	5
Wards visited	100
Wards sent to Mercer reformatory	1
Warnings given	37
Visits paid on behalf of children	250

During the year Nov. 30th, 1915, to Nov. 30, 1916, 56 children passed inmates of the Shelter on Nov. 30th, through the Shelter. 13 children were inmates of the Shelter on Nov. 30, 1915, making a total of 69 having been cared for. Of this number 40 were males and 29 females; 41 came from the city and 28 from the county. 16 were made wards, 37 were returned to their parents, 20 were placed out. The total number of days' stay was 4,972, or an average of 72 days per child. There were 8 children in the Shelter on Nov. 30th, 1916, all of whom were boys, and four of them were being paid for wholly or in part privately.

Maintenance of Wards.

There seems to be some kind of a tentative agreement between the Society and the City and County Councils that their monetary grant shall relieve them of their liability for the maintenance of wards from their respective municipalities. This may be commendable as a matter of sentiment, but it is poor business. The Children's Protection Act distinctly states that when committing a child to the custody of control of a Children's Aid Society, the judge shall make an order for the payment by the Corporation of the municipality to which the child belongs of a reasonable sum not less than $2 weekly for the expense of supporting a child by the Society. Although these orders have always been made it appears the payment has never been applied for, and the Society has, consequently, been the loser. For instance, the County Council made a grant of $300 for this year, while the maintenance of children belonging to its municipality has cost over $800. I do not think the Councils would object to paying what they are legally responsible for, in addition to their usual grant for the general work of the Society, and I would suggest that the Executive adopt this policy for the ture.

For the more efficient execution of the work better office equipment is needed, more particularly a typewriting machine. For the publicity work a good, modern lantern and also a camera are absolutely necessary, and for travelling the County an automobile, although not indispensable, would save much time and enable more to be done. Many complaints come from the outlying townships where transportation is difficult. The expense of investigating these complaints has to be borne by the Society, and will amount to a considerable sum. My object in referring to these requisites in this report is, that possibly some well-wishers of the work are present who would be glad to increase its efficiency by presenting them to the Society.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

C. A. G. Spence,
Inspector and Asst.-Sec.

Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. William Gibbe, President of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Children's Aid Society, presented the following report:

In submitting a short report of the Auxiliary in connection with the Society, we bar to note with sincere thankfulness another year of growth and deep interest taken in the work of the Society, and especially in the renovating and refurnishing of the home under the new management. We hope to have the hearty co-operation of all the ladies in the future as in the past.

I wish, on behalf of the Auxiliary to thank all those who helped us in any way during the past year, either by donations or assisting us in the sewing. Special mention should be given to Mrs. Rogers' Bible Class, who have very kindly taken sewing every week, thus enabling us to clothe the urgent cases without much trouble. We have had several liberal donations during the year of material to make up cast-off clothing, etc. Also Mr. Bellegheni, for a jardinere stand; Mr. S. Jordan, a plant; Mr. Howard, a jardinere stand; Mrs. Stocker, handsome Morris chair, and Comstock and Sons, a sideboard.

Mrs. W. Gibbe.

On motion of Fire Chief Howard and Rev. Father Phalen, a vote of thanks was tendered to the ladies for their able and effective work during the year. They started out with less than three dollars and wound up with a balance of about twenty dollars. Their total disbursements during the year amounted to about one hundred and eighty-five dollars.

Officers Elected.

The election of officers resulted in the re-election of the old Board.

"I don't think we can do any better than ask the present officers to remain," said Adjutant McElhiney. A number of new members were added to the Board of Management. RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

EFFECTIVE CHRISTMAS WINDOW DRESSING BY THE PETERBOROUGH HARDWARE CO.

Attention-compelling and Sales-creating Displays of Christmas Suggestions — Clever Ideas Cleverly Arranged —Featuring of Silverware, Flatware, Brass and Copper Goods, Cutlery and Many Practical and Unique Gifts.

Timeliness as well as attractiveness marks the effective window displays of the Peterborough Hardware Co., 366 George street. For, amidst the bustle of big business during the holiday season, this firm never fails to find time to honour the coming guest with "extra special" window trims. People are looking for the store with the Christmas appearance, and they no more see the store with the everyday characteristics than the moth sees the candle.

This demonstration of the Peterborough Hardware Co. is the grand climax to the Christmas window dressing. It is the trimmer's "masterpiece" so to speak. The two large show windows have afforded ample scope for the skill and ingenuity of the trimmer. They will prove important factors in the Christmas selling, as they are both attention-compelling and sales-creating displays. The range of seasonable holiday gifts displayed are presented at a time when the public are in a receptive mood, and the variety of practical suggestions to Christmas shoppers are very helpful, especially to last-minute buyers.

The north window is a representation of some of the choicest samples of the Company's Silverplated Ware, and the south window shows excellent samples of Flatwear, etc. Both windows are not only ingeniously arranged for effectiveness, but are tastefully decorated with holly and other wreathings. Another special feature of these two windows is that every article is neatly priced in plain figures so that all may mentally size up the ability of their purse before stepping inside the store. To two members of the regular sales staff, Mr. Geo. Gordon and Mr. R. G. Langford, belong the credit for the excellent window dressing.

The Interior of the Store.

A Christmas atmosphere pervades the interior of this big, busy store. The Christmas shopper need have very little trouble in "solving the problem," as the appeals to the purchaser are most alluring. Such a wealth of practical gift suggestions for the Santa Claus impersonator would be hard to find. A good deal of intelligent thinking must have been done by the store's buyers and the clerks who have to put their "think-tanks" into keen operation to produce such results.

In one's tour of the store there may be seen displays of Hammered Flemish Metallic-ware in various ornamental designs, such as Jardineres, Waste Paper Baskets, Umbrella Stands, Smokers' Sets, Photo Holders, etc.; Brass Goods in similar designs; Fire Sets, with handsome brass coal hoods, shovels, tongs, etc.; Fire Sets and Irons in black designs; Pedestals, and other living-room ornaments; designs in Percolators, Coffee Machines, Chafing Dishes, Casseroles, Serving Trays, Electric Toasters, Tea and Coffee Pots, Irons, Electric Stoves, etc.

In Silverware and Holloware the Peterborough Hardware Co. have always been noted for displaying an extensive assortment. These include the famous 1847 Rogers Bros.' manufacture—"the silverplate that wears"—guaranteed for a lifetime. A show case filled with sets of Cutlery, Boxed Carvers, Tea and Dinner Spoons, Forks, Knives, and many exquisite patterns of Fancy Forks, Family Silver, Butter Knives, Sugar Sifters, Preserve Spoons, Berry Spoons, Sugar Tongs, Salad Forks, Cream Ladles, etc., etc.

Then, too, comes the juvenile attractions—the Children's Velocipedes, Sleighs, Skates, Tools, Pocket Knives, Hockey Sticks, and such like, all in alluring array, to tempt the eye of fond and intelligent parents.

In fact, it would be an omission of the most unpardonable kind, if the Christmas gift shopper fails to inspect the almost unlimited range of gifts in the Peterborough Hardware Store, as soon as possible.

G. W. Powell—F.S.
J. W. Buyers—R.S.
A. H. Webb—C.D.
Wm. Madill—Treas.
Mrs. A. Bradshaw—Organist
R. F. Duvall—Orator.
P. Robinson—S.W.
F. Clark—J.W.
J. Masters—S.B.
H. Martin—J.B.
W. Brown and W. G. McKee—Trustees.

These officers will be installed on the evening of January 11th, 1917, by Bro. J. S. Eagleson, High Chief Ranger of Ottawa, who will give a brief address. The occasion will take the form of a social evening, including a programme of songs, recitations and music. Refreshments will be served by the ladies. The members and their wives and families and friends are cordially invited to attend this "members' rally night."

Hoka Moka Minstrels At Havelock

Peterboro' Organization Made a Hit With Their Big Show Thursday

The "Hoka Moka" Minstrels, a local organization, headed by those two old-time favourites, O'Brien and Houlihan, journeyed to Campbellford on Thursday evening, where they put on a very successful show, and were greeted by a packed house. The "S.R.O." sign being hung out early that afternoon, leaving standing room only for the fifty or sixty people that accompanied the minstrel men from here.

The first part, which was a lengthy one, went off without a hitch, the audience demanding encore after encore. The funny endmen were Messrs. Houlihan, Collins, Grad,, O'Brien, Murty and Moher. Their jokes were original and really funny, and were fully appreciated by the crowd. To Mr. Vince McCabe fell the lot of interlocutor, which he filled in a very able and efficient manner. His original way of acting the part added much to the enjoyment of the evening. Mr. McCabe opened the first part by singing that beautiful ballad, "My Grandfathers Girl," which he rendered in good voice. It would be unfair to mention anyone in particular in the circle, as they all sang their songs in a finished style, an encore being demanded in every case. The programme was as follows:

"My Grandfather's Girl," Mr. Vince McCabe.
"Old Dominion Line," Mr. Sam. Houlihan.
"Hoka Moka Isle," Mr. Tim. Collins.
"Mandy Lee," Mr. Frank Grady.
"My Mother's Rosary," Mr. Will Casey.
"I've Grown So Used to You," Mr. Carmel Leguende.
"Nearer, Nearer Heaven," Mr. Ed. Hanrahan.
"Mammy's Coal Black Rose," Mr. Joe Clancy.
"Quaker Down in Quaker Town," Mr. Ed. Riley.
"Memories," Mr. Cecil Wolfe.
"Meet Me at Twilight," Mr. Emmett Cronin.
"For the Sake of a Rose," Mr. Art. Costello.
"Dixie Land," Mr. Bill Moher.
"Are You From Dixie," Mr. Mack Murty.

Sand dance—Mr. Sam. Houlihan.

The feature of the olio was Mr. Lane, a new resident of Peterborough, better known as "Ajax, the Strong Man." He gives a very interesting and exciting exhibition of strength. He thinks nothing of lifting five men over his head, while holding another man in his teeth. He toys with a 250-lb. man in one hand above his head, and a number of other things, each one more wonderful than the other. "Ajax" alone was worth the price of admission, and several comments were heard among the crowd to that effect.

Mr. James O'Brien amused the house for half an hour with his funny speech. He had the audience convulsed with laughted from start to finish. His jokes are better for the system than "Dr. Norvall's Pills." Then followed Mr. Sam. Houlihan, Peterborough's pride, in a soft shoe dance and waltz clog. Mr. Houlihan has lost none of his old-time "sprightliness," and Thursday night he was at his best. Mr. Joe Parkins and son put on a banjo entertainment that is not equalled by any of the big time vaudeville artists. Mr. Parkins is a musician, and an artist on the banjo, which was fully displayed by his work on Thursday night. Last, but not least, came "Mack" Murty in his mile-a-minute step dance. Mr. Murty is young at the dancing business, but will make some of the older heads sit up and take notice.

To Miss Marion Gorman, the brilliant young pianist, fell the arduous task of musical directress. This role carries with it a lot of worry and responsibility, and to Miss Gorman much credit is due for the able manner in which she looked after the musical end, which, after all, is the most important part in a minstrel show. Miss Gorman was ably assisted by an eight-piece orchestra, and many flattering remarks were passed upon its playing. The personal of the orchestra was as follows: Piano, Miss Marion Gorman (directress); cornet, Mr. Joe. Minicola; violins, Messrs. Vince McCabe, J. Condon and J. McCabe; trombone, Mr. Dominic Memmo; horn, Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, and drums and traps, Mr. Frank Lynch.

The members of the show wish to thank the manager of the Opera House for the generous manner in which he looked after their wants and the splendid way he heated the house.

School Boys Will Be Entertained At Y. M. C. A. During The Holidays

The monthly meeting of the Board of the Board of Directors will be held Tuesday evening next, at 6.30. This is the final meeting of the year, so the presence of every director is needed.

Mr. James Dutton of the William Stark Co. will address the Y.M.C.A. meeting on Sunday at 4.15 o'clock. Mr. Dutton's address will be on a timely subject and will be of considerable interest. All men and older boys are invited.

Friday evening, supper was served to the four winning teams in the recent membership contest. Captains of these teams were Ross Dobbin, Bruce Hamilton, Reginald Brown, and Herman Whitecroft. Forty men and boys were present.

Arrangements are being made to flood the tennis courts for a skating rink. It is expected that this rink will be in condition for use before the holidays.

Special arrangements are being made to care for the school boys who will throng the building during the two weeks' holiday. Also a special open house and gymnasium entertainment is being arranged for New Year's day. In view of the Patriotic work that the ladies are engaged in at the present time, the usual reception and refreshments will not form a part of the New Year's programme. However, a great effort will be made to throng the building with the young men and boys of the city on this day.

In making up the usual list of Christmas gifts do not forget a Y. M. C. A. membership ticket for son or brother. Perhaps father could be persuaded to renew his youth in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium or bowling alley if he were given a Y.M.C.A. ticket for Christmas. It is poor policy to let father grow old too soon.

$1,640.000 For British Red Cross

Up to date over $1,640,000 has been contributed this year to the British Red Cross Fund by the municipalities of the Province of Ontario. This amount is $125,000 in excess of the sum raised in connection with the Trafalgar Day appeal in 1915.

As the Organization of Resources Committee is anxious to have a report prepared in time for presentation at the next session of the Legislature, the books of the Fund will be closed on January 15th. All contributions must reach the Committee as soon as possible before that date in order that they may appear in the report.

Contributions received by the Treasurer, Hon. T. W. McGarry, after January 15th will be acknowledged and forwarded to the British Red Cross headquarters from time to time.

Christmas Parcels Are Already Moving Through the Mails

The tide of Christmas postal deliveries is already running high according to Postmaster Edgar. Recent mails have already brought a considerable quantity of Old Country holiday remembrances, and the next week or ten days will witness a continuance of these receipts. In fact practically up to the New Year the overseas packages will constitute a large proportion of the local postal business. The Canadian interchange of gifts is expected to be as heavy as usual but will barely show an increase over recent years. It is believed that much of this former gift-giving between relatives in Canada has been diverted and extended to the sending of parcels to the soldiers in England and France.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

At Mark Street Methodist Church to-morrow night, there will be a service to the memory of William Miles, who has been missing since the great Quaker Oats fire.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

The Ladies' Aid Society for St. Andrew's church wish to thank the following for their kindness in helping to make their bazaar and rummage sale such a great success.

Mr. J. G. Gole, of the Woolworth Co., for the nice supply of decorations; J. M. Greene, for the use of two phonographs; Mr. R. Hall, wrapping paper; Mr. Bragg, for the donation of Quaker oats; Gillette of Toronto, for the Magic Baking Powder; Curling Club, for the use of their rink, and Mr. McIntosh for his kindness to the ladies; Dr. F. S. Robinson, for the use of the autos and the others who so freely gave their time and assistance of their cars; D. Bellegham & Sons, for tables; A. Comstock & Sons, for chairs; Mr. John, for tea; Mr. G. A. Gillespie, for cream and milk supplied.

Proceeds were $475.00 for the two days' sale.

We owe a hearty vote of thanks for all who gave their time and help for the preparing of this event, and the way all who gave so generously in every respect was really far beyond the expectations of the ladies in charge of the various attractive booths, who are as follows: Mrs. John and Sills, rummage sale; farmer's booth, Miss M. Gordon. Mrs. G. Kerr, tea room. Mrs. Edmison, fish pond; Mrs. J. H. Edmison, home-made cooking; Mrs. Chas. McFarlane, fancy articles; Mrs. R. J. McWilliams, useful articles; Mrs. W. H. Wanan, apron booth.

Mrs. G. W. Green, President.
Mrs. J. H. Edmison, Treas.
Mrs. W. J. Cox, Secretary.

Market Situation For the Week

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:—

Trade in grocery lines has been fairly good during the week. There is a slight cessation noticeable, due to the pre-holiday period. An uncertainty and weakness prevails in the flour market at the time of writing, due to peace talk. For the most part the offers of peace have had but little effect so far in the market. Wholesalers quite generally feel that very little will come of the present advances of the enemy powers. Sugar declined 10c per hundred on all makes.

Stocking Heavy.

There has been a disposition on the part of some retailers to stock fairly heavy and thus run themselves into shallow water when payment time comes. Wholesalers are inclined to advise more cautious buying. There is an easier tone in butter, eggs, and cheese during the week. People are not buying as heavily on these commodities and the decreased demand has put a different complexion on the market. Live and dressed hogs are higher in price. Canned goods are holding in steady market with an easier tone in canned tomatoes. All dried fruits are in firm market with possible shortages in some lines for the Christmas trade. Nuts are also in firm market and many lines will be short for the holiday trade also. Teas are also firm and in the London market are quoted one-half cent per pound higher.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BIG SQUAD OUT AT FIRST JUNIOR PRACTICE

The first hockey practice of the season was held at Brock St. Rink last night when a big squad of Junior candidates and a number of the 247th Battalion Intermediates were out for over an hour. The hold that hockey still has was indicated by the large attendance of rail birds who gathered to get a line on the players. The Juniors had a raft of youngsters out, good, bad and indifferent, but the majority good. Of last year's team Graham, Cherrett, Montgomery and Bartley were in uniform, while among the new players out was McFee, who learned the game up in New Liskeard. The majority of the others out were members of last year's City and Junior Church League teams, and there is good material among them. Several of the youngsters are very promising, although a little light and inexperienced in view of the number of seasoned players who are available this year. Two Junior goal-keepers, Carney and Murray, both did well in the nets. Scotty Shea of Lindsay, will be out at the next practice.

Among the Juniors out were: Graham, Montgomery, Cherrett, Bartley, McFee, Forst, McIntyre, Wright, Clarke, Jackson, Park, Carney, Murray and Soden.

Among the 247th out were: Halpin, Jerry Coughlin, Thornton, Legros and Shaw.

There were too many on the ice for anybody to shine much, but two sides were selected and the players got a hard hour's exercise.

The next Junior practice will be held on Monday night at 7 o'clock and players are asked to be on hand sharp on time. The upstairs dressing-room will be available for Monday night's workout.

This Christmas

Let us Give Moderately to Each Other and Generously to the Soldiers' Families

Nineteen hundred and sixteen years ago came the very first Christmas, and for all these centuries there has recurred the Great Anniversary with its message of good will to men.

And so we give gifts.

Men and women of Ontario! We who stand for good will among men and nations; we whose men fight that there may at last be real peace on earth—let us make this a Christmas worthy of the day it commemorates—let us lay aside a generous proportion of our Christmas money for the families of those who are fighting the good fight.

Give to the Canadian Patriotic Fund

the fund that guards the soldiers' families from want.

Great as the result will be among the families of our soldiers, greater yet may the blessing be among us, the givers. Christmas will have a more vital meaning for us than perhaps ever before, and as for the children, who can measure the impression they will receive and keep of that Christmas Day when they shared their Christmas with the loved ones of the men who saved their country!

Let each Canadian boy and girl get a lesson from this historic Christmas which will go with them all through life.

Good men and women of Ontario! Can the need of our soldiers' families cry in vain for the relief which this Fund alone makes possible? Can we—can we, in the face of it all, again give lavishly among ourselves? Shall we not this year, with hearts full of the spirit of Christmas, lay aside a generous proportion of our Christmas money for the cause which so urgently needs it?

"Somewhere in France" he is fighting the good fight.

Somewhere in Ontario all that he holds dear is depending upon our decision.

Truly "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Ontario will be asked in January to assure the Canadian Patriotic Fund that it can depend on having six million dollars in 1917 for the families of Ontario's soldiers.

Four million of these dollars must be secured from individual subscriptions. If there is no Branch of the Fund in your town or county send your subscription direct to the Head Office, Canadian Patriotic Fund, Victoria street, Ottawa.

WHITBY, Dec. 15.—In the case of John C. Feelan v. Lake Simcoe Navigation Co. at the December Sessions here the plaintiff was awarded $1,800 damages. He was permanently disabled in the summer of 1915 when the steamer Otonabee struck a bridge on the Trent Valley Canal. Feelan, who was bridge tender, received very serious injuries. JOHN CAMPBELL DOUGLASS.

A letter received in Peterborough this morning gives information of the death of John Campbell Douglass, a former well known resident and native of this city. The death took place at the residence of his sister, ("Edie" Douglass), now Mrs. Millard Wagner of Guymon, Oklahoma. The late Mr. Douglass was born on Gilmour street, the only son of the late Andrew Douglass, building contractor. Fifteen or sixteen years ago he removed to Florida, and later to New York, where he was engaged in literary work. He was a singularly well-read man and of fine mind. As a literary reviewer and critic he held a high place in New York publishing circles. Not long ago he went to reside with his sister, whose second husband is a large ranch owner in Oklahoma. Here his last illness, malignant cancer, ended in death. The late Mr. Douglass will be well remembered by the older residents. After leaving Peterborough he developed higher moral and literary qualities. He was an unusually human man with the weaknesses of humanity but with its best qualities—a tender and humane heart, with an active love for children and animals. Burial took place in a prairie cemetery in Oklahoma, near the town of Guymon.

FINED FOR HAVING MUSKRAT SKIN

LINDSAY, Dec. 16.—Mr. Edgar Hepburn was fined in the police court by Police Magistrate F. D. Moore, K.C., $14.40, for having a muskrat skin in his possession unlawfully.

A search warrant has been issued in connection with the case, and High County Constable Conquergood and Game Warden Parker visited the premises of the accused. They found some skunk and coon skins, and also came across the tail of a muskrat.

The accused at first pleaded not guilty stating that the rat was caught by accident, but finally admitted killing it. It was his duty to hand the rat over to the Game Warden, but he skinned it and hung the pelt in the stable. It fell to the floor, he claimed and a pig eat it.

Plainville Corners Report—A Man of Mystery

Police Magistrate Davidson, according to the Cobourg Star has received an anonymous letter from a resident of Plainville, stating a "man who looked like a German was seen in that vicinity this week. Following is the letter.

"Nov. 13, Dec. 12, 1916.

Mr. Davidson.

Dear Sir,—I write you in reference to a German tramp who came along the old Cavan road this morning. He stayed all night at Wilbert Col's. They say they are sure he is a German and he pretended he could not talk english. He had a large bundle of something. No one knows what. He left their before it was day light, but he travelled East and some time in the forenoon he went in to Albert Harper's and asked for his breakfast. That was the last we heard of him. A black looking fellow with a mustash. He asked for lodging at Hugh Halligan's, but they refused him, for they thought he was a German spie, or perhaps he was on his way from Peterborough, perhaps implicated in this aerial explosion at the Quaker Oats Co. They asked him if he come from Peterborough and he said he had came from another direct, but it is the opinion of all that he did, and that he is on his way east to the Saint Lantance River to cross the river where it is narrow and shallow and get back to the states. Now I think that I have told you as near as I can. The folks all seemed afraid to phone to Cobourg for fear they would get into trouble. It was talked of all day, every body thought he should be made give an account of himself, but no person did it to my solidee, so I thought I would drop you a line and perhaps you would see after him. I just sine my name a friend and then my name wont be mentioned but it is a true statement.

MISS DOROTHY ALLAN DELIGHTED TWEED

The Tweed News says:

Our music loving people were given a great treat at the Organ and Vocal Recital in the Methodist Church, Monday evening.

Mr. John Allan, organ soloist, of Peterborough, and his daughter, Miss Dorothy Allan, provided the musical programme with Miss Myrtle Fawcett contributing two readings.

Mr. Allan's work at the organ was most pleasing and demonstrated his ability as an artist, his numbers were splendidly varied and the response with which the audience received them showed that the player had reached their hearts and won their favour.

The singing of Miss Allan was the best, or at least, the equal of anything ever heard in that church, and that is saying a lot. She completely captured her audience and was recalled again and again. Her rendering of La Marseillaise (L'Isle) was exceptionally fine. "Spring's Awakening" (Sanderson) and "Hark, Hark My Soul" (Newton) were very greatly enjoyed. Miss Allan is assured of a very warm reception before a Tweed audience at any future time.

PATRIOTIC CHINAMAN

Did "His Bit" by Chopping Wood for Soldiers' Wives.

This pretty little story, which seems to carry the stamp of truth, comes from an officer of the Canadian Patriotic Fund in British Columbia.

In a little town on the Fraser River lived an old Chinaman. He existed by doing odd jobs. When the patriotic fund was formed in that town John came to the chairman and said, "You catchee me job, I givee to help soldier's wife." The chairman, not knowing of any work for John at the time, said that he was sorry but he could not give him employment. A few days late John came again. Once more he said, "You catchee me job, me givee to help soldier's wife," and once again no employment was forthcoming. The third time John came to the chairman. This time his request was somewhat different. "You givee me name of six soldiers' wives; me go cut wood, no charge," said John. "Me no get job, me no give money, but me cut wood." And so John is now giving a day a week to cutting the firewood for six soldiers' families and thus doing his bit for his adopted land.

REICHSTAG'S CONSERVATIVES CALL FOR A FLAT STATEMENT THAT THE PEACE CRY IS NOT ONE OF DEFEAT

Suggest That the Whole Body Add to the Chancellor's Announcement the Expression of a Demonstration of an Unflinching Will to Win—Newspapers Fear the Entente Will Ignore the Appeal.

WARNS AGAINST OPTIMISM

BERLIN, December 18.—A caucus of the conservative party in the Reichstag adopted a resolution, which is now published, says the Overseas News Agency, declaring that the peace offer made by the Central Powers is based naturally on a programme of concrete peace conditions.

These conditions, the resolution continued, are unknown, but it considers it evident that no negotiations will be carried on in order to obtain "peace at any price, but the conditions should guarantee a peace which will safeguard Germany's future." The preamble to the resolution declares that the peace offer is a "matter of highest historical importance."

The resolution recalls the feeling of self-reliance expressed in the simultaneous orders to the army and navy, and declares it is probable that the Entente, nevertheless, will interpret the peace offer as a sign of weakness. The conservative party, it adds, had suggested that the whole Reichstag add to the announcement of the peace offer a demonstration of an unflinching will to win, which certainly would have been expressed by all parties, with the possible exception of the extreme left wing of the socialists.

The resolution then recalls the announcement of the Imperial Chancellor that the German nation through its chosen representatives will have an opportunity to take a definite stand on the question of the aims of the war, and concludes by stating that the conservative party expects "that the advantage gained by the blood of our brave troops will be made the basis of a peace which, according to human understanding, will guarantee the military, economic and financial future of our country."

WARNS AGAINST OPTIMIST.

The Tageblatt says it is apparent from recent utterances in hostile countries that sensible persons there understand it is impossible to regard the peace proposal of the Central Powers as a sign of weakness, but adds that other persons in those countries oppose "premature peace." Balancing these two tendencies, the Tageblatt says:—

"Can Premier Lloyd George have turned from a sober statesman to a gambler? Can he have forgotten statesmanship is the art of possibilities? If Lloyd George and his colleagues forget this, they themselves and their nations will have to suffer the consequences."

Warning the public not to be too sanguine this newspaper continues:—

"It may be that a negative answer is being prepared for the messenger of peace, but the hour must come when the great masses of those who are in fetters will regain freedom of speech and freedom of movement."

The Vossische Zeitung says:—"One would think common sense must prompt the Powers at war with us at least to inquire what our peace conditions are. Their character has been outlined by the Chancellor, who said the agreement must safeguard the existence, honour and liberty of development of the Central European nations, and that it also must guarantee a lasting peace. This means that the conditions could not be of such a nature as to offend the dignity of others nations."

"Almost all neutral newspapers take the attitude that the people in the Entente countries must certainly share the views of the German Chancellor as to the advisability of entering on peace negotiations," says the Overseas News Agency. "Some newspapers say the only question is whether the Entente government will understand or desire to hear the voice of the people. Some of these newspapers, especially in Switzerland and Scandinavia, discuss the problem of what neutrals ought to do if the action of the Central Powers should fail on account of the attitude of the Entente.

"The Nieuwe Courant, of The Hague, says the Entente governments must decide the matter without being influenced by the ravings of the mad press. The Vaderland asserts it is hardly credible that the first step of the Central Powers should not be followed by others. The Post, of Zurich, says:—"The nations are ready for peace. Whether the leading men are ready must be decided.'"

DAY OF ILLUSIONS OVER FOR GERMANY

Observer Notes Sad, Anxious Faces in the Streets of Berlin—Confidence is Departing—With Thumbscrews Tightening, an American Doctor Wonders How the Poor Manage to Get Along.

FOOD SUPPLIES RUNNING LOW

"No one who has studied the German press lately could fail to be struck by certain indications of the progress made during the first month of the third year of the war toward the final disillusionment of the German people."

Thus writes the correspondent, who from month to month has supplied the Pall Mall Gazette of London with a review of the internal affairs of the Central Empires, in his summary of the economic situation in Germany during August.

Reference is made to crowded meetings in various parts of the Empire, at which resolutions in favour of "a speedy peace without any annexations" are enthusiastically adopted. The underground political controversy directed against the Government, it is asserted, is becoming increasingly bitter, the attacks on the Food Dictator grow more and more violent as his failure to achieve the impossible becomes clearer, and considerable latitude is now allowed to the Socialist press in discussing the causes and effect of food scarcity. There is also a spread of revolutionary tendencies.

A neutral diplomatist of strong pro-German sympathies has written a letter in which he remarks that "the sad and anxious faces one meets in Berlin make one think that happiness has fled from the world." After admitting that the confidence in victory is no longer what it was, he concludes his letter.

They are still putting a good face on things and some even believe that Verdun will be taken soon, but all the same, my impression is that the moral of the German soldier has become weakened, and that he has no longer his old confidence in the utility of the efforts demanded of him. Germany's strength can grow greater, but has reached its apogee.

A Dane who has resided in Berlin for six or seven years writes.

There is little talk now of the final victory. The military authorities say, of course, that they will fight to the last man, but the common people hunger after peace, as also do most of the soldiers.

Robberies and plundering are common, and would be much more so were it not that many of the shops are empty, in fact about half the shops are closed, and the smaller restaurants also. Rioting is of daily occurrence, both in the city proper and the suburbs. Crimes are increasing rapidly, murder, robbery, and assault are common, also suicide. It seems as if the town were struck with madness.

An American doctor who has been studying in Berlin for some years describes the growing difficulty of obtaining the necessaries of life, even when one possessed the money to pay for them. "Till September, 1915," he writes, "there was no hardship, but then the thumbscrews began to tighten, and now the people of Germany are slowly but surely being starved out. * * * It is a riddle to me how the poor families have managed, and conditions must be much worse now."

A Woebegone Tone.

The woebegotten tone of documents found on recently captured prisoners is amazing. They tell of hunger being rife, of the impossibility of obtaining sufficient food, of the scarcity and exorbitant cost of clothing and boots, of the countless food tickets, of the long waits in the food queues, of the frequent failure of supplies, especially of meat, fat, and potatoes. There are constant allusions to growing discontent among the asses, to strikes and riots and to collisions with the police.

Many of the writers express the opinion that things cannot last much longer as they are, and there are ominous murmurings against the rich and the "food insurers." That the suffering among the masses is real no one who reads these letters can doubt, and the knowledge of this suffering cannot fail to exert a depressing influence on the soldiers at the front.

The entrance of Roumania into the arena of course must have a most serious effect on Germany. It is possible that the full effect of the cutting off of Roumanian supplies may not be apparent at first, but in view of the German harvest, but before the end of the winter Germany's position should again become critical. The yield of the harvest, however, is a good average one.

GRAVE OF BROKEN HEARTS.

Michelangelo, Galileo, Alfieri, and Macchiavelli Lie Under One Roof.

In the Franciscan Church of the Holy Cross rises one of the two monuments disdainful Florence condescended to give her greatest poet, whose greatest honour lies in his gift to the world at one splendid sweep of a pure and recreated Italian language — until his time halting and inerte—in that immortal masterpiece of literature, the Divina Commedia, says the National Geographic Magazine.

This church might well be known as the Broken Hearts instead of Santa Croce, for near Dante's cenotaph — his exiled ashes still rest in Ravenna —lies the body of that other terrific genius, Michelangelo, who, broken in spirit, died gladly when the city so dear to his heart fell once more upon dark and tyrannous days. And Galileo is here, too, and Alfieri and Macchiavelli, and many another a brilliant train.

Michelangelo's last work is in the nearby church of San Lorenzo, in the mortuary chapel of the Medici—the great house which deigned to favour him with its patronage or its cruelty throughout his life.

PUT SUNDAY ON A SALARY

Federal Council of Churches to Criticize Evangelist's Offering.

It is learned on unquestioned authority that the Commission of Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches will say some very plain things concerning the Rev. William A Sunday's "free-will" offering in its report to be made to the council at its forthcoming meeting in St. Louis, observes the Boston Evening Transcript. More than that, the commission will recommend, it is said, that all evangelists, Sunday with the others, be taken charge of by the churches themselves, according to religious bodies to which they belong, their finances regulated and supervised, and that the evangelists be paid salaries.

The commission will tell the council, it is said, that almost all professional evangelists have raised in expression of a deside that they be put on an official basis, as are ministers, and money matters be taken off their hands. The commission does not say whether Sunday has himself joined in the appeal, but it is informally said that he has not done so. The commission will say, it is known, that some measure of harm is done by the Sunday "free-will" offering plan. Public criticism of it is known to be general, and it is not mitigated by the fact that Sunday gives much of it away. It seems certain that the council will adopt the recommendations of its commission.

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

When Paul Burton reached the street most of the private motors had been summoned and dispatched by the starter. He stood for a while looking up at the stars and breathing deeply the grateful night air. The moon-mist made a shadowy lacework of the trees in the park, and the dark contours of the avenue's mansions were silhouetted beyond the lights of the Savoy and Netherland. The expenditure of so much of his emotions still always left him strangely restless and made him crave a brief after-math of solitude. So he sent his car away and turned down the avenue, seeking corroboration there, and the girl had met them with only an impersonal and non-committal smile.

Paul had drunk enough of flattery to feel piqued at its withholding. Now to see the figure of her who had withheld appear there quite unaccompanied, as though rising in response to his meditations, almost startled him. She did not see him until he reached her side and lifted his hat, not even then, for she was looking across the avenue with something of absorption in her manner, until he spoke her name.

Even as he murmured, "Miss Terroll," the inflection of surprise, remained in his voice. It was well after ten o'clock and in those circles of society where he was received the system of chaperonage was rigid enough to fail of understanding for the women who dared the streets at night unescorted. He knew ladies who went to their several rostrums to sound the clarion of sex equality and who went at night, but they did not go unchaperoned. And under the lights this slim figure, with its sassy, almost boyish independence, seemed very young, almost childish.

She turned at his greeting, and her eyes must have read his thoughts, for once more they smiled and in the smile was an amused twinkle. This time, though, it was also a smile on the lips, revealing a row of teeth so small and white that they accentuated her seeming of childishness. She must be about twenty-two or twenty-three he thought.

"Mr. Burton," she laughed, "you spoke my name then almost as though I had astonished or startled you. I was scrutinizing the house across the way rather intently, but honestly there was no burglary in my thoughts."

"I'm rather sorry to hear that," he encountered with a simulation of disappointment. "I've never burgled—and I had begun to hope you'd imitate me and let me share the adventure." She said nothing for a moment, and he bluntly demanded, "I was wondering what was in your thoughts just then."

Miss Terroll bent forward to look up the avenue before she answered. The buses were not running close together at this hour and the lamps of the nearest were still two blocks away.

"If I tell you, will you tell me why you spoke my name so chidingly?"

"It seems on its face a fair bargain." He spoke with a pretendedly grave consideration of the subject. Then added, "Yes, I will."

"I was thinking of music."

"What music?"

"Just music as music. Music as the one art which needs no background because every listening human being supplies one. That is where it succeeds where sculpture, for instance, fails. Music is a sort of panacea."

"Oh!" His monosyllable was a trifle disappointed. With such a cue she might at least have admitted his music into the summary.

The light from the overhead lamps fell in a circle of comparative radiance and he had time to note the charming modelling of her throat, and a certain delicate nobility in the curve of her brow, where the soft hair merged with the dark shadowing of her hat brim.

"You haven't carried out your part of the contract yet," she reminded him. "I've told you what, but have not told me why."

"I mean to. Are you waiting for some one?"

"I am waiting for a 'bus to take me home."

"Where are you going to let it take you? Where is your home, I mean?"

"The Square," she answered, "and there is the 'bus coming, to gather me in, and you still have not told me why I shocked your voice into that undertone of astonishment."

Paul Burton smiled, and did not yet enlighten her. Instead he went on stubbornly questioning. "The Square does not mean Union or Madison. I have detective genius enough to infer that, because they're not places of homes. Is it Gramercy or Washington?"

The girl flashed her smile on him again, and replied lightly.

"One enters my Square under a marble arch and we who live there always think of it as the Square."

"But Washington Square is a long way," he remonstrated. "It's a far journey to take alone."

The girl then stepped out behind the curb, and signalled, then as the 'bus drew over and came to a stop, she nodded to the man as she started up the stair to the roof. "Good night, Mr. Burton," she called over her shoulder. "You are a good custodian of secrets."

But the musician was climbing up after her and when she seated herself at the front he took his place beside her. "I'm going to answer all questions put to me on the way down to the Square," he announced.

"But you have just complained that it's a far journey."

"I beg your pardon. I said it was a far journey to take alone."

She turned in her seat and looked at him. The lips and the brow were reserved, even grave, but in the green gray eyes danced a truant twinkle. As the heavy vehicle rumbled and lurched along the way where the asphalt fell into shadow she became a graceful silhouette of slenderness but as they passed through the brighter zones about the great opals swung from the lamp pillars, the dimpled little chin and small nose revealed themselves in a sort of baffling warfare of sauciness and dignity. Paul knew that there were well-held frontiers of reserve and self-containment in this woman's nature, but that back of it lay an alluring playground of mischief.

"And yet we are told," she was saying in a low voice, whose music suddenly impressed the musician, "that—

Down to Gehenna or up to the throne.
He travels the fastest who travels alone."

"Just at the moment we are not bound for either of those places," he assured her. "We are going to the Square."

"Why was it?" she demanded suddenly. For a few minutes they had been silent, and Paul had revised his estimate. She could hardly be as old as twenty-one. Perhaps she might be twenty.

"Really you are exaggerating," he laughed. "I was neither astonished or shocked. I was only surprised, and when I tell you why I shall no longer be a man of mystery, consequently I shall no longer be a man of interest."

"But my curiosity will be satisfied. Isn't that quite as important?"

He shook his head. His own curiosity was far from satisfied. He was still wondering why she had no kind word to say for his music.

"I was just surprised to find you there—alone," he said at last.

"Oh!"

Until the 'bus swung into view of the Metropolitan tower neither of them spoke, and then the man turned to look at his companion and found her smiling to herself. It struck him that if she would only laugh aloud, it would be worth hearing. But of that, at that moment, he said nothing.

"Won't you share the joke with me?" he smiled, and she said:

"I was just thinking of your solicitude about my being alone on Fifth avenue, after all the formidable places where I've been alone—in one-night stands."

"One-night stands?" he repeated vaguely after her and she replied only with a matter-of-fact nod, then, for his further enlightenment.

"You see I am an actress and most of my work has been on the road."

Paul Burton's face did not succeed in masking his surprise at the announcement.

"Have I shocked you again?" she demurely inquired.

"Shocked me, no." He disavowed with an almost confused haste. "I suppose I was surprised because the few actresses I have known have all been so unlike you."

"You mean," she amplified, "because I don't make up for the street?"

"I shouldn't have said that," he laughed, then added: "Now if you had told me you were playing truant from a young ladies' seminary, I would have found it quite natural. I saw you out front just before I began playing. Somehow the simple directness of your expression—I hoped it was anticipation—didn't seem to me characteristic of the stage. I fancied that professional people were usually chary of enthusiasm."

"There are at least several sorts of stage people, and they're not all gutter-children," she answered. "And then I haven't always been an actress. It was thrust upon me—by necessity."

"When I play," the man assured her, "the faces out front always grow vague to me. To-night I say yours when the others had gone. Then I lost yours, too. I hope I didn't disappoint you."

She shook her head. "No," she said, but to the simple negative she added nothing affirmative.

Paul Burton remained silent, half-piqued, and she divining his thought, smiled quietly to herself at his petulance, but finally she spoke slowly and gravely: "You are an artist and until to-night you didn't know of my existence. Anything I might say would mean little to you."

"Even," he impulsively demanded, "if it came from the lost face that faded?"

"If that is true," she responded, "I don't need to say anything, do I?"

To Paul's subtly attuned nature many things came in intuitive impressions. Now he was keenly interested because this woman whom he had met that night had told him only one thing about herself, that she belonged to a world of which, in the personal sense, his world touched only the least creditable segments. He felt that she would not, without a much riper acquaintanceship, tell him anything more. Yet he felt with conviction that her refinement was not only innate and true, but that of an aristocrat; that her mind was not only quick, but cultivated. As though dropping thoughtlessly into a more musical tongue he spoke next in French, and she replied in that tongue as unconsciously as though she had not noticed his change of language. But though he questioned persistently and skilfully until the 'bus rolled under the arch, he drew no further information from her as to herself, save that at present she was unemployed, and that her days were filled with that cheerless of tasks, calling on managers.

He gathered that the distinguishing difference between triumph and struggle on the stage was that the managers sent for the triumphant and the struggling called uninvited.

As Paul helped Miss Terroll out of the 'bus and walked at her side the short distance between the terminal of its route and the south side of the Square he said abruptly:

"Some day I want you to do something for me."

"What?"

"To laugh aloud. I suppose you sometimes do laugh aloud, don't you?"

Her response was to break unconsciously into a peal of mirth that held in it a twinkle of soft music and spontaneity.

"I can be provoked," she admitted and to that confession she added the inquiry, "Why do you want to hear me laugh?"

"I did want to hear you laugh because some instinct told me there would be music in it," he assured her. "Now I do want to hear you laugh again, and often, because I know it."

When he had said good-night at her door and had walked across to the Brevoort cab-stand at Eighth street he took a taxi. During the drive home he thought only once of Loraine Haswell. "I must see more of Miss Terroll," he informed himself. "She is decidedly interesting."

Hamilton Burton shoved back a mass of papers and smiled across his desk at his secretary.

"Carl, do you chance to recall what General Forrest of the late Confederate States of America had to say on the subject of strategy?" Bristol stretched his arms above his head and leaned back in his chair, grateful for a moment of relaxation after two hours of application.

"I believed he reduced military science to the simple proposition of 'gettin' thar fust with the most men,' didn't he?"

That was his correct formula—and finance has its points of similarity."

"Is the comment general, or has it a specific bearing?"

"Quite specific. Do you remember my prophecy a short while back. I reminded you that the coin of big business bore on one face the image and superscription of Cæsar Augustus Malone—and on the reverse my own poor stamp."

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

IRELAND HAS BIG PROBLEM

Government is to Prohibit Exporting of Breeding Animals.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Dec. 15.—Serious trouble is in sight over Irish pigs and potatoes. George W. Russell, head of the Irish agricultural department, announced at a meeting of farmers a Dundalk that the department will prohibit the export of breeding sows. It regret that it cannot also prohibit the export of very young pigs. The high prices of the animals in England and the high cost of feeding them at home tempted Irish farmers to disregard the whole future of this important industry.

There is only a two-thirds crop of potatoes this year. There has been a demand that the Government prohibit their export from Ireland so as to save the nation's chief food. This demand has been refused. Mr Russell asserts that the refusal is in the best interests of the Irish farmer, and hopes to increase Ireland's production of food, which has been checked by the shortage of labour.

Financial America.—There is a steady demand in U. S. Steel from investment and banking interests.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Was It an Anniversary Ghost?

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

One night—it was 12 o'clock—a cabman was jogging along through Wall street, New York, half asleep on his box, when he was accosted from the sidewalk by a man whose apparel made coachy blink his eyes to assure himself that he saw aright. To begin at the top of his head, he wore a beaver hat with a large bell crown and a rim curled at the sides. His coat was very high in the collar, his necktie was voluminous lace, the buttons on his clothes were brass, his breeches were what we call knickerbockers.

Coachy drove to the sidewalk, and the gentleman, without asking permission, opened the door and stepped inside.

"To Greenwich," he called as he closed the door behind him.

"Up Greenwich street, sir?"

"Yes."

That part of New York which was originally Greenwich Village is several miles from where the stranger entered the coach, and the cabman would rather have declined to make a fare so late in the evening. But there was something about the stranger that was compelling. When the cab reached Greenwich and cabby asked for further instructions the man inside only said, "Drive on." Cabby seemed awed by the tone in which the words were spoken and dared not ask another question, so he drove on in the direction he was going, northward, till he reached the river bank. The man inside stepped from the cab without calling on coachy to stop, and when he touched the ground there seemed not to be the slightest shock. As he walked away he fixed his eyes on the cabman with a look that made him forget all about the omission to pay the fare. Indeed, a cold chill ran down the man's back. Going to the margin of the river, his figure seemed to float along, growing more and more indistinct till it was lost, as cabby thought, in the water. But this could not be, for there came from where he had disappeared a sound of oars. The sound passed up the river, gradually dying away in the distance.

Now, although the stranger had given no orders to the cabman to await his return, the latter felt no power to do otherwise. He did not think that by going away he would lose the money he had already earned; he remained fixed where he was by the look his fare had given him when he walked away with that unearthly tread.

It was the season when the days are long and dawn begins about 3 o'clock. Coachy sat for perhaps an hour, perhaps two—he could never recall how long it was—waiting there on the river bank, with no human being near, for he says that he was not conscious of the surrounding traffic of the present day. He saw about him only the green bank of the river, behind him the village, in which all were wrapped in slumber. But he is not sure that he was awake, not sure but that he was dreaming. At any rate, he was oblivious to the stranger's return, for the first he knew of it he heard a voice ordering him to drive home. Rousing himself and looking down from the box, he saw his fare's face thrust without the window, looking up at him. The cabman will never forget that face. It was singularly handsome, though so pale as to be rather of the dead than of the living. The expression was that of one who had committed some dreadful crime, one who had killed some one. But in it there was no remorse. It was rather triumph.

"Home!" said the stranger.

The cabman did not know and did not dare ask where home was. He knew that he had taken up his fare on Wall street, and for that location he headed.

In the twilight the city seemed changed. All the landmarks of a metropolis were missing.

Turning out of Broadway at Wall street, he drove down till he reached the point where Broad joins it. Then was where he had taken up his fare. Here, too, was not the office of the great banking house which is there, but a small brick dwelling. The stranger called on him to stop, and he drove up to the curb.

Coachy says that when this singular being alighted he cast his eye at a dwelling on the opposite side of Wall street a short distance down toward the East river and looked for a moment at it with malignant triumph; then, turning, without mentioning the money he owed for his ride, he mounted the steps of a dwelling before him and seemed to pass through the door without opening it.

Coachy was found that morning in a stupor on his box and about to fall. He was removed to a hospital, whence he did not emerge for several weeks. When he did so he narrated the adventure of that memorable night to a gentleman who happened to be a scholar. All the information he received was this:

The house the strange man entered was once occupied by Aaron Burr. Alexander Hamilton lived on the opposite side of Wall street a little way farther down toward the East river. The night of the adventure was the hundredth anniversary of the duel fought between Hamilton and Burr, in which Hamilton was killed.

Perhaps the vision came to the cabman as he was entering a severe illness rather than being the cause of it. The singular feature is that it should have come to an illiterate man.

NIVELLE LOVED BY OFFICERS AND MEN

PARIS, Dec. 15.—Gen. Robert Nivelle's elevation to the post formerly held by Gen. Joffre and Joffre's transition to "technical counsel of the Government concerning the conduct of the war"—which corresponds to the position in a church of a pastor emeritus—indicates the strenuous methods of Briand's new Ministry to inject new blood into the conductors of the war, following the British example. Hereafter Joffre will make his headquarters in Paris to be in closer touch for consultations with the Cabinet, but Nivelle will take charge of the field headquarters.

MILITARY HIERARCHY BROKEN

Nivelle's ascendancy to the premier position over the heads of his old superiors break the military hierarchy, which staked all on length of service, but it is regarded as proof of the pledge that the new War Cabinet is out to win and will not regard precedent.

GEN. NIVELLE'S CAREER.

Nivelle is one of the youngest generals. He is fifty-eight years old, having been born Oct. 15, 1858, at Tulle, in the Department of Correze. He selected the artillery arm of the service and has always been an exponent of inexhaustible shell supply and innumerable big guns.

PROMINENT AT VERDUN.

The name of Nivelle was first heard by the public during the German Crown Prince's Verdun offensive. He went to the Meuse last April, commanding the Third Army Corps, and a month later succeeded Gen. Petain commanding the Verdun army. By his masterful genius he saved the fortress, then in two recent bounds retook Douaumont and Vaux, undoing the Germans' work of eight months.

When the war began, Nivelle was colonel of the Fifth Field Artillery Regiment stationed at Besancon. Being ordered to Alsace in the French drive against Thann and Muelhausen, he earned the distinction of destroying an entire German artillery battery, thus permitting the temporary capture of Thann.

During the Marne-Ourcq battle he commanded the Seventh Army Corps artillery under Gen. Manoury.

CHECKED GERMANS

Promoted to be a general in October, 1914, he scored a decisive check against the Germans when they launched the Soissons offensive in January, 1915, in a desperate thrust at Paris. A month later, Feb. 19, he recaptured the Queneviere plateau east of Soissons, thereby relieving that sector and forcing a part of the German line to fall back across the Aisne.

Nivelle studied at St. Cyr and also at the polytechnic schools in Fontaine bleau and Samur, besides the War College. After the Indo-China campaign he undertook a mission to the Emperor of Korea. Afterward he served in the French colonial campaigns, notably in Algeria.

LOVED BY OFFICERS AND MEN

A sturdy, semi-blonde type of Frenchman, with plentiful hair, closely-cropped mustache, hard, calculating eyes and a vise-like mouth and chin, Nivelle is loved alike by officers and soldiers and credited with having instilled a wonderful spirit into the army at Verdun, which is said to have a higher morale than even Napoleon's Old Guard.

A comrade of Nivelle named Nordman recounts how all the officers and soldiers ducked Mauser bullets at the beginning of the war, but Nivelle remained impassive.

"What is the use of trying to dodge bullets?" Nivelle explained.

On another occasion Nivelle was heard earnestly trying to imitate the whistle of the machine gun bullets spraying about him as he advanced with his troops.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Admiral, B.C., writes "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

THIEVES GOT HIS SAVINGS.

PATERSON, N.J., Dec. 15.—August Talaner, of 171 Diamond Bridge Avenue, Hawthorne, N.J., was robbed by an old confidence game of $1,000, representing the savings of thirty-nine years. He met two prosperous-looking strangers in the Post Office, who asked him if he knew of a safe bank in which they could deposit $10,000. They were willing to intrust the money to him for deposit, but required that he should show his good faith by putting up security.

In return for his savings he received an envelope. When he opened it at the bank he found two dollars and a large amount of blank paper. The men said they had come from Los Angeles.

Suit coats are frequently of finger-tip length.

Many blouses are made to wear outside the skirt.

Hats are taking a slanting position on the head.

Belts are not fashionable unless they slant a trifle.

Skunk fur is often made up in crepe with fur ends.

Dresses are effectively trimmed with bead embroidery.

Weakened By Anaemia Doctors Gave No Hope

Said She Was Threatened With Consumption, and Gave Her Three Weeks to Live

Anaemia is indicated by thin, watery blood. The gums and eyelids grow pale, there is great weakness and fatigue and digestion fails.

Since Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood, it is naturally most suitable as a treatment for anaemia. This letter proves its efficiency in the most severe cases.

Mrs. J. Adams, Port Hope, Ont., writes: "About six years ago I was taken with very weak spells and though I doctored with the family physician and used other medicines for two years, I got very little relief and, in fact, continued to grow weaker. I was so weak I could not wait on myself or raise my hand to my head and decided to go to my daughter in Toronto. When examined by Toronto doctors they pronounced me to be in a dangerous condition, threatened with consumption and other ailments and said I would not live for three weeks. One day I was looking through Dr. Chase's Almanac and read about the cure of anaemia by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I began the use of this treatment at once and am now well on the way back to health, after having used the Nerve Food for six months. I want my friends to know that my cure was effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food alone and after my discouragement from the use of other treatments, I feel it my duty to let everybody know about this remarkable cure."

As a restorative for persons who are pale, weak and run down there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Gradually and naturally the red corpuscles are increased in the blood, the color is restored to the cheeks and the strength comes back to wasted nerves and muscles. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

ROOSTER CROWED HIS JOY WHEN BIG SHELLS WENT OVER TO ENEMY

Letters received at McGill from graduates who are serving in the army and the navy show that the "lads in navy blue and their brothers in khaki" are just as firm believers in the good luck that mascots bring as the Tommies and the Jacks were in the campaigns of the past. For instance, one letter tells that the mascot of H.M.S. Glasgow is a pig, which was found swimming about in the chilly water of the Pacific Ocean after the German cruiser Dresden had been sent to the bottom. Then from a McGill boy in France comes the story of a cock that has been made the mascot of a battery of 75's. The rooster was purchased at a wayside farm, the men having a fancy for roast fowl. He was tied to one of the waggons. Suddenly towards daybreak the battery had to go into action. At the first discharge of the 75 millimeters the bird was tremendously frightened. At the second he was startled, but not so badly. At the third he positively flapped his wings and uttered a defiant "Cock-a-doodle-doo". So he continued to "do" at each subsequent discharge, as if telling the Germans to take "that" and see how you like it.

The French artillerymen were delighted, and instead of Chanticleer finding his way into the oven or being baked in clay, he was adopted as the pet of the battery.

DOG DIED ON FIELD

A story of the battle of the Somme tells how the pet dog of the Manchester regiment was found lying dead in one of the trenches called Leipsig Alley. He had been killed by a German shell while charging towards victory with his comrades-in-arms.

Not less touching is the story told of the devotion of a French poodle, "Fende-l' Air"—Fire-of-the-Air—the mascot of a Zouave battalion. As a French transport left one of the ports of Algiers, a dog was seen to leap from the wharf and swim after the steamer. It was the mascot of the 3rd Regiment of Zouaves, and refused to be left behind. His owner was Sergt. Jacquimin, and when he saw the dog's devotion he went down a rope at the side of the steamer and rescued the animal amid great cheers from his comrades who lined the side of the transport. All the way across France to Belgium the dog accompanied the regiment, and during the weeks and months that followed in the trenches, the sergeant and his dog were hardly ever separated. A big shell at last tore a gaping cavity in the earth, killing twelve men and burying the dog and its master. They were later rescued and the sergeant taken to an ambulance post, where his foot was amputated. The dog followed his master, and when the latter was taken to a hospital at Amiens the dog had to be admitted also. He stopped there until his master was better and able to leave, when he accompanied him.

QUEER KINDS OF PETS.

Many stories are told in the letters of the queer kind of pets the boys have in the trenches. One of the greatest "finds" is said to have been that of a baby donkey. The artillery claimed him, so did the boys "behind the ditches". It looked as if a prolonged argument was about to ensue, when a scout came along hauling after him a loudly protesting calf. "We cannot keep both," said the boys in the trenches to the artillery men. "You can have the donkey. We will have the calf." That night there was stewed veal on the bill of fare.

Another curious capture was that of a big white owl that one of the boys found staggering about just as day was breaking. He was dazed by the noise of the big guns and the fireworks, and was easily made a prisoner. It still lives and chums solemnly with its snake friends who try to teach it tricks in their leisure moments.

The letters also say that the mascot of H.M.S. Spitfire, one of the bulldogs of the "What we have we'll hold" type, highly distinguished himself in the Jutland battle, and that "Pansy" the mascot cat of H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth, spends much of her time promenading along the muzzle of one of the big 15-inch guns.

SOAP PRICES TAKE JUMP.

Most Noticeable Increase is in "Laundry Bar."

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—The high cost of living avalanche has at last struck the soap market and, owing to the increased cost of raw materials and the high prices of all commodities, there will be a minimum advance of about 7 per cent., noticeable in laundry soaps locally, in Montreal and other cities throughout the Dominion the price of soaps has been steadily going up.

The prices of caustic soda and oils, both of which are important ingredients in the cleansing substance have gone up anywhere from 100 per cent. to 200 per cent.; but the most noticeable increase in the price of soaps in Toronto, will be the advance of 30 cents a case on the laundry bar, of which there are about 160 in a box. The increased cost in other lines, though, will be scarcely felt.

"We have held our prices down for months in the hope that there would be a turn for the better in the market," explained Mr. J. E. Gagnon, president of Lever Brothers and the John Taylor Company, "but alas, such is not the case. We have had to meet the very high cost of materials, and the increased cost of manufacturing and all commodities have compelled us to make an advance. Soaps now are hard to get, also oils and fats, and labour costs more. However, this is our first advance since the beginning of the war and it is certainly not a big one.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS
Come From the Heart and Nerves

Young girls budding into womanhood, who suffer with pains and headaches and whose face is pale and their blood watery, will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills build them up.

Women between the ages of 40 and 50, who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, smothering feeling, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, etc., are tided over this trying time of life by the use of this remedy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bringing color to the pale cheeks and sparkle to the eye.

The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life again seems like living.

Mrs. Alfred Winter, Castor, Alta., writes: "I would like every woman who is suffering from nerves or heart trouble to know how much Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have helped me. For two years I kept a hired girl and was doctoring all the time. After having taken four boxes of your pills I am able to do all my own work. I would especially recommend them to women between 40 and 50, as at that time they are more liable to be far from well. One of my neighbors knows how they helped me, and she is now using them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or sent direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Silly Game.

Two Irish women were passing the home of a bishop one day when they happened to observe him in his yard practising putting.

"Now, isn't that darlin'. Just see that dear old man playing with that little ball with the innocence of a little child."

"Yes; but Mrs. M'Cleary, didn't you notice that that was a Protestant bishop?"

"You don't say so? Why, the old fool! Now, wouldn't you think he'd have better sense than to be playin' a game like that?"

The Aldermen and Controllers will be paid the balance of their salaries for their terms and be released.

Mayor Martin is to be retained as ex-officio chairman of the commission. As he cannot be deposed. No appropriations will be made by five years in an attempt to straighten out the city's financial tangle.

BAD STRIKE AT LIVERPOOL.

Boilermakers Risk Safety of the Empire to Gain Their Own Ends.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The Press Bureau issues the following statement.

"Since Saturday a majority of the boilermakers in the port of Liverpool have been on strike. The strike followed the refusal on the part of the same men for a period of five weeks to work overtime. Their action has been taken in defiance of the urgent requests of the leaders of the union, and in violation of the provisions of the Munitions Act.

"The grievance of the men arises from the award given by the Committee on Production on November 3. They applied for an advance of ten shillings on the ground of increased cost of living and the award given was three shillings. . . . In order to give the men every opportunity of reconsidering the matter (name omitted) sent the following telegram to the union officials: 'I assumed office to-day, and regret that my first duty is to deal with the strike. No matter what grievances the men have, it is impossible for me to deal with them until work is resumed.'

"Despite this the men have remained on strike, though Admiralty work of the most vital importance is being greatly delayed. Accordingly the Government has issued notice, drawing the attention of all concerned to the defence of the realm regulations governing the matter, and the Government proposes to deal with the situation drastically under the powers given by the Munitions of War Act and the Defence of the Realm Act."

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comocon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' REDINGOTE.

By Anabel Worthington.

At the very pinnacle of fashion is the redingote this season, and you are sure to like the model in the illustration—its lines strike the keynote of fall smartness.

The body part, with its seamed front and smart fitted effect, has the vest idea carried out—just a two button closing makes it distinctive. The collar, of course, plays an important rôle, for collars have been on the style creators' minds for months. Black satin contributes the collar of this garment and the cuffs on "near-fit" long sleeves are in harmony. The shorter sleeve is also allowed, with a roll cuff.

The skirt is in three gores, with its upper edges gathered and joined to the waist, the front edges being even with the side front seams of the waist and the circular ends falls prettily to about ankle length.

Serge is a great variety of fabrics from which this type of garment may be made. If you use a wool material be sure to have it sponged to avoid spotting or shrinking. Wool or silk embroidery may be employed to further embellish the model, and of course on broadcloth or velour fur will be ultra smart.

The pattern No. 8,049 cuts in sizes 36-42 bust. To make in size 38 requires 5¼ yards 36 inch material with ¾ yard 36 inch silk.

To obtain the pattern send 20 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

SUNDAY READING FOR A THOUGHTFUL HOUR

Prepared for the Examiner by a Local Church Worker

It came upon the midnight clear
That glorious song of old.
From angels bending near the earth
To touch their harps of gold,
Peace on the earth, good will to men.
From Heaven's all-glorious King!
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing.

Still through the cloven skies they come
With peaceful wings unfurled,
And still their heavenly music floats
O'er all the weary world;
Above its sad and lowly plains
They bend on hovering wing,
And ever o'er its Babel sounds
The blessed angels sing.

Yet with the woes of sin and strife
The world has suffered long;
Beneath the angel strain have rolled
Two thousand years of wrong;
And man at war with man hears not
The love-song which they bring;
O, hush, the noise, ye men of strife,
And hear the angels sing!

And ye beneath life's crushing load,
Whose forms are bending low,
Who toil along the climbing way
With painful steps and slow,
Look now, for glad and golden hours
Come swiftly on the wing,
O rest beside the weary road
And hear the angels sing!

For, lo! the days are hastening on
By prophets, bards, foretold,
When with the ever-circling years
Comes round the age of gold;
When peace shall over all the earth
Its ancient splendours fling,
And the whole world give back the song
Which now the angels sing.

BETHLEHEM PILGRIMS.

One wonders if the angels who sang that sweet song "Peace on earth, good will to men," so long ago, above the plains of Bethlehem, have become discouraged as they look earth-ward again this Christmas time. Or is it given to those heaven-sent messengers to see what mortal eyes are slow to observe. We see man at war with man, we see greed and hat, envy and strife, nation at war with nation, and people who love to have it so. But do not the angels see that never before was the message of Good-will they brought to earth, so appreciated and accepted, not only as the will of the Divine Father, but as a law of life, without which humanity cannot move toward the highest good.

Christmas brings to our thoughts this year the awful fact of sin, and the reminder that it was because of the existence of sin in the world, and because of God's boundless love toward humanity that it was necessary for Christ to come. Vain has been the effort to eliminate sin from humanity's life programme.

There stands vivid and awful to-day before the eyes of the world sin. Sin when it is finished brought forth death.

Dr. Griffith-Jones said recently in Toronto, that terrible as is the great war, it remains part of the divine scheme of redemption. That God could only, so to speak, interfere to stop the suffering at the sacrifice of the great elemental fact, that he had from the first endowed man with the power to choose between right and wrong; and to remove the consequences of evil in the world would be to aid that evil to be perpetuated. He said that materialism had eliminated the controlling ideals of Christianity.

Humanity hears again the call to come and worship the King of the manger-cradle, for He is still the hope of the nations, and the only One who can take away the sin of the world.

"Climb Bethlehem's hill of blessing
And find the Son of God."

The Christian while recognising the existence of evil in the world believes that the good is greater than the evil, and that more hearts are pressing toward Bethlehem's manger-cradle to worship the King than ever before, bearing their gifts of gold and frankincense and myrrh, for—

"Things that hurt and things that mar, shape the man for perfect praise."

The pilgrims bring their gold of service for others, and the frankincense of gratitude that though the journey be over rugged, steep and thorny way—amid the shadows of grief and sorrow—the road leads upward grateful for

The high ideal that comes in visions of the night,
Or moments wrapt of full complete surrender,
Of self to others' use and service sweet—
These are the things of life, cost what they may,
The things alone worth striving for.

Many pilgrims journey this year laden with myrrh. Oh! The sorrows, and griefs, and disappointed hopes, the overturned plans, the losses, the the steps that falter, the hearts that break, the sin-burdened one weary of effort—all pressing on toward Bethlehem. Will the King accept those gifts of myrrh?

He who in a garden weeping,
Prayed His great prayer, o'er and o'er,
Rose up to the core and keeping
Of all hearts forever more.

Come back to-day to Bethlehem,
The year is on the wane;
A truce to strife that worries life,
A truce to grief and pain.
Oh, heart, return to Bethlehem
And hear the song again.

If siren voices luring thee,
Have turned thy thoughts aside.
If thou has quaffed the bitter draught
Of envy or of pride;
If thou in agony of shame
Hast thy dear Lord denied

"Come back to-day to Bethlehem,
Though thou hast wandered far,
No rest shall fill thy yearning heart,
Until thou see the scar.
Oh, heart, return to Bethlehem
Where yet the angels are."

CHRISTMAS PRAYER

Sheridan Watson Bell in Good House keeping.

God of compassion, has not the fullness of time come? Wilt Thou not turn us again and cause Thy face to shine? We do not ask for a new message from Thee, but that we may be re-assured. We want to know that it is no cunningly devised fable that has come to us; that Thou didst speak to men in accents of peace and good-will, that the music has only been drowned by the din of our life, and the vision faded because it was so long ago. Let us hear Thy voice speaking in this our day the same words the shepherds caught from Thee. We ask no dreams, no prophet ecstacies, no sudden rending of the veil of clay, "no angel visitant, no opening skies, but take the dimness of our eyes away."

It is not Thy will Thou God of goodness that we read in the tragic events of our time. Thou has not meant that man made a little lower than Thyself, and crowned with glory and honour, should give his powers to such ignoble ends, and turn his paradise into a hell! No, an enemy hath done this. We do not charge Thee foolishly. We forgot Thy word and turned to our own way, and our finished sin hath brought forth death. Wilt Thou not burn us again? Speak from the skies once more the word that alone can save us. Say to us in ways which we cannot fail to understand, that it is Good-will, of which our life is scant, and for lack of which our world is dying. Help us to see that it is because we lack Goodwill, there is suspicion and jealousy, greed and lust, malice and hatefulness, war and hell in our world. Keep us from asking of Thee what even Thou canst not give. Say to us again, that if we regard iniquity in our hearts the Lord will not hear us. Help us to put away the evil of our doings. Take away our hearts of stone, and give us hearts of flesh. Make men and nations ashamed to lift their faces until they have repented of the robberies, the cruelties, the rapes, the murders, their evil will has brought upon the defenceless. We ask it in the name of the millions who out of the abysses of their woe cry to Thee. —Amen.

Had Bronchitis FOR YEARS

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold and it, if neglected, will surely turn into pneumonia. The first symptom is a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing and a feeling of oppression or tightness about the chest.

The phlegm raised from the bronchial tubes is at first of a light color, but as the disease progresses it becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often hard to raise.

Dr. Wood's Norway is just the remedy that you require as it loosens the phlegm and heals the lungs and bronchial tubes.

Mrs. Chas. Breau, Amherst, N. S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. I think it is the best remedy for bronchitis that I know of. I now take care that I always have a bottle on hand."

"Dr. Wood's" in the genuine, put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

DAY OF NATIONAL PRAYER.

Suggestion of Moderator of General Assembly.

Rev. Dr Andrew Baird, Moderator of the General Assembly, has sent out the following suggestion for "a day of national prayer" to the ministers of the Presbyterian Church: "The churches in Great Britain are observing the last Sunday of the year, December 31, as a day of national prayer for the war. There will be no question about the appropriateness of similar action in Canada, and I am pleased to know that in several quarters there are movements in this direction. I ask, therefore, that the ministers of the Presbyterian Church make this theme prominent in their ministrations on that day, and so give a united and national aspect to a service which in any case would move our hearts profoundly."

An anonymous Frenchman has offered a $10,000 prize for the mechanical apparatus that will best supply the place of a missing human hand.

Day of Illusions Over For Germany

The entry of Roumania into the war will also deprive Germany of her principle supply of mineral oils.

"What the result of the failure in the war will be on the finances of Germany," says our correspondent, "I hesitate to prophesy, but others far better qualified to express an opinion than I am unable to see any outcome to the present financial position in Germany other than bankruptcy in some form or other."

An Effective Strangle Hold.

There is good evidence, he adds, that our strangle hold on the throat of Germany is far more effective than it was a year ago in preventing supplies of food coming in from the outside. We may look forward with certainty to an even intenser food crisis next spring than we have witnessed during the past few months. That this crisis will reach the proportions of the famine that will force Germany to sue for peace I still do not believe, but, on the other hand, the enthusiasm and confidence which supported the people through earlier privations have disappeared and given way to widespread depression, and the powers of endurance of the people have been proportionately diminished.

The same correspondent, dealing with the position in Austria, remarks that Roumania's entrance into the war may not weaken the resistance of Austria-Hungary, at all events, for the present. So far as Hungary is concerned, it may have the opposite effect, as every Hungarian will joyfully contribute to the defense of the soil of his country.

There is however, a strong feeling in favour of peace in most of the towns.

Outside information in regard to economic conditions is far more difficult to obtain than in regard to Germany, neutral visitors being rare.

Various army orders that have fallen into the hands of the Allied forces indicate how seriously the want, not only of food, but of many materials used in military equipment is making itself felt.

One captured order from the Austrian General Headquarters prescribes that in view of the scarcity of leather all troops which have no marching to do shall be provided with wooden instead of leather soles, while another directs that polished steel shall be used universally in place of nickel in the manufacture of surgical instruments. An order forbids the use of light petrol in engines which can be run with heavy petrol, and the shortage of motor spirit is likely to be greatly aggravated by the closing of Roumania's sources of supply.

There are signs of considerable anxiety as to how a sufficient stock of clothing is to be provided to cover the essential requirements of the population.

There are good grounds for believing that the reserves of food from last year that have been allowed to run very low, and that the country is entering on the new harvest year with a very narrow margin from last harvest. The much needed grain is slow in reaching the mills, and the Hungarian Government is showing signs of anxiety as to the tendency of the farmers to hoard their crops and delay delivering to the authorities.

Farms for Returned Veterans

The Canadian Pacific Railway, through its Department of Natural Resources, now makes an official announcement of its plans whereby its land holdings in Western Canada are placed at the disposal of such men who, having seen active service in the British forces in the European war, are desirous of taking up agricultural work at the close of hostilities.

After defining that amongst the many big problems to be faced by the British Empire after the war is the return to civil life of the many millions of men who, as volunteer soldiers, have taken part in the great struggle, the company recognizes "that active service in this cause will have created a desire on the part of many men who, before the war, were engaged in other work, to take up quiside employment, and that of this number a considerable proportion will be desirous of obtaining land upon which they can create farm homes.

"Western Canada offers one of the best opportunities in the British Empire for those men who may wish to engage in farming. While of course any general scheme of land colonization in Canada by returned soldiers must necessarily be formulated and administered by the Dominion Government, the Canadian Pacific Railway, as a large landowner in the western provinces of Canada, is desirous of doing its share in attempting to solve this important problem."

Only those are eligible who can produce proof of service in the Canadian unit of the British Army or in the British Army or Navy, are married, of physical fitness and have had previous experience in agriculture. Candidates are required to appear before an Examining Committee before a contract is entered into.

Two kinds of farms will be available for colonization — Improved Farms and Assisted Colonization Farms. In the first case, a limited number of farms in selected colonies, with distinctive military names, will be improved, previous to occupation, by the erection of a house, barn and fence, the provision of water supply, and the breaking of forty acres. Live stock, implements and seed grain will, where necessary, be provided. In the Assisted Colonization scheme, in which an almost unlimited amount of land will be available, farms will be first selected by the intending colonists, and then improved by them with assistance from the company in the way of advances of building and fencing material, livestock, implements and seed grain.

In case where the Examining Committee is satisfied that the colonist is unable to provide living expenses for himself and his family during the first year of his occupation, financial assistance, in the way of cash advances, not exceeding one-half the value of any work done by the purchaser in permanently improving the farm may be made.

On each Improved Farm Colony a Central Control Farm will be established and operated by the company, in charge of a colony superintendent. The colonist's operations with be directed with the advice of the superintendent, and the central farm will be used for purposes of demonstration, to maintain service animals and to keep on hand the larger and more expensive machinery which the individual farmers would probably not be able to buy at first, for the use of which a fixed daily charge will be made. Assisted Colonization Farmers will also receive the benefit of instructive directions given by the company's inspectors.

Land will be sold to bona fide settlers only, settlement and occupation being the basis of the contract. Evidence will be required periodically that this requirement has been complied with. The maximum amount of land sold to one man is 160 acres under the Improved Farm scheme, with a reduction to eighty acres in case of irrigable land, and 320 acres of non irrigable land under the Assisted Colonization scheme, but adjoining land will be as far as possible reserved for future extensions and for pasture.

The terms of payment provided are very easy. In the Assisted Colonization scheme, land will be sold on a twenty-year basis, and the first payment will not be due until two years after the date of the contract. In the Improved Farm scheme, the colonist will occupy the farm as tenant for three years, and will not be required to make any payment in the nature of rent until the end of three years, when an amount equal to six per cent. on the cost of permanent improvements will be charged for each year that has passed since the colonist went into occupation. The colonist will at that date enter into an agreement to purchase the land on a twenty-year basis, and will make his first payment on account of that contract one year later. No water rental will be charged for the first two years on irrigable land. The cost of permanent improvements and any cash advances made will in the case of both schemes be added to the purchase price of the land and thereby spread over a twenty-year basis of repayment. Livestock, implements and seed will be secured by lien notes or mortgages.

The announcement concludes: "The project has been formulated and brought into force with a bona desire on the part of the company to do its share in recognizing the work of men who have fought for the empire, and who desire to take up farming at the close of the war, and, while it is recognized that the scheme must of necessity contain something of philanthropy in the way of easy terms and material assistance in the earlier years of the colonist's efforts, it is not intended to do otherwise than administer these farms on a thoroughly businesslike basis, or to allow them to be taken up except by men who are earnest in their intention to try and make a success of farming and who have the foundation qualifications to justify an expectation of success."

NEW YORK, December 18.—A New York Times despatch from Berlin via Sayville, says: "Following on the heels of the peace offer and the general army order regarding it, the Kaiser has started on an inspection tour of the west front." The Kaiser is accompanied by the Crown Prince. He held three troop reviews near Mulhausen yesterday, making "fervent addresses, which were marked as much by their popular form as their forgoing contents."

A neutral war correspondent with the French troops says: "Revised reports of the Verdun victory on Friday indicate that forty thousand Germans were in casualty lists from this big battle."

ROME, December 18.—The Central Powers have urged the Pope and the United States of America to back up their peace proposals, according to a report in circulation here to-day.

National Service Week After the New Year

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, December 18.—Upwards of 150,000 letters have been despatched by the National Service Commission to chief magistrates, lawyers, doctors, clergymen, school teachers, heads of fraternal societies and associations, members of parliament and of legislatures throughout the whole Dominion asking for their co-operation in the registration of man-power of Canada on cards to be distributed by postmasters. Clergymen are requested to appeal to their congregations next Sunday. School teachers are asked to call their pupils together and explain the claims of the National Service Board, and carry the word home to their parents. Mayors and reeves, etc., are asked to take all practicable municipal measures to forward the work and hold public meetings. The committee is asking that the first week of the New Year be observed as "National Service Week," for taking of inventory."

His Excellency the Governor-General will issue a personal appeal for general co-operation. It is expected that fully one million and a half replies will be received from the adult males still life in Canada, each one signifying his present occupation and whether he would be available for other form of national service, it being necessary or advisable. These replies will be collated by a large staff at Ottawa, and an inventory of the man-power will be analyzed with a view to securing its best distribution and utilisation. This work it is estimated will take fully four months.

White Denies the Premiership Story

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Ont., December 18.—Referring to the Globe's rumours from Ottawa that Sir Thos. White, Minister of Finance, was aspiring to the Premiership through a coalition war government in Canada, Sir Thomas here to-day declared such stories as odious beyond contempt and unworthy even of contradiction.

He affirmed the stanchest loyalty to Borden, and speaking personally said he did not consider a coalition government practicable or necessary.

LONDON, December 18.—The correspondent of the Times at Amsterdam says: "The fact emerges with increasing distinctness that unless peace is obtained the accurate condition of the Central Empires is such as to threaten an acute domestic crisis. That Germany is rapidly exhausting her reserve food supply is evident. The harvest is completed and even the Kreus Zeitung admitted that the situation is very serious."

LONDON, December 18.—Food control went into effect throughout England to-day. The regulations curtailing meals which became effective this morning were met by the British people with a sort of school-boy good humour, entirely tolerant and uncomplaining.

WAGES WILL BE PAID FOR WHOLE OF THIS MONTH

Generous Announcement by Quaker Oats To-day—Body of Wm. Miles Was Found in the Ruins on Saturday

WALLS ARE DYNAMITED

As an expression of sympathy and regret at the loss sustained by the employes on account of the destruction of the mill, the management of the Quaker Oats Company will pay on Wednesday next the wages for the entire month of December, based on the wages earned from December 1st to 11th.

No deduction will be made on account of temporary financial assistance rendered to some of the families, nor on account of any wages earned since the 11th.

THE QUAKER OATS CO.,
W. H. Denham, Superintendent.

The above announcement, made by the Quaker Oats Company to-day, will be received thankfully and gratefully by the hundreds of Quaker Oats Company employees and will be a very welcome contribution for the Christmas season. The generous action of the company in paying full wages for the whole of the month of December, and paying it before Christmas, is another evidence of the good treatment that has characterized the dealings of the company with their employes.

The work of searching for the bodies was resumed on a large scale this morning. The staff of men has been considerably increased now that the menace of the section of wall overhanging the ruins where the bodies are, having been removed by dynamiting the wall yesterday.

On Saturday afternoon the body of Wm. Miles, 471 Rogers street, was found in the debris east of the boiler room. A sash of a window was around the body, and it is evident that the unfortunate man, who was working on the third floor, was blown out of the window by the explosion, and then buried in the debris.

The funeral took place this morning to Warsaw, service being conducted at the house by Rev. Mr. Whattam, pastor of the Mark street Methodist church.

Mr. Thos. Harrison, who was rescued from one of the top windows of the flour mill last Monday, has asked the Examiner to thank the men who went to his assistance and saved his life. Mr. Harrison was using the elevator when the explosion came and climbed up to the top of the building to shut off the motor. So thick was the dust and smoke that he was trapped and had to lower himself out of the window, holding by one hand to a bolt. To the men who saved him, Mr. Harrison wishes to express his deepest gratitude.

GREAT INTEREST IN LLOYD GEORGE'S REPLY

LONDON, December 18.—When Premier Lloyd George addresses the Parliament to-morrow and outlines the policy of his government, he will find the pulse of the British people beating in unison with that of the War Council. Interest is intense here to-day in the reply the Premier will make to Bethmann-Hollweg's peace proposals, and his discussion of the food problem and the question of man power. The temper of the British people toward peace was indicated when a huge mob in the heart of old London yesterday broke up Sylvia Pankhurst's peace meeting. It is generally expected that Lloyd George will give a brief and comprehensive review of the war in his Parliament speech, and will outline what has been accomplished under the old regime, and what he expects to accomplish through the War Council. Comment on more intimate incidents which led to the recent Governmental upheaval and placed Lloyd George at the head of the Cabinet, is not expected. Premier Lloyd George hoped to get out to-day and resume practically all duties after an illness of nearly a week.

PROFESSIONAL STRONG MAN HAS JOINED THE 247th BATTALION

Ajax Who Toys With Heavy Dumb-bells is Now a Member of the Peterboro' Unit--Peterboro' Soldiers Have Returned From Overseas---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The 247th Battalion gained a notable recruit this morning when Mr. William Lane, professional strong man and physical instructor, better-known on the vaudeville circuit as "Ajax," was sworn in as a member of Lt.-Col. Ackerman's unit. "Ajax," who came to Peterborough several weeks ago, and who gave exhibitions at the Church of the Immaculate Conception Bazaar, and with the Hoka Moka Minstrels at Campbellford, claims to be the strongest man in Canada of his size, and his wonderful feats with the heavy dumb-bells certainly entitle him to make that claim. "Ajax" weighs 180 pounds, and stands 5 feet 7 inches in height. His measurements are remarkable, his upper arm for instance measuring sixteen inches. The newest 247th recruit was born in Quebec City, and will be a decided acquisition to the Battalion. He will look after the physical condition of the 247th hockey team.

Major Campbell, Chief Recruiting Officer for No. 3 District, paid a visit to the Armouries this morning. Major Campbell states that the recruiting in the district is fairly good. The Kingston district led the Dominion of Canada for the last two weeks of November.

SOLDIERS ARE HOME.

During the last couple of days a number of Peterborough and district soldiers have arrived from overseas, the majority to undergo treatment at the Convalescent Home. Kingston Bandsman Garfield Torrance of the 93rd Band, arrived in the city Saturday. He has been given his discharge from the army on account of physical disability and is once more back in civil life, the Medical Board at Quebec recommending him for discharge. Yesterday morning Bandsmen R. A. Browne and A. Braden of the 93rd Band reached here after first reporting to Kingston. They have been assigned by the Medical Board for band duty in Canada and will probably be attached to the 93rd Band when that organization arrives home. In the meantime they are on furlough.

Pte. Wm. Rea, of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, who was wounded at Zillebeke last June, is another Peterborough boy to get back from overseas and Sergt. G. Thorne is also home.

Two Lakefield soldiers, Pte. George Lennox, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, and Gunner Simpson, C.F.A., are among the returned soldiers. Pte. Lennox went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and went to France with a draft, but was attacked by rheumatism and had to be invalided home. He is the first 93rd man to reach home from France.

Germans Like Clay In French Hands

One Division Alone Captured Over 1200 Prisoners in an Hour—Total is Already Over 9000 and Booty Includes Over Eighty Guns

NEW METHOD USED

Pepper Hill, Verdun Front, Dec. 16, Chantilly, Dec. 16.—(From a Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press.)—A short, sharp battle brought to the French to-day their third smashing victory within a period of two months in the vicinity of Verdun. Every objective point of the French Commanders was obtained with chronometric certainty.

Although the Germans offered a desperate defence, they were like soft clay in the hands of the French troops who squeezed them into any shape they liked and only ceased to handle them when their own time came.

Thousands of German prisoners poured into the French lines during the day, including 200 officers, and large groups are still arriving. The total count already is 7,500. The latest French official statement says the number of prisoners exceeds 9,000. One division alone captured over 1,200 Germans within an hour. More than eighty large and small German cannon were captured or destroyed and many others are known to be buried.

The villages of Vacherauville, Louvemont and Vezonvaux and Hardaumont Woods are now in French hands.

The front over which the offensive was executed was ten kilometres long. When the fighting ceased owing to the darkness the French advance had exceeded an average of three kilometres along the whole front, at various points pushing farther out and threatening the German batteries, whose retreat was hindered by the bad condition of the ground.

Infantry Uses New Method.

The battle began at ten o'clock in the morning with the left flank of the French opposite Vacherauville and the right flank on Fort Vaux. The correspondent of the Associated Press watched the engagement from a dominating height.

As the church clock struck the hour every French gun opened a storm of steel, placing every shot immediately behind the German front line. Meanwhile the French infantry made one of its characteristic dashes and reached the village of Vacherauville, where utilizing the new method of infantry attack, they drove the Germans from house to house until the village was entirely in their hands.

Airmen Turn Flight to Rout.

Advancing beyond the village, the French attacked a German trench known as Bethmann's Boot, which was carried after a hard fight and its occupants made prisoners. Then on the slopes of Pepper Hill the infantrymen could be seen making methodical progress until at exactly an hour from the start the twin forests of the height had been swept clean of Germans, and the objects announced the French were established there.

In the meantime the Germans on the opposing slope had been taken in the rear by an unsuspected French flank movement. The surprise was so great that even the infantrymen and the gunners attempted to flee, and French aviators turned the flight into a rout by descending to within a hundred yards of the earth and emptying hand after hand of machine gun cartridges into the disorderly crowd, of which those remaining alive surrendered.

During their war along the valley behind Pepper Hill, the French approached and took Louvemont with similar and shining brilliance, in which they were supported by another French wave which had fought its way through the entanglements of strongly fortified field work in Caillettes Wood, just about the centre of the line.

In front of Hardaumont the advance was equally rapid, but on the

FINED $300 FOR HAVING LIQUOR IN WOODSHED-GARAGE

Milton Porter Also Pays Costs of $16.20 for Breach of the Temperance Act—Judgement Given This Morning

LIQUOR FROM HASTINGS

For having whiskey at a place other than his private house, where he resided, Milton Porter, Rogers street, was fined $300 and $16.20 costs, by Magistrate Dumble, who gave judgment in police court this morning.

At the hearing of the case it was alleged that liquor was confiscated by the police in Porter's garage, which, before the purchase of his automobile, he had used as a woodshed. It adjoined the summer kitchen and the defense produced a plan showing that the garage was enclosed in the extended walls of the kitchen.

The Court's Opinion.

The defendant's counsel urges that his garage is an old part of his dwelling, formerly a woodshed and now converted into a garage where he kept his auto and was part of defendant's "private dwelling house." I hold, on the evidence, that this garage was not part of his private dwelling house, no more than a cow house or a stable on the same lot would be such. I think I must be guided by the spirit of the Act, which is intended to prevent intemperance. I also think that Samuel Long, an old hotelkeeper, took one case of liquor, either because he was a joint purchaser with the defendant or because he had an understanding with defendant that he was to get the liquor. I must either come to that conclusion or construe his conduct in taking the liquor without the sanction of the defendant as a theft, which I would hardly be justified in doing. The whole conduct of defendants in having the liquor shipped to Hastings instead of Peterborough, and shipped to a man who was not known, as Clark Leslie, showed a deliberate intention to conceal his acts, and I do not know that I am obliged, under the circumstances, to construe the evidence in favour of the defendant. He took much trouble to hide his act. There was no law to prevent him from buying the whiskey in Montreal and having it delivered direct at his own house in daylight, and the use he has already made of the whiskey shows that he was reckless. Then the quantity (sixty bottles of whiskey) is more than a citizen of modest circumstances would be likely to buy at one time for his own private use.

Will Appeal Decision.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, solicitor for the defendant, stated to-day that he would appeal Magistrate Dumble's decision on the ground that the garage was part of Mr. Porter's private dwelling. It is understood that the decision might this day week be appealed but the evidence is presented before three judges at Osgoode Hall.

ON THE OFFENSIVE.

France has passed from the defensive in this war. General Joffre led the armies of France in the greatest defensive movement of history. He stemmed the tide of German invasion and put it on the ebb, and now General Neville, who, since the war has risen from Colonel to Commander of all the armies of France, is on the aggressive. According to Frederick Palmer, one may look for activity "when this man Neville gets into the saddle." Joffre put the Germans on the defensive, and if the latest French victory is to be a taste of General Neville's quality, he will soon put the Germans on the run. The war for us is victory in spots, but the spots are becoming more numerous. Sometimes the sun goes under a cloud, but it comes out again. Last week the cloud was pretty dark, but now the light is breaking through. The fight is hard and wearying, but if we put every man, every pound of available munitions into the fight we shall win, as we must do, if we and the other nations of the earth are to live as free nations.

SHAKING UP OR WAKING UP.

The governments of Great Britain and France have had a shaking up in order to infuse new blood, new fighting spirit, and develop stronger and sterner measures for more energetic preparation for, and prosecution of, the war. Russia is moving in the same direction, and even warsick Austria has had a cabinet reconstruction. In Canada alone, the status quo is maintained; the government remains the same; the same methods, the same laissez-faire policy. True there have been changes in the cabinet. The Nationalist members have been shuffled about, in and out; and one capital cabinet position has been changed. Sir Sam Hughes has been put out of the post of War Minister, and Hon. E. A. Kemp has taken his place. He should make a good business minister. He has practical knowledge of manufacturing; he has had experience in the matter of munitions; but he has yet to win his spurs. He has been re-elected by acclamation in East Toronto, and his admirers and the admirers of the government cite this fact as a proof of popular confidence in the government. But that amounts to little. East Toronto is so strongly, so unreasonably, so unreasoningly "Tory" that a government with Belial as prime minister, if he bore the party label, would be acclaimed and secure confidence from partizans and possibly, the people. It is yet to be seen whether Kemp will be an improvement on Hughes. The latter was the dynamo of the government; the only member outside of Sir Thomas White, and Sir George Foster—and the most he did was to talk well—who did things. Even if he did things in an erratic and rash way, yet he kept things moving and, in the main, in the right direction. It is a fair question to ask whether the Borden government, all through, and especially at the present time, has fulfilled, and fulfils, the conditions that justify endorsation of its personnel, and policy, and administrative action, whether in its sphere it is measuring up to the new British movement, and that no change of personnel, no stiffening of policy, no speeding up of action, is necessary as was found necessary in the case of the governments of Great Britain and France. At present Canada is going on in a rather humdrum way in meeting its war responsibility. If we are content; if the government is doing its work in a way to measure up to the standard of the new Lloyd George government, and we are doing our best, then no improvement is possible. But if we are doing our best, our best is not rapidly reaching the object. It seems, without prejudice or bias, that the government of Canada at the present time is not doing its best. If it is so doing, it needs a shaking up; if it isn't, it needs a waking up.

CANADIAN NAVAL MISHAP.

We owe something to an Atlantic storm—we owe the knowledge officially provided that Canada possesses at least one torpedo boat, the "Grilse." We have been worried of late by the somewhat vague news that the Canadian torpedo boat, the "Grilse," was in great danger, but the better news has come that she has weathered the terrific storm that at one time, it was feared, would send her down. The official announcement of her safe arrival at Halifax, described her gallant Canadian crew, whose seamanship was doubtless instrumental, under Providence, in saving the ship, as members of the R.N.C.V.R.—the Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve.

Thus we see that the Borden Government, with apparent indifference to the irony of the situation, are utilizing the Laurier Naval Act of 1910, after practically repudiating it and vehemently denouncing it. Under its authority a yacht was converted into a torpedo boat, commanded by Canadian naval officers, and manned by Canadian seamen. The Government has been forced to use the once discarded Naval Act to establish what is a most urgent need—a home fleet—or it would not under the circumstances have provided the nucleus of the Canadian fleet established under the Laurier Naval Act—whose initial ships were jeeringly described as a "tin-pot navy." But the Government of today has had to acknowledge that this noodle nomenclature was mistaken and unpatriotic levity. The Government dropped and swapped the business end of the Laurier Naval Act—the tender for cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers, etc.,—for the parliamentary support of the Nationalists. Mr. Borden, however, by a lucky oversight, or lucky lack of courage, left the Naval Act unrepealed, and it came in handy. When events showed the necessity of a Canadian navy for home defence, and the jeered-at, sneered-at, tin-potted Naval Act was put to work in the establishment of a home fleet, and the organizing of a Canadian Naval Service.

If the Borden Government had gone on with the naval construction plan laid down by Laurier, Canada would by now — in the interval of five or six years—have had a fine fleet of armoured cruisers and torpedo boats destroyers, and our Canadian shores and shipping would have been better protected by a splendid navy of Canada's own building. We could have provided our own escorts for troop ships overseas. We could have looked Australia—with her own navy—in the face, and Canada would have won a record of glory on sea as splendid as that she has compiled on land.

The partisanship that sidetracked Sir Wilfrid's plans for building a Canadian navy, was responsible for one of the most humiliating and injurious acts of unpatriotism in the history of the country. And the offence to national dignity and interests is intensified by the fact that it was done at the dictation of the Nationalist element in the ranks of the Government's supporters; the element whose pernicious propaganda of Nationalism has poisoned the patriotic spirit in Quebec, retarded recruiting, and hindered the effectiveness of Canada's participation in the war.

PROGRESS.

That the German Government, where the caste, spirit has been so strong, should issue a proclamation to the people in which the phrase "idiotic class distinctions" was used, is a sure sign that democracy is gaining ground in that country.—London Advertiser.

CROOKEDNESS MUST BE PUNISHED.

There will be no regret, even among Liberals over the announcement that a Conservative has been returned for the provincial legislature of Saskatchewan for Moosejaw County in place of Mr. J. A. Sheppard, who was Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, and was forced to resign because of disclosures made before the royal commission. In making the change, a Liberal majority of 400 was converted into a Conservative majority of 70. Sheppard is the man who accepted contributions from improper sources, presumably for party ends and asked the verdict of the electors upon his course. It is to be hoped he is satisfied with the decision which has now been so emphatically given.—Brantford Expositor.

How Britain Captured Native Confidence and Affection in India

The Round Table Magazine is always interesting because of the careful survey it invariably gives of important happenings in the British Empire, and during the war its issues are of exceptional value. One of the features of the December number, which is certain to attract attention, is that on "The Native States of India." A reliable history is given of Great Britain's manner of dealing with these states. Many were absorbed by the British crown, but with Lord Wellesley a new chapter began, for the treaty of Bassein concluded by him with the Peshua in December 1802, and subsequently acknowledged by all the other Mahratta confederates proved to be the foundation stone of all our later policies towards the native states. It practically establishes their constitution on the present basis, providing that they should look to Britain for protection, that all their disputes should be submitted to British arbitration, and that the interference of all other European Powers should be rigidly excluded. In return they were left to manage their own internal affairs. It is now understood that the native states are to be preserved in their integrity, but that Great Britain is to maintain a British resident with each as a counsellor, and that gross abuses will be corrected. As a result, the confidence of the chiefs has grown and strengthened, and the attitude towards the British flag has changed from that of grudging subordination to one of trust and co-operation. The chiefs generally recognise that their best interests are wrapped up in the welfare of British rule, and that its collapse would involve the majority of them in irretrievable ruin. Thus their genuine feelings and their material interests equally impel them to line up solidly behind the throne. A vivid spirit of confidence and co-operation was given when Lord Dufferin in 1888 decided to make this support more effective by authorizing native states to form "Imperial Service troops," that is a body of troops specially drilled and disciplined with European assistance, armed with modern weapons and able to take their place on active service side by side with British troops. Twenty-nine states have taken advantage of this offer. Moreover, it is apparent that the higher ideals of law and order introduced by the British in British India are standards in native states also, that the effects of improved administration are gradually permeating the whole country, and that the chiefs as a body have come to recognize that arbitrary methods are useless, and good organization profitable.

The splendid unanimity exhibited by the native chiefs since the outbreak of the war has been fully described in the press, almost everyone of them having freely offered the services of his state, the Nizam of Hyderabad, for example, giving $2,000,000, and the Maharaja of Mysore $1,300,000.

And yet notwithstanding the important influence which they wield, the chiefs have no say in the legislation of the India government, despite the fact that the measures passed by the government necessarily, by reflex influence, vitally affect the native states. The first occasion on which the government of India invited the chiefs to meet in conclave, not for purely ceremonial purposes, but in order that they might confer on matters of public importance, occurred in 1918, when a conference was arranged at Delhi to discuss the question of a university for the ruling classes throughout India. At this conference the chiefs expressed a desire for similar conferences on other subjects, and Lord Hardinge, then viceroy, in his reply, expressed his sympathy with the suggestion. The result was that a further conference of the ruling chiefs was convened at Delhi by Lord Chelmsford in October last, when the government sought from the chiefs "free and frank advice on questions connected with their states and people." This plan of consultation must necessarily be developed. Co-operation calls for consultation, and it is fair to expect that one of the afterclaps of the war will be a readjustment of the relations now existing between the government at Delhi and the native chiefs.

BY A TWIST OF THE FIST.

Grain is Bought and Sold on the Chicago Board of Trade

By Thomas J. Dolchery in the "Country Gentleman."

A twist of the finger makes the price of grain, and a twist of the fist sells the grain that is grown on the American farms. This first twisting is done by the Chicago Board of Trade the largest grain exchange in the world there millions of dollars' worth of farm products the bought and sold on honour each day.

Few persons are familiar with the methods of operation of the Board of Trade; even the farmer; who is virtually interested in the exchange, knows hardly anything of the way his prices are made, or how his grain is sold from one side of the continent to the other, or to countries in Europe.

The Chicago Board of Trade is the grain centre of the world. Big and little buyers from all parts of the world get together there to handle the grain at high or low prices, depending on supply and demand. Without the exchanges, foreign buyers and the representatives of millers in this country would have to make trips about the country; would have to purchase grain here and there to fill their orders. It is uncertain if the buyers could get the grain they wanted in one place for each has an order that varies in grade and size.

The special features of the Board of Trade are the four pits—the wheat pit, the corn pit, the oats pit, and the provisions pit where pork and other hog products are traded in. The traders gather round these pits. Transactions are negotiated by means of a sign language on the order of that used by mutes in carrying on conversation.

It would hardly be possible for the market to get along without these signs because of the noise on the trading floor. Hundreds of traders are shouting at once; batteries of telegraph instruments are ticking off trades and prices, and scores of messenger boys are rushing about, shouting the names of persons for whom they have messages. The signs enable the traders to do business despite the noise and din.

ALL TRADES MADE ON HONOUR

Business is facilitated by these signs a jiffy may mean thousand of dollars because of the rapidity of price fluctuations at times. Trades are made entirely on honour—no money or deposits passing hands at the time of the sales; but records are kept by both buyers and sellers. Each pit has its official reporter who records all trades and prices.

Transactions are recorded on cards carried by each trader. These cards are red on one side and blue on the other. On the blue side are recorded purchases; on the red side sales. The name of the person dealt with and the price and quantity of grain or provisions bought or sold are jotted down in this manner.

If Jones sells 5,000 bushels of wheat to White at $1.30 a bushel, the card reads: "50—White—$1.30." Simple but records of millions of dollars' worth of grain and provisions are kept in that way, and to make an entry takes but a fraction of a minute of the trader's valuable time. A long record transactions and the payment of money would require the absence of the traders from the pit for several minutes, during which time prices could lower or go higher.

Despite the simpleness and swiftness with which trades are made and recorded, few mistakes are made and all contracts are lived up to. It may be of interest to state that there are fewer breaches of contracts on the Board than there are in the ordinary life, where the possibilities are but a fraction as great.

Trading in grain is done in two ways—future and cash grain. "Futures" are grain for delivery months ahead—that, is September wheat purchased during June for delivery in September, and so on. In the cash maret the grain is delivered soon after being purchased.

There are many terms used on the Board of Trade by which the traders express themselves in short. Preeminently among those known to the public are "bulls" and "bears"—a bull being a trader who advocates a high market and trades to that end, and a bear being one who sells for future delivery grain that he does not possess, with the hope of purchasing that amount lower before the time of delivery expires.

In connection with the foregoing terms are "long" and "short." A long is a person who has a surplus of grain and is waiting for a higher market; a short has sold some grain he does not possess; with the hope that the market will go lower and enable him to purchase enough to cover the shortage and realise a profit. On a maret that is going higher, buying by shorts to prevent possible loss is called "covering"; while when a long sells at profit his action is called "realising." If the trade is made at a loss it is called "liquidating" stop-less selling or "unloading."

A "margin" is the money a small trader deposits with a commission merchant, to protect trades he has made. For instance, if he has purchased 10,000 bushels he deposits with the commission merchant a five per cent. margin, or $500. In this manner he protects his trade if the market goes lower than the price he bought at.

If the market favours the trader he gets his deposit or margin back, together with the profits, less the commission charged by the broker for making the transaction. If the market goes against the trader more than the amount of the bargain, then his account is closed out, or, if he is a customer, he is asked to put up an other margin.

"COVERING" DONE AWAY WITH

In connection with the smaller trader is one called a "scalper", who is a trader dealing in small lots and satisfied to sell at small profits rather than to play the market for bigger gains. "Hedging" is the term applied to the dealing of a trader who usually operates in the cash market and then buys futures to cover any doubtful trade he has made. This lessens his risk.

"Stop-order" is a term generally used by the small traders or scalpers. In making a trade they order their commission merchants to sell the grain purchased or to buy to cover a short trade a ta certain figure, perhaps, two or three cents lower or higher than the purchasing price. "Visible Supply" is the amount of grain that is stored in public elevators on tract or afloat.

"Cornering" the maret is often spoken of, but the rules of the Board of Trade make this practically an impossibility. Cornering means buying all the grain in sight, so that the shorts, when it comes time to make deliveries, will be forced into the market to buy from those who have cornered the market at higher prices.

If a short believes the market is being manipulated at any time, he can take the matter up to the Board of Trade, and a committee appointed for that purpose—will adjust matters. Other rules have been passed by the association to prevent uncommercial dealing. One permits of delivery of grain in cars the last few days of the contract months. This enables a commission firm to load the grain before the last day of the month, and not be forced to buy at the last minute, when sometimes the market goes out of bounds.

CANNED GOODS PACKED

The total pack of tomatoes is now officially announced as 13,142,000 cases, have ranged between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 cases. On the basis of the pack of 8,469,000 cases last year, and a maximum price of $1.05, members of the trade say that the maximum price this season of $1.40 was entirely unjustified, and that even the present price of $1.25 is too high.

Vancouver salmon fishermen are being offered contracts for their spring catches of Chinook salmon by canners along the river on a basis of 10 1-2c a pounds for Chinooks, 7 1-2c being considered the top price heretofore. Chums and dog salmon, ordinarily not taken at all by the canners, are now being eagerly sought at 50c to 55c apiece. Four or five cents apiece was the highest price paid heretofore.

Dominion Prohibition

OTTAWA, Dec. 16—The successful working of the prohibitory laws in provinces where they are in force causes great optimism among the prohibitionists who gathered here yesterday. Their resolution calling for Dominion-wide prohibition of the manufacture, sale and importation of all liquors for use as beverages will shortly be presented to the Government.

The present prohibition is somewhat different to what was asked before, at least as regards the procedure to be followed. Under the War Measure Act the Government can do almost anything, and an order-in-Council passed under that act acquires the force of Parliamentary legislation. It is now asked that prohibition be established either by the Government itself or by the regular course of an enactment of Parliament. Last year the Government went so far as it considered itself justified. If there should be any legislation this year Parliament will again be consulted first.

Under the Doherty bill of last year any province enacting prohibition can itself prevent the importation of liquor from outside if it elects to do so. The wider question of prohibiting the manufacture and sale comes exclusively within the Federal jurisdiction.

As provincial prohibition is making such strides, a Dominion act may be an eventual development. At Ottawa it is not much expected in the near future. Anyway, a referendum would almost certainly be a precedent to such action.

Young Nurse Thought of the Patient First

KINGSTON, Dec. 16.—Kingston General Hospital has a nurse in training who yesterday proved herself a heroine. A patient was being wheeled into the elevator on a carriage, when through some blunder below the elevator began to slowly move downwards. Miss Olive Anderson, of Lindsay, junior nurse, who was near by, with great presence of mind quickly pushed the carriage into the elevator cage, which came down a hairbreath from the patient's head. But before the brave nurse could withdraw her arm the steel top of the door crushed down upon her hand and she suffered agonies for a quarter of an hour. Doctors, nurses and military men worked their hardest to get the elevator up an inch, but it refused to budge. Fearing that the nurse's hand might be severed, they had the cage supported with apparatus at hand. Finally the cage forced up, and the nurse was hooked after by leading surgeons, who reported that her hand will be saved.

R. C. BRAUND

A TRIP TO SCOTLAND AS DESCRIBED BY A HAVELOCK SOLDIER

This letter is written to his sister, Mrs. Wesley Johnston, by a former Havelock boy, Pte. Harry Balfour, C.E.F., who, on a six day leave, visited Scotland:

At last I have visited a land that I have always wanted to see. The trip was unexpected too, and I think that fact only added more pleasure to it all. I am going to describe as best I can everything that transpired from the time we left camp in England till our return to the same. We travelled at night, going over, leaving camp about eight o'clock, arriving at London about 11 o'clock. At Charing Cross station we experienced the sensation of flying down the "tubes" or riding on the train which conveyed us from there to the Great Northern station, by shooting through under passages that resemble great tubes. Arriving at King's Cross station we boarded the Edinburgh express, or as they term it, the flying Scotchman, and believe me it did fly, giving me, I think, the quickest ride I ever had. We arrived in Edinburgh about eight o'clock in the morning. We were all good and hungry as usual, and say, didn't we enjoy a typical Scotch breakfast, oatmeal porridge and scones being the principle dishes. You could not help but recognize the kindly disposed dispositions of the people there generally. Of course it is not over-run with soldiers as every place is in England, so perhaps that accounted for some of that spirit of hospitality. Still I would not admit that, for throughout our stay we were used splendidly. We first visited Edinburgh Castle, which looms up very conspicuously somewhere near the centre of the city. It is built on a great cliff of hard granite rock, being 440 feet above sea level and about 240 feet at the highest part from the street below. We had a guide of course, to show us through and explain everything, which made it so interesting. I thought I was fairly acquainted with the history and romance surrounding some of these old places but that old guide put my knowledge to shame. Space will not permit me to tell you all I would like to about our visit there. The very air seemed to breathe romance as we walked through those rooms and passed through the many dark, winding passages. The old banquetting room was especially appealing to one with its gloomy walls, covered with relics of the past and the armoured figures standing here and there throughout the room as if on guard over it all. We were also in the bed room of Mary, Queen of Scots. It was in this room she was so often kept in captivity. In reading history I think my sympathy was always with this queen, whose life all through was so eventful and tragic. This particular room was well preserved, several articles of the old furniture being still there. We spent the greater part of a day there, and then to connect up certain points in its history we took the train next morning for Stirling, which is about 40 miles distant. Stirling Castle proved even more attractive. The view obtained from a certain point of vantage there called Queen Marys look-out, is said to be the finest in Scotland, and I could really believe that. On one side lies the great battle ground of Bannockburn, and away beyond that one gets a splendid view of those rolling hills so typical of Scotland. Looking away toward the sea in another direction you see a long stretch of beautiful country, running through which is the Forth river. Coming back to Edinburgh that evening we crossed what is called the Forth Bridge. This is about two miles long, and as it was just dark and the train moving slowly we had a great privilege of viewing the British North Sea fleet. It was certainly a grand sight. You could just discern the outline of the different vessels lying there in a long row that seemed to stretch for miles. The hundreds of gleaming lights coming from the boats gave the scene a grandeur that I shall not attempt to describe.

Next morning we began our programme for the day by visiting several great monuments which stand in and about Edinburgh, and erected in memory of such men as Robert the Bruce, Sir Walter Scott, John Knox, Wellington and several others. Scotland has not forgotten her great men of the past or the romance connected with those bygone days. This fact is still more evident by that spirit of pride and enthusiasm with which they explain to you bits of their early history, and really you generally find a Scotchman a regular little mine of information on that subject and always ready to impart his knowledge. Later in the day we visited the art galleries here, but as we had not a great amount of time to spare, could not do justice to many of those great paintings. One picture I remember impressed me greatly. My friend and I both agreed it was our choice of them all. It was entitled "Queen of the Night," and represented a great city wrapped in darkness, save for a faint light shed over all by the moon, of which only a small part was visible, the rest being hidden from view by a great dark cloud, many of which seemed to hover over the scene below. Altogether it was one of those pictures that seem to breathe forth a story of their own. Do you know we were only in there a few short hours and yet when we came outside again it was like—well coming back to earth. Indeed the sensation was quite the same the following day, after we had spent a couple of hours in St. George's Cathedral. We were shown through this ancient old place by an equally ancient old Scot wearing a long black gown. I think he must wear it for such occasions, probably to be in harmony with the interior of the church itself. I know the thought struck me at the time that we were rather a solemn procession as we passed from one object of interest to another, speaking all the time in low tones. This building itself is about eight hundred years old, so has quite its own share of romance attached to it. We were just on the point of leaving when the church organist appeared on the scene, so at the advice of our guide we quietly sat down and listened to the sweet solemn music that soon flooded the whole great building, where I suppose those generations of the past had often sat and listened to something quite similar, though, of course, those great pipe organs were unknown then. It is surely in a building like this that one gets the full volume and richness of them too. It was in this Cathedral that John Knox, the great reformist, delivered so many of those fiery sermons denouncing the creed of Queen Mary's time. But a short distance from the church his home, an ancient looking old house, is still standing. Much of the old furniture is still there. A great Bible lies on the table in his onetime study, a very narrow little apartment with one window, which lets in but a faint light. Many old relics are to be seen in various little corners, old candle sticks, a crude sort of lamp that was evidently very little improvement over the candle. We enjoyed the great privilege of sitting in his old arm chair in the study and writing our names in a reg'ster book kept there for that purpose. It was interesting to look over some of the names already there of persons from various parts of the world. Many of these names have been but there quite recently. It goes to show the great movement that has been among the world's population since the war began. If only the occasion of all this great moving about had been other than what it is I think it would be a very desirable thing for all. Coming in direct contact with so many different people, seeing and absorbing the beauty and romance those old lands afford must have a good and lasting effect. Anyway the colonies and those British Isles will surely be on much greater terms of intimacy that ever before.

On Saturday, the last of those few pleasant days spent in Scotland, we were up and about very early, beginning the day by climbing to the summit of what is called 'The Mound,' a mountain composed of chiefly of solid granite and rising to a height far above all other surroundings. We had an excellent view from there of that great old city, and away beyond the Leeds hills stretched irregularly along on the horizon. From here we were looking right down over Holyrood Palace, another very historical old place. It is there our present king resides when visiting Scotland. We spent several hours going through this palace, though of course we did not have of those apartments occupied by the present king when here but then that was too modern to interest us anyway, "way back." We passed through the old Abbey Church, the construction of which was begun in 1128. It is almost a wreck now, yet the tombstones or great marble slabs lying on the floor still mark the graves of those people of Royal blood who passed away centuries ago.

After all this is merely an outline of those things we enjoyed during those short six days of our stay. I could not find space in an ordinary letter to tell you all of those little details that really made our visit an event that one does not forget.

We are in camp again now, becoming naturalized once more. Some time again I hope to visit Scotland once more and renew some of the acquaintances made there.

A dog is wiser than a women, he does not bark at his master.

ONLY BRITISH SUBJECTS SHOULD GET THE VOTE

KITCHENER, Dec. 16. Judge Hanning Saturday opened a voters' list court to consider the applications of 583 citizens who desire to vote at the municipal elections at New Year's. Of these 327 now appear on the voters' list as aliens, while others have been wrongly omitted or for other causes. The court occupied the whole afternoon, as each appeal was judged on its merits.

In his opening remarks Judge Hanning pointed out that great care should be manifested in these petitions to see that none but British subjects with property qualifications are allowed to vote.

Some two hundred appeals were heard, a majority of which were sustained, while others were allowed to stand over until the next sittings, which will be held after December 23, when the court of general sessions will decide who, if any, are eligible for naturalization. This will decide the fate of those who now appear on the voters' list as aliens.

In the case of two appellants the court pointed out that they came dangerously near being guilty of a contravention of section 16 in making a false statement as to their qualifications.

PEACE PROPOSALS A SPLENDID INTRODUCTION FOR LLOYD GEORGE

British People Are Looking Forward to His Statement in Regard to Matter—Lloyd George and Asquith Are Contrasted by T. P. O'Connor

London, December 16. — Von Bethmann Hollweg, the German Chancellor, has unconsciously given Lloyd George the best possible introduction to the British public. In nearly every newspaper there appears an implied prayer of gratitude to Heaven that the Chancellor's attempt to make an inconclusive, and therefore a triumphant peace, is confronted by a Cabinet so small and united, and a Premier so vigorous and uncompromising as Lloyd George.

Not one British newspaper, even of the most ardent, liberal peace loving character, has a single word to say in favor of Germany's peace proposals. The whole thing is regarded as a clever dodge to try and put England in a wrong light before the neutral nations and encourage the German populace. I think, therefore, the proposals will lead to nothing.

NOT ALTOGETHER PLEASANT

The first meeting of the House of Commons after the creation of the new Ministry, was not altogether pleasant. Very strong and bitter personal feelings still prevail among Sir Herbert Asquith's friends over the method in which his retirement was brought about. The straight Radicals also remain in an unforgiving mood toward Lloyd George because of his support of conscription. The temper of these different sections is somewhat ill conditioned. Reginald McKenna, acting leader instead of former Premier Asquith, used words which partially revealed his attitude as an out and out friend of Asquith. Nevertheless, it is quite evident that Lloyd George commands a large majority in the House of Commons. It is also known that if opposition to him develops in the House of Commons to any extent he will immediately appeal to the country.

DEPRESSION PASSED.

The general impression at the first meeting was that a general election was inevitable but probably when the House settles down and Lloyd George has the same overwhelming support as he undoubtedly has in the country, this unwelcome break in the conduct of the war will be avoided. In the meantime, the depression caused by the defeat of Roumania is passing, and the dominant mood to-day, if not exactly one of optimism, is one of determination to wage the war to the bitter end.

In reviewing the record and the achievements of David Lloyd George, the present Premier, and Henry Herbert Asquith, ex-Prime Minister, I do not remember ever to have heard Mr. Asquith make a personal attack in all his long career in the House of Commons. Mr. Lloyd George, of course, has said his vehement, and sometimes his fierce things both on the platform and in the House. He has ever been regarded as a hard fighter, willing to take and ready to receive blows. And yet even when the storms have been raging most about his head, and when it was supposed—from the public press—that there was not a Tory in the House of Commons who was even on speaking terms with him, his room was nearly always crowded with Tory members, and they would be found quite as friendly to him as he to them. I remember once in the very agony of the Free Trade struggle, finding Colonel Lockwood—a typical country squire—seated in Mr. Lloyd George's room, taking tea with him, both eating with apparent gusto a piece of German black bread. The inner meaning of this was that the wretched bread of the German working man had been one of Mr. Lloyd George's stock arguments in favor of the Free Trade system of England as against the Protectionist system of Germany.

MAKES ENEMIES.

Yet it cannot be denied that Mr. Lloyd George has a great power of making enemies, even against his will. It is generally of course, because of his astounding rise from a youth of poverty and obscurity to a soul resounding position. Whatever happens, he is nearly always in the limelight. He himself protests that he has no love of the limelight in itself, though he is quite willing to go into it if necessary for any particular object he wants to carry out. But he is in it all the same. Men of more study temper, who pit their more solid qualities, as they think, against the brilliancy of Mr. Lloyd George, resent this prominence. In addition of course Mr. Lloyd George, whenever he has a great purpose, has been ruthless in seeing that it is carried out, and great public purposes often tread on the corns of great private interests. It should further be said that he is often ridiculously irritated by small attacks, but generally it is by small attacks from his own friends. I have heard that on the day when he was appointed to the dazzling position of Chancellor of the Exchequer, he fretted all the day because one single obscure little Welsh paper said something unkind. It is known also how bitterly he has now and then resented even a mild attack in a Liberal organ, such as that which Mr. Gardiner wrote some months ago in the Daily News. Yet there is no man who allows these things to influence him less. His Celtic nature is not naturally impersonal, but he does his best to make it impersonal. "Personal feeling," I heard him say once, "is a very distracting and bad element in a public man's judgement." Whenever," he said quite warmly, immediately afterwards, "I find any such feeling arising in my mind, I stamp it out with an iron heel."

Mr. Asquith's personal popularity is much less deflected by these elements that way against Mr. Lloyd George. He has ceased to excite envy, as is nearly always the case with those who have got to the top; and for the other reason that his intellectual domination is so complete and so easy that nobody feels the least inclination to contest it. Mr. Balfour, Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Chamberlain, all the other strong Tory leaders who served under him as Premier and who formerly detested him, are his frinds. In the House of Commons he was irresistible. It is known that another reason of his personal popularity is that everybody regards him as a thoroughly good fellow; straight, sincere, warm-hearted, with not a particle of self-conceit.

BOTH GREAT MEN.

Both Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Asquith are great men. The one is the cold, broad, clear imperturbable judgment; the other is the flaming fire of resolution, promptitude and tenacity.

We are now passing through a time of stress. The future may show even greater difficulties but every man, woman and child in the Empire, looks forward to the future with complete confidence. There is no doubt of our ability to win the war if we only put ourselves unreservedly to the task. The whole Empire is fully prepared to make any further sacrifices that may in the opinion of the new government be necessary to achieve ultimate victory. We are engaged in the greatest war ever known and fighting virtually with our backs to the wall for our very existence and for the cause of humanity and civilisation. We are, at last awake, after two years and a half of failure to recognise the issues at stake, and it is with the utmost confidence that I reiterate what I have previously said that we will go on until the last man and the last resource are exhausted.

In keeping with this resolve, the new cabinet headed by Lloyd George will have the unanimous support of every class.

KANSAS YOUTH MAKES HIS OWN FEET AND LEGS

EMPORIA, Kas., Dec. 18.—Making his own feet and legs is a part of the work done by William Ashman, a Waineco (Kas.) boy, in addition to his regular school work in the State Nrmal school at Emporia this year.

William was injured on a railroad when 7 years old, losing his left leg, since that time he has worn and outgrown several artificial legs and feet, the feet of the present one being completed by articles of his own make, the foot of the present one being completed in the manual training department of the Normal school.

When William's leg begins to get worn or short, he gets a block of wood, hunts up the manual training department and sets to work. In about three weeks he surprises his classmates by taking off his wooden leg, battering away the worn-out foot, and attaching the newly-made article.

William makes the foot complete with about four inches of the ankle attached for holding it in the vice. When the hinge for the toe joint is finished and the foot well polished, he cuts away this ankle, fastens a rubber padding in its place, and attaches it to the leg.

Making the leg, according to William, was the most difficult job. He estimates that it required a whole month of steady work for him to complete it.

William is a freshman in the college department of the Normal, and wears the yellow class cap. He is working his way through school by beating rugs, raking leaves, carrying coal, and other odd jobs. To reduce the high cost of living he does his own cooking.

INGERSOLL KNITTER HAS A GREAT RECORD

Made Three Hundred Pairs of Socks in Twenty Months.

INGERSOLL, Dec. 18.—Ingersoll has a knitter who has knitted 300 pairs of socks in one year and eight months. She is Miss Baikie, an invalid, who has been confined to the house for twelve years, and to her own room for more than five years. At the beginning of the war Miss Baikie knitted only mufflers and wristlets, but a year ago last April, when the call for socks became urgent, she turned her attention to socks.

Miss Baikie is a Presbyterian and believes in keeping the Sabbath, so none of this knitting has been done on Sunday.

TEA MARKET STILL RISING.

An increase in the ocean freight rates of two and one half cents a pound added to an advance of from six to ten cents a pound in the cost of tea at the primary markets, has necessitated the recent increase in the cost of tea in Canada. To keep faith with the public and maintain exactly the same high standard of quality as always, "SALADA" has advanced in price, but, as yet, only five cents a pound.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

There comes to the women of Canada, from those in charge of the Parcels Department of the Canadian Red Cross Society, a repeated and insistent request for "Comfort Bags" of which, according to the most recent reports, there are not yet sufficient to meet half the demand. One soldier in writing his thanks for a parcel says: "When arriving in hospital wounded, a man has nothing in the way of a shaving kit, tooth-brush, handkerchiefs, etc. These are in his pack, left in the trenches. All we own at the time is a very dirty uniform, some superfluous pieces of iron and a tremendous gun." Can one wonder then, at the great demand for "Comfort Bags" for in these, a soldier finds anything that he needs and almost everything that he wishes. Along with an earnest request that the shipment of these bags from Canada might be greatly increased, is printed in the last Red Cross Bulletin this letter from one of the hospital visitors, which speaks for itself. "I must tell you of the great pleasure your comfort bag gave the poor—the paralytic patient at the Manor House. Never have I seen anyone more truly grateful. It was pathetic to see the once great strong man, now so helpless, fondling this present from the Red Cross, as he thought it so wonderful that he should be remembered amongst so many thousand of wounded and disabled men. He is having one of the patients in the next bed to his, write to thank you for it, and I promised him that I would write too. He repeatedly said "Just think of it, real Canadian tobacco and enough to last two weeks, too, wasn't it good of them."

The work of the Red Cross Society has far-reaching results, often undreamed of by the workers. Such a letter as the following should add an interest and new meaning to our work, which as the days go by, too frequently tends to become tedious and commonplace.

Hospital Auxiliaries, No. 7
Vivies, July 5th, 1916

Sir.—In acknowledging receipt of your large consignment, allow me to express to you the deep gratitude of our dear wounded.

They are very much troubled to learn that Canada, not content to shed her blood in the noble cause of the Allies, must also come to the assistance of the French soldiers so liberally. The thought that across the ocean Canadian women are working for them tends to alleviate their sufferings and increases their confidence in the greatness of the cause for which they are fighting. The old fraternity of Canada and France is a more tangible reality for them in these hours of trial—the generosity on the one side and the gratitude on the other should make their tie for ever firm.

The whole staff of the hospital beg you to accept their warmest thanks and to convey them to the generous donors in Canada. Yours sincerely,

A. DESCROZAILLE, Presidente.

Suspected Chicken Thief Knocks Out Constable

One-armed Man Had a Merry Old Time From Oshawa to Whitby

George Arnold, a one armed man, created more excitement in the quiet town of Whitby, than has been experienced there for some time.

On the afternoon of Dec. 9th, High Constable Stevens, of Oshawa, arrested him in John Hall's coal office, Oshawa, on charge of theft of 50 white Rock chickens, in contravention of the Criminal Code. The defendant was brought before Magistrate Crysdale, who remanded him in custody for eight days, with option of $500 cash bail, which he was unable to secure.

En route to the Whitby jail Arnold made things merry for the policeman seizing the reins he turned the horse into the ditch and upset the rig. He then kicked the policemen, but the officer of the law kept him in charge, and after righting the rig, started on their journey again.

On arriving at the street leading to the jail the officer attempted to turn the horse in that direction, but the prisoner strongly objected. Grabbing both lines he began to jerk the horse. The officer rather than see the horse abused, submitted the reins to him, saying as he did, "All right, go where you want to, but I intend to go with you." When asked what he was going to do the prisoner replied, "I am going to drive up town to a restaurant and see that you buy me the best meal that can be bought." The officer agreed. Arnold selected the Chinese restaurant for his proposed sumptuous repast. The prisoner selected a table and ordered oysters, while the constable took a steak. The constable's order was brought in first and the prisoner was told there were no oysters and changed his order to soup with some tall epithets. The constable was busy carving his steak when Arnold's soup arrived. It had scarcely been laid on the table before he threw the bowl with its contents into the constable's face, blinding the latter for some moments. Instinct, or his long experience in dealing with criminals, seemed to warn the constable that the prisoner's next move would be to hit him a knock-out blow of some kind. In order to ward off this he struck out in front of him with his teeth with all his might, and just as he did so he received a terrific blow on the head from the prisoner. He was dazed for a few moments, and it seemed to him some one had turned off all the lights. When he came to he found that his baton had found its mark. The blow had landed on Arnold's neck and he lay across the chair and table in a helpless condition, where he had been knocked out. Both blows must have landed at about the same time.

When Arnold regained consciousness things flew. Chairs, tables and dishes went towards the ceiling. Finally the constable got the prisoner down and when Whitby's Chief arrived he found them not in a fond but a last embrace. The officers then started to the town lock-up and finally locked their prisoner up.

It will be remembered that Arnold beat and nearly killed Turnkey Alex. Bruce, of the Whitby jail, a number of years ago.

"THE SHOE MAN"

A SUCCESSFUL SCHOOL CONCERT

On Tuesday evening, Dec. 12 the pupils of S. S. No. 7, Otonabee, gave a concert in the hall at Mather's Corners. A splendid programme was provided, consisting of choruses, drills, dialogues, etc., by the school children. Mr. O'Toole, accompanied by Miss Doris, played several violin selections, which were thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Hunter of Peterborough, had an enthusiastic reception, and his Scotch readings were repeatedly encored. The teacher, Miss Nicholls, sang several Scotch songs which were also thoroughly enjoyed.

The hall was packed to its utmost capacity. Reeve Anderson occupied the chair, and his address was much enjoyed, especially by the children.

After the programme, boxes which the ladies had brought were put up for sale. Mr. Norman Gainer added much to the enjoyment of the evening in the role of auctioneer.

The proceeds amounted to over $70. Part will be used for patriotic purposes, the remainder for the purchase of a school organ.

THE ST. JOHN'S JUNIOR W. A.

Held a Fancy Bazaar on Saturday—A Successful Function

If there exists a "Scrooge," whether masculine or feminine, in this city, he, or she, would surely have seen the error of his (or her) ways and have been converted and healed under the curmudgeon have seen the pleasant sight of the happy faces of the young girls who were last Saturday afternoon assembled in St. John's schoolhouse.

The occasion was a Christmas bazaar and fancy fair, engineered by the young ladies composing the Junior Women's Auxiliary of St. John's Anglican church. Their successful and well arranged function took place between three and six o'clock, afternoon tea being served at four. The first thing that attracted the eye was prettily fancy booth, presided over by the Misses Jean Kidd, Kathleen Cuffe, and Beryl Bates. Here were all sorts of pretty and useful articles, too numerous to mention. Then a turn across the room, which, by the way, had been prettily decorated, was a "fishpond," where Sybil Hood and Aline Morgan had their hooks and lines.

Then there was, of course, a candy stall. Here Madeleine Kelly, Flo Hutchinson and Marjory Phillips were busily occupied in vending sweet dainties. And the tea table with its generous supply of edibles, etc., must not be overlooked. Here Mrs. Wood and Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron were the indefatigable and delightful hostesses, assisted by a number of girls.

At intervals an impromptu programme was given, Mrs. Cameron here ably assisting as accompanist. Among other items were songs by Kathleen Cuffe and a recitation by Frieda Shurely and all the numbers were good in their various ways.

Dora Brown was very efficient in looking after the gate money.

Why Letters To Soldiers Stray

Some Addresses Faulty and Wounded Are Transferred

LONDON, Dec. 18.—A letter appears in the Times from Rev. Frank Leight, of Hespeler, Ont., complaining of delay in delivering letters to Canadian wounded from friends in Canada. "One of my sons was wounded at Ypres in June and another on the Somme in September. The latter had no word from home from mid-September to mid-November though himself able to write weekly. He was at Etaples a month and at Nottingham about a month. Though we wrote first through the army post-office and afterwards directly to him, he gets not a word from home. The other son was nearly two months without letters, though he was not sent to England.

Move About Fast.

Enquiries reveal every sympathy towards the matter which the writer ventilates. When a man is wounded, letters for him are sent to the Postal Department of the Canadian Record Office. Their difficulties are considerable in following the migrations of the wounded from one hospital to another. For instance, a man will remain but one day in a certain hospital and two days at another, and so on. Every endeavour is made to deal expeditiously with the mail in such cases. Correspondents in Canada, however, send letters by the hundreds with such addresses as "John Smith, care Army Post Office, London," whereas the Army Post Office as far as England is concerned, is non-existent and applies only to the army in the field.

Take Care With Address.

The greatest care ought to be taken to have the man's regimental number plainly indicated. Extraordinary congestion in all the branches of the mail services, civil and military, ought also to be borne in mind. A letter delivered at the Canadian Associated Press office, from Toronto yesterday, had taken exactly three weeks to come. Londoners are often without Canadian newspapers for five weeks at a stretch.

A COMBINATION AEROPLANE AND YACHT INVENTED

One very valuable result of the great stimulus given to aeroplane construction, has been a very practical combination of the aeroplane and the fast cruising pleasure yacht.

Mr. Curtiss has built a large combination flying yacht having a boat body about fifty feet long, with a cabin top over the cock-pit to keep the passengers dry in rough weather. It has a cruising speed of 70 feet and is capable of starting from or alighting in, either rough or smooth water. The equipment of this air yacht, aside from the self starter, muffler, electric lights, search light, regulation lights for night flying, anchor, and other yacht equipment, includes the Sperry automatic pilot which controls the air cruiser, in flight—doing, automatically, the greater part of the work of the pilot.

In the boat body, very comfortable and roomy accommodation is provided for five people, very much as in the most luxurious touring cars.

With a full load and eleven people on board, it is capable of 60 miles per hour and has a cruising radius of 300 miles. With a load of five people its cruising radius is 500 miles. Such a vessel, of course, can always take the shortest route either by air or water, and travel at a very high speed. There seems to be a great future for this new type of conveyance.

HOLIDAY GIFTS

OF SPECIAL MERIT FOR MEN AND BOYS

The things that men appreciate above anything else are the practical gifts of things for everyday use—things that the recipient would buy for himself.

And then, too, you raise his opinion of you just another bit higher when you present him with something practical and sensible—something he would buy for himself.

Every time he wears the Scarf, the Shirt, or the Cravat or Housecoat, or the Bathrobe, or the Suspenders, or the Gloves which you gave him, he thinks of you. Every time some friend speaks a word of admiration for the gift you made him, it brings a happy recollection of you.

Every time he sees the ornamental, perhaps, but unuseful gift of someone else, he unconsciously remembers you for your practical, useful and sensible gift of something to wear.

So, when you select a present for "him," remember, men are practical. They cherish the memory of a practical, useful gift, but soon forget the opposite kind.

And make your gift to "him" something he will really like better than all the other presents he receives—let it be something he can wear.

And don't lose sight of the fact that most men instinctively know that any thing which bears this store's label is absolutely right in style and dependable in quality.

ISRAEL WILL BE RESTORED IN THE SEVEN YEAR TRIBULATION

Third of a Series of Chart Talks on Prophetic Truth by Pastor Doner of Bethany Tabernacle—"The Riddle of History"

Pastor Doner gave the third of his Chart Talks on Prophetic Truth—to an interested audience in Bethany Tabernacle last night. He introduced his subject by showing how God had separated the Jews from the Gentiles. His subject was Israel on "The Scapegoat of the Nations." Illustrated by an old Jew carrying on his hand a globe of which was a map of the world. As he looked at one country after another he sighed and said: "I am not wanted there." The Jew is the Riddle of History. To the world he is intolerable and despised and yet indispensable. He is flattered and dreaded by every nation.

When God called Abraham out from his own kindred he gave him a definite promise or covenant Gen. 12: 2.3. "I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee, and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Abraham heard the call and from that beginning sprang the most wonderful nation of the ages. This covenant has been only partly fulfilled. Will God keep His promise in its fulness? Without a doubt He will. Abrahams name is already great and all the land God promised to him and to his people will some day soon be theirs. Israel is to God as the apple of His eye. No nation has escaped punishment that has dared to persecute Israel.

CANAAN DARKENED.

One seventh of the worlds population are followers of Mohammed. Canaan is darkened and blighted under their rule. Jerusalem is more sacred to them than any city in Arabia and though Great Britain has wrested Egypt out of their hands, she would find it a more serious thing to undertake the capture of Jerusalem because the whole Moslem world would resist such an attack and yet God is opening up the way so that despised Israel will have the privilege of entering that land of world wide interest.

In 1900 many predictions were made that great events were looming up in the near future and to-day the whole world realizes the truth of this. There are fourteen and a half million Jews in the world, out of these there are ten million in the theatre of the war being 68 per cent. of this number while of the Gentile nations in the war zone there are only 40 per cent. of the Gentile world population and Israel though so deeply interested is the only people in the war without a flag of their own. Russia at the opening of the war laid the blame for every mishap on the Jews, consequently there was much persecution, but that is not done now. God will lacerate every nation that is treating His people cruelly.

ANOTHER PROMISE.

God made another promise to Abraham in Gen. 15: 18, "Unto thy seed seed have I given this land from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." This promise has never been fulfilled, but is just as sure as any promise that God has already paid. God has allotted this land them. They will again rebuild their cities, plant their vineyards, and enjoy the fruits thereof. Israel will yet be the head of nations. Jerusalem will be the centre of the worlds worship. Those will be the days of cleaning up and refining of the nations.

We are now at the close or fulness of the Gentile age. We are in the Laodicean age, spoken of in Revelation. The church is spoken of as being neither cold or hot. The professed church is in many ways closing the door against the Truth. The Church to-day is petrified with formalism and is catering to the world in many ways. This is a disappointment to God and to His people for there is nothing to satisfy man's greatest need. The true church of God is composed of the "called out ones." Everyone in this building of God is a living member, there can be no dead members in the body of Christ.

WILL BE RESTORED.

Israel will be restored in the Seven year Tribulation time—Antichrist will then be ruling. In Rom. 11:25 we are told "That blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles become in." In that day light will break upon them and they will see Christ as their Messiah and in that day the ships of Tarshish shall bring them from afar. The ships to-day are in the hands of Great Britain and they shall be used to bring Israel to their own land.

The Jew to-day is providing the brain and the money for the carrying on of the war. Lord Reading a British Jew came to America and succeeded in getting a great loan for his country. Many Jews are in prominent places in Great Britain. The same is true of Germany, so it is in every nation in this war.

God has set a time-lock on Israel Psa. 102:13. There is a set time and God alone knows that time, but we can see from the signs of the Times that His time is very near at hand.

Some say the world will have to be converted before Jesus comes, but there are more children being born into the world every year than there are people being saved, so that argument will not hold. Therefore it behooves us to be ready for His coming.

AGENT OF FRANZ BOPP SAYS HE PLANTED BOMBS

San Francisco, Dec. 18.—Louis J. Smith, star witness for the prosecution in the Government's case against Franz Bopp, German consul-general here, and five others on charges of conspiracy to violate American neutrality, testified that he had been promised $300 a month and expenses, with a bonus of $300 for each explosion in connection with plans to upset war munition shipments to the Entente Allies.

Smith is under indictment on the same charge.

Smith said he first met Baron George von Bricken, a defendant consular attache, in the German house, a club in San Francisco, May 8, 1915. Smith said he informed von Bricken of a shipment of dynamite from a California powder plant to Seattle from where it was to be shipped to Vladivostok.

Smith testified: "Von Bricken asked me if I would follow the shipment to Seattle."

Later Smith said, C. C. Crowley, detective and also one of the defendants asked him if he would trail the shipment to Seattle and blow it up on a barge in the harbours. Smith said he agreed to do this.

"Von Bricken also asked me if I would explode the dynamite barge." Bricken and Crowley promised me $300 a month and expenses with a bonus of $300 for each explosion. Crowley gave me $250 and they sent me to Pinole, Cal., to get more information of dynamite shipments from a German. I could not find the German they mentioned."

The Hercules Powder Company has a plant at Pinole. The barge understood to have been referred to by Smith was blown up in Seattle harbor May 30, 1915.

Smith told of the meaning of code Telegrams he sent from Tacoma Wash., to Crowley concerning his alleged attempts to place a bomb on the Japanese Steamer Kaifuku Maru.

Smith identified the following telegram he sent to Crowley, May 13, 1915.

"Fine weather Kaifuku, Box 244 Five days."

The witness said the telegram meant "good time to place bomb on the Kaifuku, sailing in five days."

Smith said in case he got a bomb aboard the steamer he was to wire "Shall I buy at $350 per pound?" and if he failed he was to telegraph "They have sold it."

He failed to get a bomb aboard he said, because the Kaifuku Maru unexpectedly swung into the stream. She was carrying munitions to Russia.

THE ARCHANGEL IS ICEBOUND

Many Vessels Forced to Winter in the Russian Port.

The harbour in Archangel is so heavily blocked with ice that the ice-breakers find it difficult to get steamers out of the port, according to information received by Consul North Winship, who is at Petrograd. Mr. Winship says there is a great shortage of ice-breakers. The port authorities are hopeful of clearing the ports of steamers eventually, he says, but it is not more than probable that a large number will be forced to winter there.

"The last steamer scheduled to enter Archangel of the largest single shipping company running regular boats to that port," Mr. Winship continues in a report to the Department of Commerce, but just published, "is now lying at the Bay of Alexandrovsk waiting for an ice-breaker expected from England. This new ice-breaker is expected hourly, and is to take the large steamer in and out again, after which the navigation season may be expected to be closed definitely until late spring.

"It is also learned from private sources that the section of the new Murman Railroad, running from Kola on the Bay of Alexandrovsk to Kandalaksha on the White Sea, is scheduled to open for traffic about Feb. 1.

"When the next spring and summer season for navigation at Archangel opens in 1916 it will be considerably helped by the wide-gauge railroad, paralleling the present narrow gauge line, from Vologda as far as Nyandome, which is now open for traffic."

London Motor Traffic Shows Ebb

Motor vehicle traffic in London is at a lower ebb this year than it was last, according to a traffic census recently taken in Edgware Road. The following is from the London Telegraph.

"Each September since 1906 Hewitt Griffin has taken a census of traffic in Edgware Road, London, on behalf of Motor Traction, in order to record the progress or otherwise of the mechanical horse. A steadily rising line shows in diagrammatic form the use made of motor vehicles from that date until the outbreak of war. The highest point is reached in 1913, after which there is a great fall. In other words, while about 700 motor cars passing a given point in Edgware Road during a nine-hour day in September 1914—an increase of about 100 upon the preceding year—no fewer than 900 passed the same ground on the census day in 1915, but the number dropped to 450 last September. There are many causes for this rapid fall. A certain number of cars have been laid up for various reasons, the petrol restrictions have accounted for the absence of others, and the general call to the colours for the remainder. The 1916 motor traffic is similar to that prevailing in 1906, when 450 cars were recorded. It is to be hoped that the Petrol Committee will take note of these figures, for they clearly show that little if any unnecessary motoring takes place to-day.

"Usually at this time of the year London has its motor show. At present an exhibition of new cars obviously is out of the question, but there is an excellent substitute in the exhibition of second-hand motors now being held at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. Arranged in groups in the alphabetical order of the names of the makers, motorists can inspect many useful vehicles here. Besides cars, there are commercial motors and motor cycles on view, so that all classes of prospective purchasers should be able to discover something to suit their requirements. Although the present motor exhibition has not the glamour and the glitter of the Olympia affairs of the repeal past, it is quite appropriate to the times we live in and serves its purpose."

CROSS FOR A BOY; CROWN FOR A GIRL IS THAT RED HAIR

If you have a tinge of red in your hair cultivate it; don't try to eradicate it—that is, if you are a woman. It is a singular fact that although red hair is a cross for a boy it is a crown for a girl. In the first place, red hair, and especially hair with a reddish tinge, is very expensive. Any hairdresser will tell you that it is hard to duplicate and there is considerable demand for it.

Perhaps even more desirable is the youthfulness which clings to women with red hair long after their sisters are dull, middle aged nobodies.

A theory of eugenics is that red hair is rare because it only occurs where both parents had red hair. This has not been proved. On the contrary, red hair sometimes seems to be inherited from some forgotten ancestor, after having skipped several generations.

It is quite generally believed that red hair is indicative of temper, but this should be no reason for a man to shun a spouse with auburn tresses. Most of the harm done in the world comes from deliberate plotting and not from impetuous acts of anger. Great crimes are committed by persons who brood over fancied or real wrongs and exist for revenge, rather than by those who fly into a rage and then forget. Even murderers are far more often brooders than hot tempered "red heads."

Noted beauties, from Cleopatra down, have possessed red hair. Red haired women are supposed to have an envy and charm which no other type possess. Queen Elizabeth had red hair, and her mark is deep on English history.

Red haired women who have an idea that only certain colours are becoming miss the opportunity many times to look their best. Black is always good. Nile green, creams and soft shades of pink also are becoming. The flaming haired woman who knows her type revels in much gold lace, for the brightness of the gold only echoes the gleam of her tresses.

ANOTHER JUNIOR PRACTICE AT SEVEN O'CLOCK TO-NIGHT

Junior hockey players are reminded of the practice at Brock Street Rink to-night at 7 o'clock. All candidates for the team are asked to be out sharp on time, as the practice will only be from 7 to 8 o'clock this evening. After to-night the squad will be cut down considerably in size, as it is impossible to get any beneficial practice with fifteen or twenty on the ice. A number of good youngsters were out on Friday night who look very promising for future junior teams, and it is unfortunate that an opportunity cannot be given for them to get some useful training this year. However, only seven can catch the junior O. H. A. team and it is impossible to carry a large squad all winter to interfere with the work of getting the regulars into shape, both as regards condition and team work. Youngsters who may not be chosen this year have no reason to feel discouraged — their day is coming. In fact some of the members of the team who will wear the Peterborough colours in the Junior O. H. A. this year have had to work several years to get a place on the line-up. And the new crop of "kids" this year have a bigger handicap than usual, as the squad turning out contains a larger number of seasoned players than is usually the case. The players will dress in the Peterborough hockey club room, upstairs to-night, and will use that room for the balance of the season. Coach Jerry Coughlin will be on hand to handle the practice.

BOWLING

On Saturday night a bowling match between the De Laval factory and the De Laval office was played at the Water street alleys. This game proved to be exciting at all stages, in fact one of the best yet rolled in these alleys. Not a man would give in till the last pin was down in the last game. Carter for the factory rolled a high score of 476 and Wilson for the office rolled 419. Wilson also pulled off a very hard spare. In all this match caused great excitement on both sides; but the De Laval office men are not to be outdone and say that they will issue another challenge to the factory. This game will be played in the near future.

Mr. H Lush won the weekly prize with a score of 637, this score is the highest yet rolled in these alleys since Mr. Solomon became manager.

H. Lush also won the daily prize by getting nine spares, a feat that is unusually seen on the alleys.

Mr. Miller's score of 258 for the ball still stands good. As this prize will be given on the 1st of January, the bowlers will have to hustle if they wish to beat this score. This prize is worth trying for as it is valued at $35.00

This will be a great exiciting week at the Alleys, open for all bowlers as Mr. Solemn is giving away turkeys for the bowlers who roll the three highest consecutive games, these prizes will be awarded on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday and should bring out all bowlers.

Curlers Meet To-night

A meeting of the Curling Club will be held at the rink this evening to ballot on six proposed members, including Mayor Duffus. Mr. McIntosh has already flooded the rink and with cold weather, expects to have the sheet ready for the first game in a short time.

The 'Kickers' Club' are anxious for news about one of its most prominent members who has not yet been heard from and whose absence has created some disquietude about the probable activities of the Club this winter

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR ONE OF FIRE VICTIMS

Impressive Service to the Memory of Late Wm. Miles at the Mark Street Methodist Church Last Evening.

LESSONS OF THE FIRE

Mark Street Church was crowded last evening when a service in memory of the late William Miles, who lost his life in the Quaker Oats fire last Monday, was held. Deceased worshipped in the Mark Street Church, of which he was a respected member, a week ago Sunday evening, making his absence all the more keenly felt during the service last night. The pastor, Rev. Whattam, referred to the late Wm. Miles as a quiet, yet active earnest and faithful member of the Methodist church, beloved not only by those in his home, but by all who knew him. In the shadow of the tragedy in which this member, along with other citizens, had lost his life, the Pastor said that it was his purpose last night to touch on some of the lessons that could be gleaned from the disaster. In the case of the deceased member, he was prepared in the happiest way for such a tragedy, having put his confidence in God and rested his faith in Christ.

Rev. Mr. Whattam used for the basis of his sermon, two texts, one from Ezekiel, and the other from Hosiah, which read: "Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke; yet neither shalt thou mourn or weep, neither shall thy tears run down," and "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death."

The thought in the heart of each one of us this hour said Mr. Whattam, is of the terrible tragedy that occurred in our midst on Monday last. The splendid industrial establishment stood an example of the genius of man at its best. It represented the wealth of thought and of money of many men. It was giving to the world its gifts again. There 500 employees found the privilege of industry, and there 500 families had their interest because from that establishment came the assurance for the days to come and the days as they were passing one by one. It was backed by the mighty millions of princes of commerce. Then came with great suddenness the appalling tragedy through which we have passed, and the great institution was left at the end of the day a mass of smouldering ruins. The fire left five hundred men without steady employment, eighteen lives were lost; sorrow filled every breast and a pall of gloom hangs over the community. As pastor he went on Monday to St. Joseph's hospital and there visited some of the victims who were rescued from the flames.

The scene was heartrending beyond description, and all the Pastor could say was "God bless the men who came out of that terrible fire suffering agonies untold. God bless them." In a case like this this we were apt to challenge the Scriptural passage that all things work together for good to them that love God. But the words were true. If we could but steady our hearts and strengthen ourselves in this crisis we might glean from the tragedy of eternal import.

The first thought along this line was one of sympathy to those who were suffering or bereaved. In this service in memory of one who was lost, we pray God that He may bless every heart breaking to-night as they sit beside the bier in the home. Far better than expected the body had been recovered and that fact explained the absence of the Miles family from the service. Loving hearts and tender hands would bear it away to its last resting place.

The second thought was one of gratitude. Had this fire occurred a few years ago it would have meant the destruction of the city with even more appaling loss of life. We should be thankful too, that of the 300 girls and women working in the factory, every one of them was saved. Yes, we should feel thankful from the bottom of our hearts that, disastrous as had been the occurrence, it had not been worse. After all we have just been touched by that which is crushing the souls out of whole nations at the present time. When we put our fate beside the deeper woe and the blacker tragedy, we must thank God that this thing had no come to us in the full measure that it has to some other nations.

The third lesson from the fire was the wisdom of the preparedness of souls. That even though life should cease as with a breath no harm can come to the life which knows the divine touch of Jesus Christ. Life is uncertain. Death lurks in common things. In the midst of life we are in death. He who can pass the events of the past week and still lives of the past week, is playing, in utter foolishness this life as a game. God help the hearts that know all of the events of the past week, and go on as the same as ever. If we have not been able to glean from this tragedy lessons of everlasting import, then we should challenge our souls. In these events do not arouse us from our spiritual slumber, God help us.

Suspended Sentence For And. Magee

There were few dry eyes in the County Court this afternoon when Judge Huycke liberated Andrew Magee who was convicted a few days ago of concealment of the birth of Dolly Taylor's baby. The prisoner was allowed to go on suspended sentence and was ordered to report every two months to Chief Thompson. His wife was present in court with their three-year-old boy, a bright-eyed little chap, who stared in bewilderment and without comprehension at the court officials and the audience in the gallery.

The proceedings were deeply pathetic, revealing in abridged summaries Andrew Magee's moral and material decline in the past ten years. Apparently he was undone by his wife's relations, among them principally Dolly Taylor, whom the Judge termed "that wretched woman." Mr. Daniel O'Connell, solicitor for the prisoner, presented in a brief address, a plea for clemency. Magee had come of a very respectable family. He had owned a farm of 200 acres free of debt. But during the past eight years he had lost the back hundred of his farm, from the sale of which he had received only $175, after his encumberances were paid off. The other hundred acres have a chattel mortgage on them, and Mr. O'Connell stated that should the prisoner be sentenced to penientiary the farm would doubtless be altogether lost and his wife and family left without support.

Crown Attorney Hatton expressed a wish to meet the plea of defendant's counsel. Having regard for all the circumstances in this case he felt that if clemency were extended to the prisoner it would not be in opposition to the good government of the country.

Judge Huycke's Remarks.

After calling Magee over to his desk, because of the prisoner's deafness Judge Huycke stated that he agreed that Magee had been rightly convicted. The jury had rightly acquitted Dolly Taylor on one charge, but on the other, had made a terrible blunder. "She was as guilty as you were," observed the Judge, adding that he did not find fault with the jury.

His Honour stated that he did not want the impression to go abroad that Magee and the Taylor woman had gone scot free. She was free by a mistake. After considering the future welfare of Magee's family and for the sake of Mrs. Magee and their children, and what would happen to their home and its complete disintegration, His Honour stated that he couldn't and wouldn't send the prisoner to prison.

"When I think of the way you treated this woman (Mrs. Magee) of whom you are not worthy and to whom you have been unfaithful, and how she had cared for your children, and those by your former wife, and I am told, that she has been a good wife to you, and when I think of how that other woman treated her, I feel that you don't deserve anything."

It was then that His Honour stated that because of the interests of the wronged wife and the welfare of the children he had decided to suspend sentence.

"But this does not mean that you are absolutely free. If you behave yourself, you will not hear anything more of this affair. You must report every two months to Chief Thomson, and write to him, if you cannot come in, telling him what you are doing and how you are getting on.

If I hear of that woman (Dolly Taylor) living at your home again, or of you seeing or speaking to her, I will immediately have you brought before me. I want you to cut him out," His Honour heatedly admonished," in conclusion.

Dolly Taylor is a sister of Magee's present wife. It was stated that relatives had lived on Magee's county, and that Dolly Taylor had exposed him to the temptations to which he had fallen. She had been a participant in his crime and it was intimated had lead to his undoing.

Magee broke down at the close of the Judge's address, and walking over to his little boy picked him up, and enfolding him in his arms, kissed him as he followed his wife from the court. And it wasn't a kiss for the benefit of the spectators.

The Woes of The Milkman

Conditions in West

Mr. Robert Harstone, Water street returned on Friday last from the West. He reports a peculiar situation in connection with the grain crops in the three provinces. Some parts have produced great crops and the farmer with the high prices is better off than ever. Other sections have been practically non-productive and the grower consequently has no returns, but Mr. Harstone feels that the high prices prevailing this year and the exceptional crop of last year are rapidly putting the West in good shape again.

Skating Again To-night With Band in Attendance

The Brock street rink opened on Saturday night to a capacity house, with the ice fairly good. The ice for to-night, with the band in attendance, is in grand shape, and another good crowd is expected. From indications there will be a big season of skating.

Germans Like Clay In French Hands

right flank the forward movement encountered strong opposition in Hardecourt Wood which was not overcome until late in the afternoon, when Bezon Vaux redoubt, about five kilometres in advance of the original French front line, was taken from the German garrison.

Mangin Organizer of Victory.

General Mangin was again the principal organizer of the victory, in which he followed his own example at Douaumont and Fort Vaux by delivering irresistible blows at the chief point in the German lines and hammering until his opponents were forced to give ground. Generals Nivelle and Petain watched the engagement, in which only four French divisions participated, although it is known the Germans had five divisions engaged, from every regiment of which prisoners were taken.

It is reported without confirmation that several of the German divisions which took part in the fighting were hurried from Roumania to rejoin the Crown Prince's army, and that they were among those suffering defeat.

The French losses during the attack were unbelievably light. The German artillery seemed to fire at random, probably disorganized by the absence of German airmen, who were kept in complete subjection by the French aviators.

Snow and sleet fell throughout the night, rendering difficult further operations. The French Staff's examination of the German positions captured demonstrates their formidable nature and their high state of preparedness against assault.

Crown Prince Too Confident.

Thirty German deserters who came in before the battle began, testify that the Crown Prince's army had knowledge that an attack was about to be made and were confident that they could hold the ground, which during their nine months of occupation they had strongly organized. They assert that more Germans were desirous of deserting, but that the strict precautions which had been taken and the nature of the ground prevented them from doing so.

The difficulties opposed to the French advance may be realized from the altitude of the hills which the troops were ordered to take and succeeded in capturing. Pepper Hill, which is double-crested, is 1,122 feet high; Louvemont is 1,138 feet high, and another hill, unnamed, behind is 1,180 feet. The work of the French aviators, like that of the infantry and artillerymen was carried out everywhere with almost indescribable daring. Dozens of squadrillas of airmen flitted about observing and correcting the artillery fire and accompanying the infantry formations in their advance, after which they flew rapidly back to Headquarters with detailed reports, thus keeping the Commander-in-chief in closest touch with events.

Not an Aviator Killed.

During the entire day not a French airman was killed. On the other hand, it is reported that they destroyed a German observation balloon, which probably accounts for a terrible burst of flame just before noon facing Douaumont. That fort was the objective of the German heavy guns for hours, but the projectiles did only slight damage.

Liquor Advertising Is Condemned

By the Ministerial Association

A meeting of the Ministerial Association was held this morning in the Y.M.C.A. A very interesting paper by Rev. W. H. White on "How Shall We Present Christianity to the New Age," was read and discussed.

During the meeting the following resolution was proposed and adopted

"That whereas, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario has enacted legislation prohibiting the sale of liquor within the bounds of the province;

And whereas, the manifest purpose of this legislation is to further conserve men and money to meet the tremendous demands made upon us in these days of national trial;

And whereas liquor dealers outside this province are doing all in their power to further the sale of their wares in this province;

And whereas certain newspapers of this province give advertising space to the dealers above mentioned;

And whereas we regard such action on their part as contrary to the spirit of the legislation above referred to;

Be it resolved that we as an Association express our regret that any newspaper should, for profit, assist this business by giving space to its advertisement;

And that we call upon Christian people to assist in every possible way to bring to the attention of such newspapers the fact that we regard the propaganda as calculated to defeat the intention of our law makers;

And that this resolution be published in the press of our city."

Holland Solves The Coal Cinder Problem

With coal costing from $6 to $8.25 a ton, thousands of tons of fuel are said to be wasted in Toledo, Ohio. This assertion is based on scientific research in fuel economy, says the Blade.

United States Consul Frank W. Mahin, at Amsterdam, Holland in the Government Commerce reports says it has been found that, in many instances, more than 20 per cent, sometimes as high as 75 per cent., of furnace refuse consists of combustable material.

Dutch inventive genius has worked out a device for getting all the coke and unconsumed coal out out of the ashes of furnace refuse. By the device, furnace refuse is separated into parts of four different sizes. Each part is placed in a separate basin containing a liquid of specific gravity, somewhat more than water, and stirred briskly. The lighter, combustible remnants come to the top.

It is said 2,000 tons of furnace coal will yield an average of 36 tons of good quality fuel, besides much of inferior quality. The refuse left from the sieving process can be utilized in making a fine grade cement, it is said.

"The cost of installing this device would be too much for a small factory" says Consul Mahin, "but it has been proposed that an establishment might be erected and the refuse from factories, within a given district be collected and treated there, so that all the associated factories would be able to operate their furnaces very cheaply."

BRITISH SOLDIERS FROZEN TO DEATH ON BALKAN HEIGHTS

Canadian Officer Tells Terrible Story of Allied Attempt to Save Serbia Unaided While Greeks Played Traitor in the Rear—Greek Aid to German Submarines.

THE RETREAT FROM SERBIA

A Canadian officer returned recently from the Salonika front gives the following interesting and enlightening account of the early operations from that base, and the treachery of the Greek King.

The Salonika Army would never have been at Salonika at all if the cooperation of the Allies had not been invited by the then Prince Minister of Greece, the great Cretan, Venizelos. This was when the Greek army was mobilized by Venizelos against Bulgaria, on September 24, 1915.

The Greek army is composed of six completely equipped army corps, with adequate reserves. Its artillery fits it admirably for operations in the Balkans as it is very strong in mountain guns, especially light howitzers. All equipment is on the best French model. It had been trained by a French military mission, and its morale was good after its easy victories of the late Balkan wars.

With the Greek first line of 200,000 men, with the 150,000 men sent by the Allies, Serbia could have been saved.

Greek King Ruins Our Plans.

When the King of Greece found, however, that only 13,000 Allied troops had arrived as a first instalment—the first troops landed at Salonika on October 6—and that Germany and Austria-Hungary were really in earnest in their attack on Serbia, he forced Venizelos from power and installed the Goumaris Government. He also appointed pro-Germans to all the important commands in the army and civil service. The State telegraphs, telephones and other news giving facilities were used for the dissemination of news favourable to the Germans, and as a means of informing the Germanic combination as to what we were doing.

In the meantime the Allied troops—one French division and the remnants of the British 10th Division (Irish)—had proceeded up country by means of the railway line which runs by the Vardar valley. The French were commanded by Gen. Sarrail, and the British by Sir Bryan Mahon (of Mafeking fame). There was no commander-in-chief. Each general worked "on his own," but they worked out their plans in co-operation.

The French held a position on the left, around Krivolak, in Serbia, the British on the right of the railway line, well up into the Belashitza mountains round the village of Gabrova, and north of Doiran Station. Doiran Station was the British advanced base.

The French tried to join hands with a Serbian force under 5,000 in number, the remnants of the Uskub garrison, which was holding the Babuna pass, north of Prilip, near the present scene of operations. This attempt to join up with the Serbs failed, and the Serbians were crushed in the north without the relieving force having any effect on operations in general, though it helped to make possible the escape of the Serbians from Monastir into Albania by occupying the attention of a large Bulgar force.

More Greek Treachery.

A retreat from Serbian territory with the failure of the Greeks to act up to their engagements, became a military necessity. The Greeks at Salonika, around which their whole army was now concentrated, claimed all the landing facilities of the port, which were limited, should be used for the supply vessels of their army. They also commandeered a large portion of their rolling stock on the Oriental Railway, which never was very plentiful and sent a lot of it into Bulgarian territory, and more up the Monastir line and down the branch line being constructed to link up the Greek Government railways in old Greece with Macedonia. They also manufactured a couple of train wrecks on the Vardar river line, with the idea of starving out our troops up country. In fact, for two days we had to "carry on"—on very short commons.

The Greek Government now took the attitude that our troops, if driven over the frontier, would have to be disarmed and interned. Then we sent the Government an ultimatum which caused them to withdraw this demand. Meanwhile, of course, precious time was wasted, which was what the Greeks wanted. They hoped the Germanic coalbination would destroy the force in Serbia while they argued questions of international law. And the obstructions put in our way at Salonika did make impossible the sending up-country of the large Anglo-French army, which had arrived in the month of November. This army comprised a French corps and four British divisions. Two regular divisions (Old Army) were included in this force, and the whole were fresh from France, having been taken out of the line and shipped via Marseilles as soon as Venizelos promised to aid Serbia in return for Allied assistance.

The Retreat From Serbia.

The Allied troops in Serbia meanwhile began to retreat. The French got back at far as Gheveli with small loss, saving all their stores. Here, however, on December 7 they were heavily attacked and retired without advising us. We were also attacked by a force of Bulgars which outnumbered us about ten to one. The 10th Division was driven into Greek territory with the loss of eight guns, and a heavy casualty list. The only thing that saved our force was the neglect of the Bulgars to follow up this retreat into Greek territory.

For days portions of the 10th and 22nd British Divisions, one brigade of the latter division having been in support, wandered on the mountains in a dense fog and some were captured by the Bulgars. Ultimately the remainder was safely collected.

It was a very lively experience. The cold was intense and the sufferings of the men indifferently clad for the rigors of a winter in the mountains, were terrible. The cold often froze sentries to death. The cold snap only lasted two weeks, but during that time it caused lots of trouble. Then we fell back on Salonika, where the Greek troops were all around us and had their guns trained on our camps.

Greek Aid to German Subs.

Finally the threat of a blockade of Greece caused the removal of the mass of Greek troops from around Salonika, and the worst was over. A great entrenched camp was constructed in December around the city, running from the Vardar to the Gulf of Orfano. As a matter of fact we never occupied these lines in force, but they are still there, and their strength is immense. (A second Torres Vedras.)

The Greeks in the meantime, kept the Germans fully advised as to all our movements and Fort Kara-Burun, which commands the port, was found to be supplying German submarines with fuel, etc. The situation had to be experienced to be appreciated properly.

French Deny German Claim

WOULD USE CONVICTS.

German Magistrate Urges That 100,000 be Mobilized for War Work.

Germany's convicts will be mobilized for the defence of the Fatherland if the Kaiser's Government follows the advice contained in many articles recently printed in the German press discussing the advisability of the employment in the military service of men who have served, or are serving, terms in prison. The London press quotes a Kiel Magistrate named Bovensiepen as asking, in the Deutsche Tageszeitung, why "while the flower of the people, the leading forces of intellectual and economic life, are shedding their precious, noble blood on the battlefields, the convicts are sitting safe behind lock and key, and those who have done penal servitude or otherwise lost their civil rights are going about their business earning large salaries in these favourable times and even making large fortunes?"

Herr Bovensiepen also considers that there are many patriotic convicts "filled with shame and suffering great mental torture because they cannot risk their lives for their Fatherland."

According to Professor von Liszt of the University of Berlin there are 100,000 German convicts available. Herr Bovensiepen considers that it would be impossible to treat the convicts as ordinary recruits and also that it would be inadvisable that, as many persons propose, they should be employed in labour battalions for particularly dangerous work. He comes to the conclusion that the best plan would be to form them into special labour columns, and to employ them either behind the front or in munition factories, under strict control and without freedom to leave the places where they work.

The credit for this proposal is said to belong to a Hamburg pastor named Seyfarth.

VERDUN VICTORY OFFSETS THE ROUMANIAN LOSSES

London Press Says the French Triumph Will Have Big Effect on Morale of Opposing Armies—The Year's Record of Defeat.

A VERY APT REPLY

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The papers comment with enthusiasm on the French victory at Verdun, and pay the heartiest tributes to French leadership, valour and skill. The opportunity is taken to re-discuss the peace offer in the light of this blow inflicted on the Germans, which is regarded as demonstrating that the latter's morale is seriously undermined. It is also claimed that the battle puts the actual position as Central powers and the allies in a truer perspective than that afforded by the Teutonic success in Roumania. The Telegraph says: "It comes at the right moment as a pledge and earnest of allied success. We can imagine no more eloquent answer to Chancellor von Hollweg."

The Post, recalling German claims to victory in the war, says that France has given a most damning refutation at Verdun and, referring to the peace offer, asserts that all the allies are resolved not to accept, but dictate terms of peace.

Effect on Morale.

The News says: "The value of the victory at Verdun is not to be measured by the prisoners and guns taken or the ground conquered. Its real significance lies in the effect it must have in the morale of both sides. There is no doubt that on both sides the campaign in Roumania has exercised an influence quite disproportionate to its importance. The serious threat to Germany, both east and west, is in no way reduced by her Roumanian adventure. If the victory at Verdun reminds both sides of that it will not have been won in vain. It is an additional argument, as far as the allies are concerned, not for an arrogant refusal even to consider the question of peace, but for a cautious willingness to listen to terms which the sobering influence of the war is inducing Germany to offer."

Year's Record of Defeat.

The Chronicle also refers to Roumania and says that the "brilliant victory at Verdun comes at an opportune moment and should serve to remind neutral and allied opinion alike that in spite of their single victorious campaign in Roumania the record of 1916 has been a record not victory, but defeat for the central powers." It concludes that the Germans are not now the stronger, but the weaker side.

The Times says that Verdun as one very apt reply to all Germany's vaunts and the attitude of Russia is another. It argues that there is a serious undermining of the morale of the German army and an acute dearth of food in the country. These are among the reasons, it contends, for the issuing of the peace offer, which it calls "a sign of weakness," and which, it claims, would not have been put forward had not Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg felt that "Germany's strength was ebbing fast."

UNITED STATES RELATIONS WITH TURKEY ARE JARRED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—American relations with Turkey are so unsettled it became known that the State Department does not plan to take any action towards the confirmation of Fuad Bey, named by Turkey as ambassador, until that country gives consideration to American representations and interests.

Refusal of the Turks to allow nearly 200 Americans and naturalized Americans to leave Turkey at Jaffa, the conduct of the Turkish authorities in their treatment of the Syrians and Armenians and the abrupt termination of the capitulations or extra territorial agreements, has created a situation which is postponing action by the Department in the confirmation of the new Ambassador. Diplomatic exchanges have brought promises of relief, which have, in almost every case, turned out to be of no effect because of the helplessness of the foreign office before the military element.

FRENCH WAR BILL $14,520,000,000 ENGLAND'S OUTLAY $4,000,000,000

PARIS, Dec. 19.—Raoul Peret, former Minister of Commerce, discussing in the Chamber of Deputies, in behalf of the Appropriations Committee, the budget for the first three months of 1917, pointed out that France would have incurred expenditures to the amount of 72,600,000,000 francs ($14,520,000,000) between the opening of hostilities and the end of March next, while Great Britain in the same period would have made an outlay of 20,000,000,000 francs.

This statement drew exclamations from the Deputies to the effect that "Great Britain is thus proved to have collaborated cordially and completely."

The resources M. Peret puts against the expenditure made and authorized amount approximately to 63,700,000,000 francs, as follows: 10,200,000,000, tax receipts; 38,700,000,000, short and long term bonds of France; 5,000,000,000, loans from England and the United States; 9,000,000,000, advanced by the Bank of France; 200,000,000, advanced by the Bank of Algeria. This leaves an apparent deficit of 8,900,000,000 francs.

M. Peret said that this did not represent the actual expenditures, but the authorized outlay, and that of the appropriations for 1914 included in the total 700,000,000 francs was annulled. He added that the cancellations for 1915 would be proportionately large, and before the total remaining net amount was due several months would elapse.

"France has paid when she every debt incurred," he continued. "In spite of the apparent discrepancy between the appropriations and the receipts we need have no anxiety for the future."

The war loans have added 2,500,000,000 francs, in round numbers, to the old interest charge of 1,350,000,000 totaling 3,800,000,000, said M. Peret. The new taxes now under discussion will realize 650,000,000 francs annually, which, with 150,000,000 from the increased tax on alcohol and 500,000,000 from the special tax on war profits, will produce at an early date more than half the interest charge, and this does not include the proposed personal contributions and the tax on various places of amusement.

"We shall be obliged to go further, and deeper in the direction of taxing the riches in hands that have ceased to produce," said M. Peret.

Refuting the statement that while France had voted 800,000,000 francs for national defence in 1914, Germany had not increased her expenditures for armament, the former Minister pointed out that from 1910 to 1914 the German Empire had added 3,500,000,000 francs to the public debt.

"And events have proved," he asserted, "that the sum destined for the manufacturing of war material corresponded to the aggressive intention of the Central Empires."

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

The secretary nodded.

"The time, dear boy, is at hand when one side or the other must be turned down."

"What has happened?" The younger man's voice was tinged with alarm. This child of Destiny might be immune from fear, but those who stood near his person could not always accept without question the talisman of his limitless self-faith. Malone's might was theoretically invincible. Hamilton recognised the undertone of apprehension with a laugh of frank amusement; a laugh which brought to his eyes their most winning sparkle.

"The august over-lord of all the robber barons regards our reign as tributary to his own. He fancies that our loyal respect is thinly spread. We make too little obeisance. Too rarely we 'crook the pregnant hinges of the knee.' Therefore we must be crushed—if possible."

"You mean—"

"I mean that it is in the mind of this generalissimo, to call me before his staff and 'break' me in full view of his halted ranks."

The cheerful grin on the face of his prospective victim was so infectious and reassuring that his secretary laughed with revitalised confidence.

"But how did you learn of this conspiracy, sir?" he demanded.

"The throne which lacks its cabinet noir, Carl, is a very precarious one to sit upon." The "Great Bear" spoke casually. "Our secret service is fairly satisfactory. Also, we have a brain which at times, prognosticates."

"There have been new developments then?"

Hamilton Burton shrugged his shoulders.

"The stockholders' meeting of Coal and Ore is not far distant. After it comes the annual election of officers. I fancy Malone may know of a man who might grace the directorate with a more deferential humility than I show—when he speaks Jove-like from the head of the table."

"To be ousted from that board would mean to wear the brand of defeat."

"If Mr. Malone wants to put some one else in my place he can do it—the chair I occupy faces the window. Sometimes the glare hurts my eyes."

Carl Bristoll thought he knew his chief. Such docile acceptance of reduction to the ranks astounded him and his blank amazement stamped itself on his face. When the elder man had enjoyed it for the space of a long silence he rose suddenly and his voice rang out like a command for a bayonet charge.

"Yes, Malone can have my chair: I mean to take his—at the head of the table."

The secretary started violently. He could never quite accustom himself to the dauntless fashion with which his chief essayed the impossible—and accomplished it. Hamilton Burton's fist came down savagely on the mahogany. The smiling features of a moment ago had vanished and Bristoll was looking up into eyes that rained immeasurable wrath.

"They hate me, because they fear me!" The voice was not loud, but it was terrific in its intensity of anger. "By the Almighty God in heaven, I mean to give them cause to hate me. I mean to crush them to a pulp, until nothing remains, except the stench of their unmourned memory!"

Once more the timbre changed and with startling abruptness became quietly declarative.

"This morning I received a confidential note from Carton."

"The secretary of Coal and Ore?"

"The same. I put him where he is—he's a valuable man—and incidentally a member of my secret service. Malone is calling in all the proxies he can control: he and his myrmidons. He has not taken me into his confidence. How would you construe that?"

"As you do. He means to oust you."

Burton nodded, then a naive smile crinkled in his eyes. "What he is beginning to do." I went to work on ten minutes after he left my office last spring. Many transactions, some of them of large proportions, which you did not understand, have since been completed in preparation for this moment. On the floor of the Exchange my brokers have been ostentatiously idle, but others, not known to act for me, have been buying Coal and Ore. They have pretty well gathered in the floating supply."

"Hasn't that been reported to Malone?"

The financier shook his head. "Trading of that character is difficult to trace and is usually presumed to be markinal trading. To disarm possible suspicion my recognized brokers have sold large blocks of Coal and Ore to my unrecognized brokers. I seem to have been unloading—while I was doing the reverse. When the psychological moment comes, there will be a surprise—and a raid upon the control."

"Then you are ready for the issue."

"No, not quite." Burton rose, and took a turn or two across the floor. He stopped before a small painting, and spoke irrelevantly. "I always liked Corot. The man could paint, Carl. He understood values."

After this art criticism he returned to the desk and sat down again. "No; I'm not ready yet. I've done all that I could do by quiet preparation. The issue now narrows to the hair balance which makes all fights crucial—and interesting. There's a member of the state senate who holds a block that I need, and there are two banks in town that hold others. When I have that stock I shall be master of the situation—and of Consolidated—and Malone must take his orders from me."

"And if you fail to get it?"

"I would still be plowing rocks and milking cows, Carl, if I acknowledged the possibility of failing in what I resolve on."

"Yet they may refuse to sell."

Hamilton Burton smiled. "That would be regrettable," he said, and his voice was full of sympathetic softness. "Because in that event an elderly and respected member of the senate will have to reside for a time at Sing Sing and a couple of widely trusted banks will go to the wall."

CHAPTER XIV

From the Plaza upward, the blank stare of the avenue was awakening into renewed signs of habitation. Burglar proof doors had come down and boarded windows had yielded to curtained sashes. Already in the park the trees were turning. Banners of crimson, yellow and burgundy flaunted where the foliage had been sunburned and heat-corroded. The walks and Mall had for scorching weeks been a breathing refuge, and the sheep pasture a sleeping place, for short-sleeved men who panted like dogs. Haggard women and sunken cheeked children—all heat-fagged and exhausted—had held possession, but now the bridle path echoed to hoof-beats, and smartly togged equestrians galloped there, while along the driveways droned a purr of motors.

The sun which had assaulted, blighted and killed, now caressed a revived city, for autumn had come with her clarifying elixirs and her fever-cooling frosts.

Shop windows freshly decked, tempted the passer-by with foretastes of the season's styles in gowns and hats and furs. All was color and sparkle and activity. Soft tones woke at sunset on old and seasoned walls. Gilt street signs blazed and shaft like buildings stood out in splintered stripe of sudden hues against skies that were unsullied turquoise.

In the veins of Hamilton Burton as he motored up town, a heady exhilaration mounted like wine. As his car bowled up the avenue he watched the human moving, and the drive seemed like a progress through Bagdad. He was finding it all the city of his dreams.

"—a city blazoned like a missal book.
Black with oaken gables, carven and cancrolled.
Every street a colored page: every sign a hieroglyph.
Dusky with enchantments: a city paved with gold."

Then as he entered his own house he remembered. To-night he must go to the opera and the prospect bored him. To Paul, of course, it was as wine to the drunkard, but to Hamilton it meant a tedious evening. It was in a way a duty and one of his few concessions to society's requirements. Had it not been written of another great figure, "the Emperor sat in his box that night?" He would leave early and later in the evening he would console himself with a matter of greater importance.

Yet when he arrived at the Metropolitan he forgot to be bored—until the overture ended, and Music was enthroned in the place of Fashion.

Here at the opera each moment, so long as the house-lights blazed brought its own tribute of flattery to the Titan of the Street. The men and women from whom these tributes came were the men and women whom the world envied, and cursed—and worshiped. Hamilton Burton realized, as he passed easily from box to box, chatting with this multi-millionaire and that jewelled lady, that no single figure was more often signalled out by pointing and envious fingers than his own. When he handed Mary out of her limousine the street policeman had made the passage clear before him. Ushers had bowtowed and the heads of fashionable women had nodded and smiled. His way had been a march of and myrrh. His inner emotions were all like the sniffing of frankincense and myrrh. His inner emotions were those of a great tiger, purring like a house cat.

That at his back, when he had passed on, these immaculately clad gentlemen uttered derogatory oaths only flattered him further; their hate, too, was a tribute to his power.

He came into Society's world as a monarch walks among the proletariat, to receive homage and return to places where a monarch has better things to do.

But at last the overture ended and the curtain rose. The opera had begun.

For Paul the evening was just beginning, but for Hamilton it was done. He stifled a yawn and rose from his seat, effecting his escape unobserved from the box. From that point on his mind shook off the lethargy of the incensed atmosphere and became dynamic. He looked at his watch and found that his next appointment gave him an hour's leisure.

To his chauffeur he said, "Drive me to my mother's house."

Hannah Burton would be the only member of the household at home and with her her nephew would spend this leisure hour. He knew she would be there because she was very rarely elsewhere. The man who flashed the searchlight of his thought into so many places at such broad angles smiled as he thought of his Aunt Hannah, but it was a tender smile. He had transplanted and remodeled his family—but Aunt Hannah he had been powerless to alter.

The room where she received him was an anomalous hermitage, for in spite of the generous comfort it reflected, there broke out here and there jarring notes from many survivals of the old order; things from which she refused to be parted. Upon a mantel over which hung a Gobelin tapestry stood a tin alarm clock. It was an old companion which had once shrilly announced that it was time to drag her rheumatic bones from the bed, and take up her daily round of dusting and sweeping. Among carefully chosen paintings a screaming chromo issued by the Middle Fork general store proclaimed the superior quality of its staple and fancy groceries, hardware, queensware and feed.

The old lady herself, though silk gowned, wore her white hair drawn severely back over parchment temples, as though repudiating the pomps and the vanities of this wicked world.

It was Ham's time honored custom to tease his aunt, and while she snorted and sniffed she enjoyed it, for whatever she thought of a Babylonian life she secretly worshiped this brilliant young nephew who so well suited its stress and turmoil.

"Were you down stairs at dinner to-night, flirting with the grand dukes and the big-wigs?" he demanded as he kissed her pale cheek.

"As if you did not know," she austerely rebuked, "that when company comes I always have supper right here in my own room."

It would have been a surrender of principle for Hannah Burton to call "company" guests, or the evening meal "dinner."

"There were some very smart people downstairs, I'm told," the man heckled with twinkling eyes. "Divorcees in numbers and affinities galore."

The old lady shuddered.

"Ham" she said suddenly with a run on in that ungodly fashion. "I'm sure that it is no laughing matter. I pray for you day and night, but when a body's blinded by wealth, and imagining vain things they are in mortal danger."

Her nephew's face softened. "As long as you are praying for me, Aunt Hannah," he assured her, "I still have a fighting chance."

"Ham," she said suddenly with a shadow of deep anxiety in her eyes, "ain't your father playing cards more than is good for him? I've worried considerable about that here of late. He used to read his scriptures regular. Now he don't do it. Instead he gambles."

(To be continued.)

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Episode In the Smart Set

How a Divorced Couple Met and Mingled.

By F. A. MITCHEL

If there is anything that especially marks the smart set of New York or London it is the mixing of families by divorce. Indeed, within either of these charmed circles to have been divorced is quite a feather in one's social cap.

One day Mr. Richard Pulsifer, a gentleman whose clothes were cut in the latest London fashion, turned off of Fifth avenue, New York, and entered a restaurant frequented by the creme de la creme of society. Handing his hat and cane to the attendant of the coat room, he entered the dining room and was shown a table, at which, having seated himself, he ordered a lunch con.

At a table near him sat a lady the brim of whose hat encircling her head presented a fine representation of the planet Saturn. The rest of her costume was in keeping and especially adapted for the noon hour. She was about to raise a little neck clam to her lips on the prongs of a tiny fork when the motion was arrested by her eyes having lighted on the gentleman at the neighboring table. At the same moment, while dipping a radish in salt, the gentleman espied the lady.

These two had been married five years before, when Mr. Pulsifer was twenty-three and the lady nineteen. Two years later they were divorced. On the day the decree was granted the ex-wife married Everett Quimby. Pulsifer went abroad and spent the most of his time hobnobbing with the smart set of London.

It may seem singular that these two should thus meet on the first day after Pulsifer's return to America, and yet it is not so strange after all. Both needed refreshments, and there was but one place in the city worthy of their patronage. Under the circumstances their meeting was quite natural.

Mrs. Quimby on seeing her former husband changed color, lowered her fork, and to conceal her embarrassment raised a glass of wine to her lips, sipped the wine, set down the glass and drew a napkin across her mouth. Mr. Pulsifer on seeing his former wife left the radish on the table, drew back slightly, then resorted to the same means of relieving his emotions as his former wife, raising his wine glass to his lips.

Mrs. Quimby's embarrassment did not compel her to leave the restaurant. That she should thus be confronted by the man she had divorced was certainly a contretemps. Whether it was painful or pleasing, she alone knew. As for Mr. Pulsifer, his countenance as he continued to cast glances at Mrs. Quimby indicated admiration. Each took care that their eyes should not meet, for they had not made up their minds what course to adopt with reference to a recognition or ignoring each other. Finally Mr. Pulsifer decided the question by directing the waiter to fill a glass from his bottle—the wine was champagne—for Mrs. Quimby.

The lady, though she kept her eyes before her, saw enough of this act to understand it, especially when the waiter set a glass near her on the table and, filling it, said:

"Mr. Pulsifer's compliments."

Mrs. Quimby looked at the wine, then turned her head at her former husband, a faint smile stealing over her pretty lips.

These two had both been brought up—as are persons usually in a society where alliances were formed to enhance estates—to consider that they must marry, first in their own set, and in the second, money. The match had been made principally on the latter consideration. Pulsifer's estate was worth three millions, and the lady's more than equaled it. Both were fond of what in America is called flirting—there is no corresponding word in any other language—and since they were marrying merely to unite two fortunes there was no reason why after marriage they should not indulge in such a pastime. At any rate, that is the way they looked at it.

Mrs. Pulsifer had not objected to her husband's attentions to other women, nor had he objected to her receiving the attentions of other men until he took up with a bitter enemy of hers, when there was trouble at once. Mrs. Pulsifer did not act through jealousy, for she was not in love with her husband, and there was no marriage between them except a legal union. But she was scandalized that her enemy should have the name of taking from her the attentions of any man whatever. The consequence was a divorce between Mr. and Mrs. Pulsifer. Not having been really married, they had no children, and there was nothing harrowing to any one in their separation.

Both had improved during the interval that they had been apart and since they had seen each other. Pulsifer had developed both mentally and physically. Though he had been for several years a London swell, he had been interested in intellectual pursuits, and intellect very soon gives cast to one's countenance. His ex-wife's beauty had grown from a maidenly excellence to that of a mature woman.

Such were the conditions between Mr. Pulsifer and Mrs. Quimby when fate brought them together again in the luxurious dining room of the restaurant patronized by the smart set of New York. Mr. Pulsifer wondered why he had not before been drawn to the woman who had been his wife, and Mrs. Quimby, whose second marriage had been with a social leader possessing a brain incapable of enabling him to get on anywhere except among persons whose intellectual food was small talk, was suddenly brought to the realization that she had given up a man for a nonentity.

All this is preliminary to a statement that an incipient flirtation had begun between two persons who had been united in legal wedlock for reasons of convenience, divorced and met again. Considering the fact that is the set to which they both belonged it was considered more interesting for persons, when one or both were married to some one else, to enter upon an affair of the heart together, there was a zest in this one, and their having once been united in the bonds of indifference made it quite unique.

Mr. Pulsifer, in order to lessen the distance between them, since it rendered low spoken words inaudible, arose from his seat and took one at Mrs. Quimby's table, directing his waiter to serve him there.

"Have you been long in the city?" asked the lady.

"I arrived yesterday from London."

"I understand that there has been quite a scandal recently in London society."

"You refer to the separation of the Duke and Duchess of Morningglory?"

"Yes."

"The duke was very unwise. Had he confined his attentions to ladies of his own set there would have been no trouble. The duchess could not endure his promiscuous flirtations."

This was treading on dangerous ground. Mrs. Quimby when Mrs. Pulsifer would not have objected to Mr. Pulsifer's attentions to the woman who had occasioned the divorce had there been no enmity between the two women. Mr. Pulsifer saw a slight expression of irritation in Mrs. Quimby's eyes. He turned the subject.

By this time the dining room had filled with luncheon, among whom were a number of friends and acquaintances of Mr. Pulsifer and Mrs. Quimby. Pulsifer being a recent stranger to New York, several persons welcomed him as they passed him. All showed interest in seeing these two persons together, and many were the covert remarks made on the subject.

"Do you expect Quimby?" asked Mr. Pulsifer.

"He said he would be here at 1," was the uninterested reply. "But he has probably been detained at the club. He goes there every morning at 11 and discusses the latest social freak and other similar matters all day. He had just seen this Morningglory scandal when he left the house and has probably been detained discussing it with some of his chums."

"Shall I—er—take a seat at another table before he comes and rejoin you later?"

"Not at all."

Mrs. Quimby was not only pleased at Mr. Pulsifer's company, but this lunching together in public, so many of the society swells being present, was quite to her taste. It would give her more eclat than the taking of a prize recently won by her poodle at a dog show.

Suddenly the gaze of the couple's acquaintances were converged to the door. A fat little man with a bald head stood at the opening sweeping the room with his eyes. It was Algy Quimby. He was looking for his wife. Great interest was manifested to see what he would do when he discovered her at the same table with her former husband. Finally Quimby spotted the couple. But he was not staggered. Marching up to the table, he saluted Mr. Pulsifer with a show of cordiality, then, bowing ceremoniously to his wife, said:

"Pardon me for being late, dear."

"Don't mention it."

And Mr. Quimby, turning away from the couple for other company, espied a vacant seat at a table at which friends of his were seated and joined them. A few minutes later Mr. Pulsifer and Mrs. Quimby, having finished their luncheon, arose from the table. Mr. Pulsifer handed a ten dollar tip to each of the waiters who had attended them, and the couple left the dining room, Mrs. Quimby looking up coketishly at her companion, observed, and knowing that she was observed, by numerous interested persons. On reaching the sidewalk they entered Mrs. Quimby's limousine and were driven northward in the direction of the park.

This was Mrs. Quimby's announcement to New York society that in all probability she would throw off the shackles that bound her to her present husband, and after a visit to a resort where a divorce was easily obtained she would return to her former one.

It is the uncertain that interests people. When a fact is publicly announced it loses all charm. For this reason Mrs. Quimby's acceptance of Mr. Pulsifer's attentions during the following months and her never being seen out with Quimby did not occasion a ripple in the social world, it being understood that it was an accomplished fact. And it was. Long before Mrs. Quimby got her decree separating her from Quimby and remarried Pulsifer society had lost all interest in it. Mr. and Mrs. Pulsifer were united in London.

On the whole, the period of separation between Mr. and Mrs. Pulsifer had not been an agreeable one to either. Society was surprised at Mrs. Pulsifer throwing over an attractive man for an inferior one and was not surprised at her turning again to Pulsifer. Some say that she made both breaks to gain that which is to a divorce brings to a woman in high life. Be this as it may, she seemed well satisfied with the man to whom she had been twice married, and there is no especial probability of her divorcing him again.

LEATHER LIMITED; RUBBER SUPPLY STEADY

Comparison of Supply Makes Answer to Footwear Problem Simple for Economical Persons. Wear Rubbers and Overshoes

There is a limit to the shoe leather that a cow can provide, but the world's production of rubber to-day is almost level as far as the requirements of the rubber-using part of the world is concerned, and that is the average person's answer to, at least, one part of the high-cost-of-living problem.

The thrifty man or woman will wear rubber this winter. Rubbers and overshoes will be worn for two reasons—first, because they are a means of protecting the health, and, second, because rubbers solve the question of wear and tear on the leather, whose cost has increased because the cow can provide only so much.

A cow hide costs almost as much now as a whole cow did before the war. Rubber costs just half as much as it did before the war. The British Government gave us cheap rubber—why not be patriotic, and at the same time economical and wear rubbers? 26

Knocks Obstinate Coughs in a Hurry

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

ENGLAND FUR TRADE CENTRE

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The arrival in London of $10,000,000 worth of furs from Russia has served to call attention to the fact that the great fur trade of the world has shifted, during the war from Germany to England.

It is also revealed that furs from Russia are brought to London via Vladivostock, the Pacific and Canada, and from London large quantities are shipped across the Atlantic again for sale in the United States.

The present shipment of furs comprises the first to come from the great Nijni-Novgorod fair, which was held from July 29 to Sept. 10. They consist of red fox, squirrel, white hare, and ermine skins. They came in 10,000 canvas bags. Those containing the more expensive furs were sealed.

Expert Explains Changes.

A well-known expert on furs, himself a great importer, explained the changes that have come in the fur trade. He said:

"Russian skins which came through to this country in pre-war days would come via Archangel, and get here about the end of August, but with a possibility of there being delay the goods have this year come via Vladivostok, Japan, and the Pacific.

"Before the war 75 per cent. of the furs went to Germany, where they, where it will be dressed and dyed best to England and America. This year practically the whole of the Nijni-Novgorod sale has come to London, where it will be dressed and dyed before a large portion of it is sent to America and France.

"Strange though it may seem, the British exports of skins to America exceed our imports from the United States, so that the fur business is a good one for Great Britain just now, when we want to maintain the rate of exchange.

Demand Exceeds Supply.

"The demand for skins at Nijni-Novgorod this year was much greater than the supply, which was below the average owing to the scarcity of trappers, who have been called to the war.

"There is such an enormous demand for ermine and white furs, especially in America, that these are certain to rise in price, and I should not be surprised if they became more expensive than they have ever been."

He added that while the dyeing of furs has greatly improved in this country, we had not yet reached the standard obtained by the Germans before the war.

Stomach Was Very Bad
Much Dizziness and Pain

The Liver Got Out of Order and the Whole System Was Poisoned

When the course of the food through the alimentary canal is impeded by sluggish action of the liver or bowels the food remains undigested and as a result it ferments.

This gives rise to poisonous gases which crowd about the heart, and cause dizziness and choking sensations as well as irregular action of the heart.

The liver struggles to remove the poisons from the blood, becomes enlarged, and finally fails, allowing the poisons to pass on to every part of the human system. Complications arise, and there is Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and appendicitis.

The earlier derangements of the digestive system are such as are described by this letter from Mr. Rothen. He also points the way to cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Louis Rochon, R. R. No. 11, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For about seven months my stomach was very bad. I was troubled with dizziness, and had gas on the stomach and awful pains in the right side. The liver seemed to be out of order so I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This treatment seemed to be just exactly what I needed and before the first box was all used I was cured, and feeling as well as ever. I also used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when feeling weak and suffering from nervous headache, and was soon restored to good health. I am proud of Dr. Chase's medicines, and recommend them above any doctor's medicines."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, twenty-five cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

TO MAKE MARNE BATTLE-FIELD A SACRED FOREST

VERDUN, Nov. 19.—With the close of the war the entire line of trenches in France, extending from Alsace to the Belgium border, may be converted into a sort of national Sacred Forest, as a permanent tribute to the memory of the French 'poilus', who died there defending their national soil.

A proposal to this effect has just been prepared by the General Council of the Department of the Meuse and will soon be admitted to the French Government. The plan is to buy the battleground from the farmers. Should this plan be finally accepted future generations, not only of France, but of the entire world, would always have the opportunity of visiting the line of trenches, over 600 kilometers in length, on which the French threw back the tide of German invasion at the battle of the Marne and which till the end of the war will, always remain the basis of France's military effort to rid her soil entirely of the enemy.

The immediate land through which those long lines of trenches run, together with the battlefields of the Somme, of Artois and of Champagne will, it is believed, never again be rendered cultivable. Aside from the deep trenches the ground has been so pitted with shell holes to a depth varying from a few to fifteen feet, and all the upper strata of soil on which fertility depends so completely wiped out, that little if any use could ever be made of the ground for agricultural purposes for years to come.

Has No Intention Of Mediating Yet

POPE DOESN'T THINK HE COULD HASTEN PEACE AT PRESENT—ITALIAN OPINION.

ROME, Dec. 19.—Pope Benedict has no intention of attempting to mediate among the belligerents at present, according to a statement issued by the Vatican. The statement says that neither the Pope nor the Holy See have made or wish to make any comment regarding Germany's peace proposals and that therefore any comments attributed to them are absolutely false. The Pope naturally has an ardent desire for peace, but that he does not believe that any intervention at the present moment would hasten its conclusion.

The net result of several resolutions introduced in the chamber of deputies regarding the German peace offer and a prolonged discussion among the senators and deputies was the decision by the legislators unless in accordance with national aspirations and the rights of peoples based on the principle of nationality. If such a peace is impossible to obtain diplomatically, it was declared it must be obtained by victory of arms.

Poor Seed Will Handicap Farmers in Coming Year

EXPERTS SAY EXTREMELY FAVORABLE WEATHER NEEDED IN 1917.

"An extremely favourable season will be needed during 1917 to produce even an average crop, but farmers are hopeful that some of the grain crops will turn out well. In almost every case however, they are handicapped by the poor quality of the seed.

Steady rain in the spring of 1916 followed by several weeks of hot weather in the summer, resulted in poor crops of almost every kind for this year. There was not much grain to be spared for market purposes, and that retained for seed purposes was, in most cases of poor quality.

No conjectures as to berry or root crops are being made yet, but if the season is such as to produce favourable grain crops these will also turn out well, agricultural experts state.

Walter Blood Out On Suspended Sentence

COBOURG, Dec. 19.—In view of the strong recommendation to mercy and a petition from 250 leading citizens of Port Hope, Chief Justice Falconbridge Saturday allowed Walter Blood of Port Hope, convicted of making seditious statements last June, to go on suspended sentence. Sir Glenholme added, however, that persons found making seditious statements need not expect consideration in his court. Blood was brought into court as a sequel of words he used in an angry row at Port Hope last June. As a charge of sedition can only be heard in the High Court, Blood had to wait until the Criminal Assizes for his trial.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day is in sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next time you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hamberry, Ogden Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

JAPS TO HOLD KIAO-CHOU

It's Return to Germany Will Never be Agreed to.

TOKIO, Dec. 19.—The German peace proposals probably will be delivered to the Japanese Government today.

Commenting on the proposals, the newspapers declare that Japan will never agree to surrender Kiao Chou. In general they express the opinion that peace projects as it has been reported in the news despatches, is a tactful procedure and will be unacceptable to the entente because it is tantamount to abandonment of the object for which the entente powers have waged war.

OUTRAGES ON LAND AND SEA CANNOT BE LIQUIDATED BY FEW PIOUS PHRASES

"Britain and Her Allies Do Not Propose to Enter Into Peace Negotiations Without a Knowledge of Germany's Proposals" Declares Premier Lloyd George in His Eagerly-Looked-For Speech---"We Do Not Propose to Put Our Heads Into a Noose With the Rope's End in Germany's Hands" is Emphatic Announcement of Premier.

GERMANY'S LOSSES ON SOMME 690,000

LONDON, December 19.—Britain and her allies do not propose to enter into peace negotiations with a knowledge of Germany's proposals. This was the decision announced in the House of Commons this afternoon by Premier David Lloyd George.

"Britain has endorsed every word of Russia's and France's answer," the Premier declared, amid cheering. Not since the tense days when England was preparing to wage war back in 1914, has there been such a crowd at Parliament as there was to-day.

"Without reparation, peace is impossible," Lloyd George declared.

"All the outrages on land and on sea cannot be liquidated by a few pious phrases about humanity," he continued. The Premier compared Germany's peace proposals to a noose, wherein Britain and her allies were asked to put their heads, while Germany held the loose end of the rope.

In opening his epoch-making address, the British Prime Minister alluded to the terrible responsibility which he felt as chief advisor to the Crown in the most gigantic war in the history of the world. He spoke carefully, in measured terms, and was accorded the most intense interest by his vast audience.

"The answer to Germany's note is that each of our allies have independently arrived at the same identical conclusion. And on behalf of this Government I can give clear and definite support to their statement. The Allies insist that the only end of war must be a guarantee against Prussian militarism disturbing the peace of Europe. The German Chancellor's speech and note afford small hope for honourable or lasting settlement. Phrases about self-defence are meant to delude the German nation. Great Britain never wished to check German development."

The British Premier announced that a formal note responding in this way to the German Peace proposals, would in a few days be completed and given to the American Embassy for transmission to Berlin. "We have done our best to take certain that disasters similar to that in Roumania will not occur," the British Prime Minister asserted. "This is why we have taken such strong action with Greece. The Government has decided to recognize the agents of former Premier Venizelos.

"The Roumanian blunder was unfortunate. But at its worst it will only serve to prolong the war.

"It is cruel folly," the Prime Minister continued, "if swashbuckling through the streets of Europe is not dealt with as an offense against the law of nations. We will wait until the terms and guarantees are better than those which Germany has lightly broken. I would rather trust an unbroken army than broken faith."

LONDON, December 19.—"We do not propose to put our heads into a noose, with the rope's end in Germany's hands," declared Premier Lloyd George in the Commons this afternoon in one of the striking opening statements of his long expected speech. Lloyd George quoted the words of Abraham Lincoln: "The war will end when its object has been attained under God: it will never end until we achieve the object.'

"The Imperial German Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg did not use a single phrase indicating he was prepared to accept the only terms upon which peace is possible,' Lloyd George declared.

From his discussion of Germany's peace offer, the Prime Minister launched into a description of the "reconstruction of the Government" by which he became Prime Minister. He did not mix words in referring to Britain's lack of concerted effort and proper energy in conducting the war under the old cabinet.

"Twenty-three members, as in the old cabinet, were too many," he explained. "The Allies suffered two and a half years' disaster from tardiness and indecision," he said.

"There must be some means devised," the Prime Minister asserted, "whereby the Allies can arrive at quicker decisions and promptly carry them out. The policy of a common front must become a reality." The new national service department, the Premier explained, will schedule all industries and list all labour.

The Premier declared the new ministry had decided to take over complete control of all shipping as they now have control of all railways.

An Imperial Council with British dominions on the war, was announced as planned by Premier Lloyd George in the Commons this afternoon.

The Minister of Shipping in the Cabinet, Sir Joseph Patton MacClay, will consider the speedy construction of more ships to replace the shortage occasioned b ythe war, Lloyd George asserted.

The Premier also announced the appointment of Lieut.-Col. Sir Neville Chamberlain as director of universal national service.

German Losses on the Somme 690,000

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 19.—The German losses along the Somme have amounted to 690,000 men, according to the French estimates announced in the House of Commons this afternoon by Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law.

APPEAL TO HELP TO ASSIST IN THE XMAS ENTERTAINMENT

People of Peterboro' Asked to Contribute Towards Cost of Entertaining Wives and Families of Peterboro' Soldiers Who Are on Active Service

AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

The following appeal for funds to supplement the subscription of Capt. Burnham in order to provide a suitable Christmas entertainment for the families of Peterborough men on active service is published on behalf of the City Council:

Capt. Burnham generously forwarded to Mayor Duffus a cheque for $50 to be expended in some shape for the entertainment of the families of the men on service. Individually the subscription was a considerable one. Practically it was not large enough to do what seemed seemly and judicious. Hence, in all reason the cheque should be supplemented by other cheques. Not necessarily for considerable amounts but in the aggregate enough to do the thing in such a way that we all will feel that our end is being held up respectably.

The Recreation Committee of the council fell heir to the $50 and were told to go on and expend the money to advantage. Now let us reason together in this matter. $50 divided up among nealy 700 families would be about seven cents each. Not a palatial sum, is it? Price of a small loaf of bread. So, manifestedly we must provide something to hear instead of something to eat. That is conclusive. So let us hear what we are likely to hear.

Several propositions were canvassed. One to put on a volunteer programme at the Armouries, and spend the fifty in fitting up the big hall. Avoidable, but not really comfortable seating for the kiddies, of which there are many. Finally a deal was made with the Opera House to put on, Christmas afternoon, from 3.30 to 5.00 a set of seven reels of magnificent pictures, including a few funny scenes for the delectation of the children. Orchestra, ushers, and a full programme. The whole thing really first-class as it should be at any complimentary affair for the people concerned.

To stand off the remark, that being in the afternoon, and that small children would have to be left at home the committee has arranged with the

STRAND THEATRE

Little Mary Miles Minter, the youngest star in the world, who played the stellar role in the stage production of "The Littlest Rebel" for three sensational seasons, will be seen on the screen here at the Strand theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, December 20th and 21st in "Barbara Frietchie," the big five part feature picture just produced by popular Plays and Players for release on the regular Metro programme. Santa Claus Should Not Overlook Children's Shelter

Few Christmas appeals are worthy of as large a share of public consideration as that which concerns the inmates of the Children's Shelter. At present there are nine children in the Shelter with prospects of a few additions this side of Christmas. Whether or not these children spend Christmas in keeping with the majority of more fortunate children, depends largely on the liberality of the citizens of Peterborough. There is no doubt that the children will be well fed and a few extras provided, but the responsibility of giving the children a real Christmas augmented by gifts of toys, etc., rests with the public who in the past has responded nobly to this worthy appeal.

Anybody wishing to donate anything to this cause are at liberty to do so. Donations, whether they be in the form of money, or supplies, may be left at the Shelter, or at the Examiner Office. If word is left at either of these places, goods will be called for. It is only a few short days until Christmas, and the need is urgent.

93rd BATTALION BAND HAS ARRIVED SAFELY IN CANADA

Musicians Reached Halifax Last Night and Will Be Home in a Few Days--247th Battalion Take on Four Recruits Including Two From Coe Hill---Promotions in the Local Battalion---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Citizens of Peterborough will be glad to hear that the band of the 93rd Battalion, which is to be attached to the 247th Battalion for recruiting purposes, has arrived safely in Canada. Telegrams received by relatives of the bandsmen this morning stated that the band has reached Halifax, sailing from England on December 8th on the steamer Northland. Unless the bandsmen have to be examined by a board at Quebec they should be home by the end of the week.

Mrs. E. J. Downey, 158 Edinburg street of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' club has received the following letters:

France, Nov. 23, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Downey,—Your parcel of socks and gum received a few days ago and on behalf of the boys I take great pleasure in thanking you for your kindness in remembering us.

We are now in a sector of the front where the work is very vigorous and socks are an absolute necessity to carry it on. So you will understand how we appreciate them.

The weather here at present is very severe, markedly so for we Canadians who are not used to a damp climate but we are trying hard to become accustomed to the rain and mud and so far as I can see it is going to be a failure.

Sorry I cannot give you any details of our work as you know the censor would only destroy it and I know how you people at home like to get first-hand information.

I will now close thanking you and the Club for your kindness. I am

Dear Madam,—I regret to say that owing to my being wounded and transferred to a hospital in England on the 30th September I did not receive your letter until to-day, and up to time of writing have not received the parcel.

I have written to Pte. Houghton, (another Peterborough man serving with the battalion) to collect same for me and also to distribute same according to your letter.

I can assure you that your kind gift will be much appreciated by the boys with the Battalion.

Thanking you on behalf of the Peterborough boys, and regretting that there has been so much delay in your letter being answered, I remain,

Yours truly,
PTE. F. DUNKLEY

The 247th Battalion took four men on the strength this morning, two of the men having come from Coe Hill, where Lieut. Nugent is recruiting. Another recruit to-day was B. P. O'Gorman of Indian River, who was attested this morning. A strength of 100 by Christmas, exclusive of the band, is the mark aimed at, and judging by the prospects to-day this should easily be reached.

Fined $10 For Beating Boy Who Chased Son

M. Valois was fined $10.00 in the police court this morning for "beating up" a boy whom he alleged had struck his son and chased him home from the Canal, where the youngsters were skating on Sunday. Magistrate Dumble told the father to remember that he had been a boy once himself and that boys are bound to disagree. The court showed no sympathy for Valois, telling him he had accepted his son's story of a youthful disagreement and upon the strength of it had beaten another boy, the son of a soldier who was recently killed in France. Let the boys settle their own quarrels was the rub of Magistrate Dumble's censure.

SAMPSON CASE ADJOURNED 'TILL FRIDAY, DEC. 29TH

Prosecution Decided to Take No Chances on the Need of the Hill Brothers Now in Penitentiary

BAIL FIXED AT $2,500

The trial of Clarence Sampson, who appeared this morning before County Magistrate Langley on three charges of cattle stealing from John Dean, A. E. Carveth and Stuart Clydesdale, of Dummer, was adjourned by the consent of counsel until Friday, December 29th at 10 a.m.

Mr. E. Gus Porter, K.C., of Belleville, solicitor for the defendant, stated that he was prepared to proceed. He had eight witnesses present. Crown Attorney Hatton had eleven witnesses, some of them from London, St. Catharines, Toronto and other points; but he had been apprised at a late hour that it might be necessary to call Davis and William Hill, now in the penitentiary at Kingston, for identification purposes.

Magistrate Langley expressed his regret that a further adjournment should be granted, and Mr. Hatton accorded in this view. Both counsel and the court were averse to commencing the case under an impending adjournment. Not only was this statement unanimous but it was felt that the trial should not be opened until both parties were prepared to proceed with it to a conclusion.

Bail Reduced.

Mr. Hatton reiterated that he had all his witnesses present except the men from the penitentiary, whose presence he had not deemed necessary until this morning. To procure them from the warden of the penitentiary an order from the Court or Attorney General was necessary.

Taking advantage of the unreadiness of the Crown, Mr. Porter urged that the former offer of bail be reduced from $5,000 to $2,500. He based his plea on the fact that Sampson had already spent several weeks in jail, and he was now prepared for trial and asked that it be begun. Besides if the prisoner was tempted to jump his bail the difference of $2,500 would not hold him, and Mr. Porter added that the defence appeared sound and sufficient for the prisoner.

Under the rules of procedure adjournment was limited to eight days unless counsel consented to an extension. Mr. Porter eagerly offered to extend the adjournment if the Crown would be as generous in the granting of bail.

Mr. Hatton finally consented with the proviso that the two sureties of $1,250 be given by friends, but not relatives of the prisoner.

In the meantime the Crown Attorney made a motion that the information be amended to include Katherine Hill in connection with the three charges, but certain difficulties apparently arose regarding the present status of the prisoner and the motion was withdrawn.

Hence, with the provision of the $2,500 bail Sampson will spend Christmas with his family.

Court Crowded.

The case was elected in the police court court at eleven o'clock after Magistrate Dumble had closed down his mill. County constables, Dummer farmers, city police, witnesses from near and far, Inspector Flood of Toronto and the curious public were all largely represented.

Reception Committee of City Council is Confronted With Weighty Problem of Raising Seventy Dollars—Held a Meeting Last Evening.

"VILLAGE STYLE"

The Legal, Reception, Legislation and Soldiers' Aid committee of the City Council met last evening for the purpose of considering ways and means of entertaining the families of soldiers on service in accordance with the suggestion of Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., who backed up his suggestion with a fifty dollar subscription. The management of the Grand Opera House has signified its willingness to provide a good big afternoon's entertainment at a cost of one hundred and twenty dollars. This puts the weighty problem of raising seventy dollars up to the city, whose tax rate is limited to 28.30 mills, exclusive of war tax, garbage assessment levy and such extras. After nearly an hour's deliberation some of the members hit upon the happy idea of delegating Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the committee to make a suggestion in the local papers that funds be subscribed to the amount of seventy dollars, which is needed to bring Capt. Burnham's donation up to one hundred and twenty dollars if the dependents of the men who are holding the front line trenches, are to be entertained on Christmas Day.

Mayor Opposed.

Mayor Duffus was opposed to the proposal to solicit such a small amount from the public. "It's too much like village style," said His Worship. The latter was of the opinion that the committee was justified in authorizing the entertainment believing that some means of raising the seventy dollars could be found without the necessity of begging for it.

The management of the Grand Opera House has promised a royal entertainment for the occasion. The doors will open about one-forty-five o'clock Christmas afternoon and the entertainment will run for about two hours and a half. Lieut.-Col. Ackerman will be asked to provide a number of men who will preserve order and exercise a watchful eye over the property of the mothers who bring baby carriages, etc.

In Toronto.

The appended item gives some idea of the preparations that are being taken in Toronto to entertain the dependents of soldiers who are on active service.

Toronto, Dec. 18.—"Preparations for the mammoth Christmas tree celebration to provide presents for the 35,000 wives and children of Toronto men now overseas are well under way. The entertainment which will commence at Massey Hall next Wednesday and continue over Thursday and Friday, is under the direct supervision of the popular entertainer, Will J. White. Over 125 performers, 200 musicians, and 2,000 feet of "movies" will be shown, while 35,000 toys will be provided for the children."

GOOD COMEDIES AT THE ROYAL

To-night, for the last time, the pathetic two-reel success, "The Child Killers," showing the hideousness of the Germans when they invaded Belgium. The famous magazine story "The Scarlet Runner," will also be shown in another stirring episode. This chapter, in two reels, is called "The Man with Red Whiskers." Some good comedies that are smile makers will entertain the crowd. Be sure and come to-night.

THE TRUE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

Peterborough has always been proud of the Quaker Oats Company, both for its industrial importance and magnitude, and also for the fair spirit of its management and business dealings. But we can take new pride in the company for a generosity and spirit of consideration that goes beyond its fine record of its past relations to its employees. In a notice appearing yesterday, we learned that the financial loss of the employees by the cessation of operations will be generously recouped—the company offering without the constraint of the most exaggerated sense of business obligations, but in a spirit of splendid generosity, to pay the wages of all the employees to the end of December on the basis of earnings up to December 11th, the date of the disastrous fire. Furthermore, it is learned, not by any authority of the company, but by accident that the company, at the time of the outbreak of the fire and with the injury to so many employees gave directions to its physicians to spare no expense to provide the best treatment for the injured in the hospitals—extra nurses, additional to the staff of the hospitals were to be provided if necessary, and if necessary private wards were to be provided for more serious cases. Business is hard-headed as a rule, but in the case of the Quaker Oats Company the Christmas spirit and its logical development—the spirit of fairness and generosity—comes to the fore. If all business, industrial and otherwise were conducted with as large a view to right—to human—relations between employers and employees, it would not only be good business, but good morality, and this good old world would be a good deal better all round.

LAW OBSERVING.

The Ministerial Association was justified in the interests of public morality and fair play to the temperance act, in protesting against the publication of liquor advertisements in the newspapers. The object of the Ontario Temperance Act, both as a war measure and a measure of morality, is to prevent access of the public to strong drink. It closes the bar and prevents public drinking, and any steps taken to give access to, and provide facilities for, obtaining strong drink, are steps taken in defeating its object. It is true that the temperance act does not provide for the act itself. Its provisions permitting the importation of drink from another province or country, are contrary to the spirit and object of the act itself, still so far as this object is concerned, helping the import of liquor is helping to defeat the act itself. The Examiner adopted the policy of refusing advertisements because it was considered an illegal act. Under the license act the liquor traffic was a legitimate business, and it was as natural to promote its operation through advertising as the sale of any other legal commodity. Now the traffic in strong drink is barred and, in regard to the object of the legislation, is defeated by helping the public through a side or back door to the strong drink that is denied the open door. The newspapers which help accord to strong drink through advertising, cannot be ranked with the law-abiding, or with those of fair regard for the moral interests involved and the material interests involved in a strict enforcement of the Temperance Act as a war measure. They are virtually cooperating with the lawless element that stores whisky in garages and woodsheds in defiance of the spirit of the Temperance Act. They are imperilling great national interests inflicting or helping to inflict, national loss for a paltry gain. In a word they are unpatriotic; and the call of the circumstances and the times is a call to patriotism on the part of the press and public.

TWO VALUES OF HUMAN LIFE.

There are two values of human life, or two forms in which the value of human life is expressed. There is the essential value, or the abstract value of human life as a unit in the human universe; there is the moral or character value as a factor for good or evil in human relations. It is this human value, distinct in terms, but inseparably associated in fact, that indicates the truth expressed by John Ruskin.

"It may be discovered that the true values of wealth are purple—and not in rock but in Flesh—perhaps that the final outcome and consummation of all wealth is in the producing of as many as possible full-breathed, bright-eyed and happy human beings."

We are appalled at the tremendous loss of human life in the war. We deplore the loss of what cannot be restored. But it can, in the national and economic sense, be replaced, and the consequences to the nation be remedied. The philanthropists who carry out plans to lessen infant mortality thus practically recognize the fact that the maintenance of the decisive factor in the national struggle, man power, consists largely in saving the life in the cradle. One of them has said, "The man power of to-morrow is in the cradle of to-day." If the infant death rate of the United Kingdom were as low per thousand as it is in New Zealand, the number of babies saved, within four years, would equal the quarter of a million British lives that have been or may be lost in the war.

But while agencies for saving infant life are of prime importance, because they lay the foundation, the agencies that give character to infant life and save to usefulness in the world, neglected child life, exposed to moral and physical dangers, have a more important place in and a larger claim upon our social sympathies and activities. The philanthropist who saves an infant life, only saves a mortal life; the Children's Aid Society does or may do more—it saves, or may save, an immortal soul. We know at any rate, that it is an instrument in making neglected and dependent children—doomed, almost certainly, to lives of suffering, vice or crime without its help—into self-supporting, virtuous, industrious members of society. In this view the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society becomes a matter of individual, municipal and state interest.

For many years The Examiner has urged from time to time upon the public, upon philanthropists and economists, the important claims of the Children's Aid Society to encouragement and support. Its usefulness in the philanthropic and economic sense, its moral effect is admitted; has been demonstrated. Thousands of neglected, dependent, needy, untrained or worse, badly trained, children, have been rescued through the agency of the society, and placed in foster homes, have grown up virtuous, respectable and thrifty members of society, converted into good citizens. Throughout the Province, many have become heads of families, and hundreds have joined the ranks and are fighting for country, civilization and freedom.

These things are mentioned, not as anything new, but merely as a reminder of the claims of the Children's Aid Society upon our best citizenship. This claim has especial point at a season that marked the advent of the Holy Child; brought into the world the Friend of Children, and the Christianity in whose interests and under whose inspiration to duty the care of neglected childhood becomes a sacred duty and high responsibility. It is not probable that the ladies who have shown so warm an interest will let the children of the Shelter be deprived of the Christmas cheer that the season calls for, such as will be found in every child-blessed Christmas home. Nor will citizens be backward in helping the ladies realise their intentions.

There is no Society, no organization that, viewed in every aspect of its practical beneficence, more largely deserves the practical support and assistance of good citizens, so richly merits the answer to the prayer "God's benison go with you, and with all that would make good or bad."

Christmas Attraction At The Grand

Book Your Seats Early Next Friday

The Heart of Maryland," David Belasco's great dramatic success which has been done into motion pictures with Mrs. Leslie Carter in her original role, opened the gigantic New York Hippodrome for a short season of motion pictures and played to over one hundred and twelve thousand paid admissions in nine days, comes to "The Grand" on Christmas night only for one performance, commencing at 8.15.

In "The Heart of Maryland," which was produced by Herbert Brenon, director of "Neptune's Daughter," five regiments of soldiers, two battalions of artillery, two hundred cavalrymen and a special army hospital corps was used.

Seven tons of gunpowder were exploded in the many big battle scenes, and a church, fully equipped and bearing a tower seventy feet high, was built and demolished. "The Heart of Maryland" is one of the biggest screen features ever produced and was selected to open the New York Hippodrome from over four score other pictures submitted.

The seat sale will open Friday morning at 10 o'clock and as Christmas night usually means a capacity attendance, patrons would do well to book the seats early.

Appeal To Help To Assist Etc.

Opera House people that the ground floor of Turner's building will be open, and all baby carriages can be left in care of a man on duty. The baby carriages, go-carts, etc., will be ticketed, so that they be not mixed, and kept quite warm and comfortable for the children, when the house is called off. There may be some other things for the kiddies, but of that we are not quite sure. But hope so.

Now the idea of this rather confidential talk is to get you to help. As the man on the street puts it, "to come across." Just in a friendly and helpful way. Christmas won't be any the less your Christmas if you spare a dollar or two in a good cause. There are enough people in this city again we go back to the man on the street for our definition so "loosen up" in the aggregate to defray the balance of the expense. Seventy dollars will settle the bill. There have been many calls. This one will not break anybody, and it will be a most laudable and beneficent combination to combine for the purpose. Supplementing Capt. Burnham's gift the balance will be a people's recognition, in a small way, of the man on service, and by whose sacrifice we are all able to be at home, where we can in a most Christian way have our Christmas.

Contributions can be left with the City Clerk or with the Patriotic Fund Office. Or the contributor can deposit cash at both, if he so wishes. The affair is in honest hands and nothing will be diverted from the object in view. Only seventy dollars. Not a large sum, but it will bring pleasure to nearly one thousand kiddies, if they all show up, and wild horses will hardly keep them away.

Christmas afternoon, at the Opera House.

The Value of the Personal Touch

Many a Canadian Family is Being Saved From Ruin by Friendly Counsel and Kind Hands

From a small Ontario town comes this story of the work of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. When it was decided to form a local branch those in charge of the relief work decided to make the disbursement a personal matter between the relief officer and the head of the family, to dispense advice as well as money, and exercise as much control as possible. Each woman, when being put on the fund, is given a personal interview with the honorary treasurer, and receives an explanation of what is expected of her, for her own good, and for the credit of the Fund. Complaints about unpaid accounts are taken up and if not disputed the woman has to make some satisfactory arrangement to pay on the installment plan. If she does not do so the next cheque is held up. Free legal advice is secured when needed, and now the women come to the Fund executive for advice in any difficulties.

One family who moved into the district had a record of extravagance and mismanagement in other towns. They were given the usual advice, probably in a larger dose than to most cases, and put on probation. The result has been that the younger children are attending school regularly and are better clothed and fed than ever in their lives. The family are beginning to accumulate a little solid furniture, they pay the rent regularly, have taken on a little industrial insurance, started a savings account, and hold their heads up. There are five small children under fourteen, who now are living in a different atmosphere to any they have ever known before. The chances are that the three boys will make respectable heads of families instead of town loafers, that the girls will make better wives and mothers. The secret of the whole affair was that some one was taking an interest in them, something which had never happened in their lives before. They were put on a certain standard of honor, and they measured up to it.

It might be argued that this is an exceptional case. Our experience has been that others are also showing an improvement. However, grant that it is an exception. This town has expended in relief the total amount of $1,500, while it has raised in all about $13,000 for the Patriotic Fund. Would not the economic improvement in that one family be worth much more to Canada than the total amount of relief money expended in this town? Would it not measure up nearer to the $13,000 that our citizens have paid?

That result would not have been secured in any other way than by the direct personal touch of that relief committee. No Government department or mere monthly cheque could have done it. The responsibility of the Stay-at-Homes is not only to the soldier's wife and kiddies now; it is to the future of Canada and our race. Intelligent interest on the part of the local executives can and will do much toward improving the mind and bodies of the soldiers' children. They are our trust, and the more efficient, personal and helpful means we take to care for them cannot be too much trouble to a true Canadian.

Finds World Must Save In Use of Cereals

ROME, Dec. 19.—The International Institute of Agriculture has published a report under the title "Has the World Enough to Live Upon Until the next Harvest?" The report took into consideration five unfavourable factors, the failure of the northern hemisphere harvests of the year ended July 31, and particularly those of Canada and the United States; the curtailed crops of Russia owing to the continued closing of the Dardanelles; the extra and unusual consumption of food by the armies; the increased difficulty of transporting crops; and the fact that normally the world's food consumption increases year by year, partly due to population increases, and whereas a crop which does not more than attain to an antecedent average is actually an embarrassment.

The general conclusion of the report, while not favourable, indicates that in every nation, irrespective of those at war, economic changes must be a narrow margin of surplus food left at the beginning of the next harvest year. It is also made clear that should the next harvest be no better than the present, the situation will be serious.

Discussing the report, says: "that no one can estimate with any precision what may be the actual consumption of the world during the period standing between the next harvest. However, if above the consumption in the northern hemisphere, which is 2,237,500,000 bushels, adds to this the consumption of the southern hemisphere countries, and arrives at a total estimated consumption of 3,586,000,000 bushels. Taking into account all existing wheat, the report finds that the wheat surplus by July 31 next will be but 46,281,000 bushels, and that this surplus will exist because of the preceding abundant harvest, whereby 345,305,140 bushels of stored wheat were available to add to this year's consumption. This year's total wheat crop is therefore but 3,401,263,224 bushels, as compared to 4,062,567,000 bushels last year.

Typographers Protest at Rise in Paper Prices

Ask Government to Take Action Under the War Measures Act

Toronto, Dec. 19.—A meeting of the Executive Board of the Ontario Conference of Typographical Unions was held in the Labor Temple on Saturday evening, at which the question of increase in price, etc., of news print paper was taken up, and the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, it having come to our notice that the price of white news print paper will be increased by 60 per cent. on January 1, 1917, and, whereas, the Executive Board of the Ontario Conference of Typographical Unions deem the proposed increase to be entirely uncalled for, and, whereas, such increase if put into effect will have the effect of the amalgamation of many newspapers, and the cessation entirely of many publications, thereby displacing many members of the printing and allied crafts; therefore be it resolved by the Executive Board of the Ontario Conference of the Typographical Unions in session assembled that the Government of the Dominion of Canada be petitioned to take such action under the war measures act of 1914 as shall assure to the publishers of Canadian newspapers a full supply of news print paper at a fair price, to be fixed by the Government, under the provisions contained in the said act; and further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Right Hon. Sir R. L. Borden, Premier, and Hon. Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, asking them to take immediate action thereon. (Signed) Chas. P. Doughty, President; H. B. Archer, Vice-President; George L. Myland, Sec.-Treasurer, Ontario Conference of Typographical Unions. Several other matters of vital importance to the conference were also taken up.

The officers in attendance were—Chas. P. Doughty, President, Guelph; H. B. Archer, Vice-President, London, and George L. Myland, Secretary Treasurer, Peterborough. The next convention of this organization will be held in London in June next.

AFGHANISTAN REVOLT PLOTTED BY GERMANS

British Report Some Members of Mission Were Caught—Ameer Remained Loyal

LONDON, Dec. 18.—After nearly two years of silence regarding the situation in Afghanistan, where it was known that German agents had been active in the early days of the war the British Government has issued an account of the failure of the alleged German plot for a great Afghan uprising. The account, as given in the House of Commons by Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for India, is as follows:

"In the Spring of 1915 the German Government decided to send a mission to Afghanistan. For this purpose they selected from among a number of Indian anarchists in Berlin a young land owner from Oudh, who posed to them as a ruling chief, and as such was received in audience by the Emperor.

"This person was accompanied by a party of German officers, some Turks, and another Indian anarchist, a Moslem. The principal German officer, Lt. von Hentig, was the bearer of a letter from the German Chancellor to the Ameer, in which the latter was invited to advise the pretended Rajah how best India might be liberated from British tyranny.

"Von Hentig was also charged to make important revelations to the Ameer regarding the relations which the German Government hoped would in future exist between Afghanistan, Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey.

"The mission broke up in Persia and succeeded in making its way in small parties in Afghanistan in the late Summer. The members were arrested on arrival and eventually conveyed to Kabul toward the end of the year. There is reason to believe that the Ameer and his people quickly appraised these Germans, and the Indian adventurers by whom they were accompanied, at their true value.

"It is true that the intervention of Turkey under German influence created a complication, and placed his Majesty the Ameer in an exceedingly difficult position. But at the outbreak of the war his Majesty gave the Viceroy of India the most solemn assurances of his intention to preserve the neutrality of his country, and it is with great satisfaction that I acknowledge on behalf of his Majesty's Government the loyalty of the Ameer to his pledged word—as sacred, to the true Moslem as to ourselves. His Majesty has firmly refused the inducements—as seductive as they are unrealizable—held out to him to induce him to forsake his ally, and has used his influence to prevent disturbances on the frontier.

"The Ameer dismissed the mission in May last. It would not be in the public interest to state what has become of the various members; but some of them have been captured by the Russians and the British after leaving Afghanistan. The estates of the Indian landowner have been sequestered by the Government of India. Letters were also addressed by the German Chancellor to a number of ruling chiefs."

Drunkenness Is On Decrease in Britain Statistics Now Show

LONDON, Dec. 18.—If any accurate estimate can be made while so many men are away at the fighting fronts, it would appear that drunkenness in England and Wales has decreased since the war began. A Blue Book has been issued showing a decrease of 48,017 convictions for drunkenness during 1915.

The greatest decrease in the consumption of liquor appeared in agricultural counties on the East Coast. In some of these convictions for drunkenness dropped 41.8 per cent. The "no treating" law undoubtedly has aided in reducing the consumption of intoxicants. During the last six months of 1915 there were only 42,342 convictions for violating this law, as compared to 48,750 during the first half of the year.

Throughout the entire year of 1915 there were only 136,811 drunkards convicted, which is the lowest number recorded for nearly forty years, and is 26 per cent. below the total for 1913. Of those convicted in 1915, 33,211 were women.

WINDSOR DRUNKS MORE; FINES NEARLY $1,500

WINDSOR, Dec. 19.—Prohibition, so far as this city is concerned, has resulted in an increase of drunkenness and a substantial addition to the finances of Windsor, according to figures compiled by Chief of Police Wills:

From September 16 to December 15, 1915 there were ninety-three arrests for drunkenness. In the corresponding period this year 221 citizens were arrested for the same offence.

These figures do not include the number of Windsorites taken in by Detroit police, who are estimated at not less than 200, who crossed the river and were arrested at the Detroit ferry dock. Approximately $1,500 has been handed over to the city by inebriates in less than three months.

Rules Which Will Help Relieve Christmas Shopping Of Unnecessary Confusion

No doubt Peterborough could save two whole valuable days this week if people in stores, on elevators, stairways, aisles, streets and other public passageways would remember a few simple rules. Here they are:—

KEEP TO THE RIGHT.—Do it. As you walk through the store; as you go upstairs; as you come down; as you get on the elevator and come off; as you go into the restaurant and come out; as you pass by people on the street. The Christmas confusion and obstruction of traffic could thus doubtless be minimized by one-tenth at least.

DON'T ENGAGE IN LENGTHY CONVERSATIONS DIRECTLY IN A PUBLIC PASSAGEWAY.—Everyone loves to see and hear the greeting of old friends at the Christmas season. It warms the heart and helps take away "that tired feeling" when we're doing our Christmas shopping, but—every day down town now we see hundreds "held up" by a blockade of thoughtless persons in various places who persist in holding conversazione on the stairway of our big stores, right at the mouth of the elevator, or on the crowded streets. We may depend upon it at this season there is sure to be always some people behind us in a frantic rush—maybe they're from out-of-town and have only a few minutes left before their train leaves, and in this few minutes they have to buy presents for "pa", "ma"—and all the rest of the family.

DON'T ALWAYS TRY TO STAND AT THE VERY FRONT OF THE ELEVATOR. CALL OUT THE FLOOR.—Perhaps there is no place where we conform act so like sheep as we do in this getting on and off elevators. Did you ever get any one to herd sheep—get their through "bars" or over bars?—then you'll wonderful. Just like ours tor.

I said this to an elevator man last week. He agreed heartily and said "I just told my wife last night I didn't believe I could stand it any longer. Why, just a few minutes ago a big woman with a big suitcase was the first to get on and stood right there she got on, filling up nearly the whole entrance. She was going to the fifth floor too, and there she stood and made everybody get off and out (or try to) around her till someone just by sheer force, pushed her to one side." (Of course, to "call out the number" of the floor you wish to get off at is the only sensible thing to do. Not only does it help the elevator man, but it announces to the other occupants of the car that we wish to get out there, and thus they can make way for us if possible.

KEEP PLEASANT.—Crowds must of necessity—crowd. Remember courtesy and good-nature are contagious. Keep up the Christmas good-will even when the crowd—bumps and jostles. We should be ready to keep pleasant and smile in the midst of it all—just because Canada is still Canada; because the Kaiser is not taking his Christmas dinner in Paris, London, or even Peterborough. But, most of all, just because there is a Christmas.

RADIUM A FAILURE AS CANCER CURE

Report of Research Foundation at Columbia—Only Good as Palliative

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—After exhaustive tests upon rats, mice and guinea pigs, the use of radium as a cure for cancer and tumors has been found to be a failure, according to the annual report of Dr. Francis Carter-Wood, head of the Crocker Cancer Research Fund of Columbia University, made public. For cases on which operation is not possible radium is successful as a palliative only, the report states.

"It is unquestionably possible to prolong life in a few instances," Dr. Wood says, "and to make the patient more comfortable by the judicious and intelligent employment of large quantities of radium. On the other hand, it is equally certain that the use of small quantities, say 25 to 50 milligrams of radium element, often results in a rapid extension of the tumor, so that the patient's condition is worse than if he had been left alone."

ASKS THAT BY-LAW BE ENFORCED

Ald. Edgar Says It's Unfair to Sell Ashes to One Man and Let Another Man Collect Them

At a meeting of the Property committee of the City Council held last evening, Ald. Saunders, chairman, announced that tenders for the sale of ashes from the incinerator will be asked for. Last year the sum of two hundred and forty dollars was realized. Tenders will be received up until four o'clock Thursday afternoon, December 28th.

On motion of Mayor Duffus and Ald. Langford, the matter of making an adequate number of garbage collections in the centre of the city, the taking of material left over for collection, the operating of the incinerator and omissions in the collection of garbage was left with Ald. Saunders and Sanitary Inspector Cooper.

Ald. Edgar raised the question of enforcing the by-law which he claims prohibits the removal of garbage by people who are not authorized by the garbage collectors. As matters stand several men in the city make a practice of rummaging through garbage boxes for the purpose of collecting garbage suitable for feed. Ald. Edgar insisted that the by-law be enforced. He said it was unfair to contract for the sale of ashes and then allow outsiders to come in and collect them.

Fourth Prize For Window Dressing

The J. M. Greene Music Company received word to-day to the effect that the Company's window dresser, Mr. John Morden, has been awarded fourth prize for the Edison window which the Company entered in the display contest during Edison week, in October last. The advice was accompanied by a cheque for twenty dollars. Mr. Morden is to be congratulated upon his success, as a large number of contestants entered the competition. At present Mr. Morden has a very fine Christmas window.

WEDDING BELLS

ROBINSON—FOSTER.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the George St. Methodist Parsonage last evening when Thos. Henry Robinson, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Bertha Foster, also of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. The young couple were unattended. They will reside in Peterborough.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon from 49 Benson street. Service will be held at the house at two-thirty o'clock and funeral at three o'clock. Rev. R. G. Peever will officiate.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

1,000 Miles of Rails From Canada To Be Used in France

OTTAWA, Dec 18.—Canada has undertaken to supply, largely from its own excess railway mileage, at least one thousand miles of rails and other track material for immediate use in France. The Dominion Government roads, the Grand Trunk, Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific are all co-operating to meet the sudden demand. Already 300 miles of Government railway sidings are in process of being taken up and shipped to France.

The Imperial Government has asked the Dominion to help solve the difficulties of the French railway situation, both in the relief of part congestion and the movement of guns and munitions behind the lines. The transportation facilities in France have been inadequate to permit the allies to take full advantage of the material and supplies available, and it is felt that the war could be materially shortened, and thousands of lives saved, if sufficient additional railway facilities could be provided promptly. The British Government is doing what it can to supply the deficiency from England, and Canada has been asked whether there was any possibility of securing rails and other track material from the Dominion to meet what is regarded by the British Minister of War as a vital need. It was suggested that if no other solution were possible certain already existing trackage might be taken up and sent forward. The specific call on the Dominion is for from 1,200 to 1,500 miles of railway trackage.

STEEL MILLS COULD NOT SUPPLY

This information was received in Ottawa last Thursday afternoon. The Canada steel situation was immediately canvassed. It became apparent that the munitions works on which the Canadian mills are at present engaged precluded any possibility of early delivery of rails, tie-plates, bolts etc., from those quarters, and it was evident that the situation could be properly and promptly met only by the taking up of Canadian track.

MINISTER TAKES ACTION

The Minister of Railways, Hon. Frank Cochrane, was unavoidably absent in New York at the time the War Office communication was received. On Friday afternoon, Mr. Graham Bell, Financial Comptroller of the department, left for New York with the necessary documents to place the matter fully before the Minister, and at New York Mr. Cochrane was able to consult with his colleague, Hon. Dr. Reid, who is acting Minister of Railways at various times is also closely in touch with the Canadian railway situation.

MATERIAL ALREADY FROM GOVERNMENT ROAD.

By 10 o'clock on Saturday morning a telegram to the department was on the wire directing that Mr. Gutelius, General Manager of Government Railways, be instructed to arrange immediately to take up 300 miles of Government railway sidings, and also to supply whatever trackmaterial was immediately available. With these instructions Mr. Gutelius, who had been called to Ottawa, left for Montreal on Saturday afternoon. He has already under movement to the seaboard sufficient track material, including rails, tie-plates, bolts, spikes, and ties, to set up one complete section of twenty miles of railway including sidings. To enable the General Manager to do this, the Canadian Northern Railway, through Mr. D. B. Hanna promptly came to his support with ten miles of spike material.

DUPLICATE TRACK IN WEST.

With the 300 miles from Canadian Government railways as a start Mr. Cochrane at once got busy with the other railways. Mr. E. J. Chamberlin, President of the Grand Trunk Pacific, happened to be in Washington, and was able to meet the Minister in New York on Sunday. In the meantime Mr. Cochrane had been in consultation with Mr. A. H. Smith, President of the New York Central, and Chairman of the Commission which is investigating the Canadian railway situation, and as a result Mr. Cochrane decided that the first request to be made of the privately-owned Canadian roads would be the taking up of the 220 miles of duplicate mileage in the mountain section between Edmonton and the coast. For this distance the Canadian Northern Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific parallel each other. Sir Henry Drayton, Chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, has approved of this.

Hon. Dr. Reid left for Ottawa Saturday night to follow up the matter there, and has recommended to the Council the granting to the Minister of Railways of power to order up existing rails and material wherever the Investigating Railway Commission and the Dominion Railway Board may agree as to the practicability.

There are divisional points on the transcontinental where yardage has been provided which cannot possibly be utilized for many years to come, and a considerable mileage of rails and material can be spared from most of these divisional points. Further, wherever a siding anywhere on Government railways is not urgently required it will be taken out. The same practice will be followed on Canadian Government Railways branch lines, and there is also a lot of material in connection with the Hudson Bay Railway construction, which will be available if necessary.

USE LOCAL LABOUR OR TROOPS.

As already stated, the first twenty-mile section, sufficient to load one steamer, is on the way, and other material will be forwarded as promptly as British bottoms can take care of it at the seaboard. It is expected that at least one thousand miles of complete roadway will be supplied by Canada, and in order to facilitate the taking up of rails all local labour available will be used, but where this is not sufficient troops will be employed to rush the work through.

ANN PENNINGTON AT THE EMPIRE

In a Delightful Comedy-Drama Susie Snowflake

Petite, pretty Ann Pennington, the popular musical comedy favorite, contributes a distinctly new type of screen characterization in the Famous Players Film Company's picturization of life behind the footlights as the village "Susie Snowflake." There is something irresistibly appealing about the bewitching little heroine of this unique photoplay, and as "Susie" Miss Pennington has caught all the charm and piquancy of the little dancer who scandalizes her maidenly aunts and sets her home village agog when she brings her Broadway ideals into the community. At the Empire to-day and to-morrow.

LONDON, December 19.—The Cunard liner Pannonia was safely floated to-day after grounding in the fog. She was apparently uninjured.

Wife-Beater Gets Six Month Term At Guelph Prison Farm

Young Girl Wrecks Happiness of a St. Thomas Couple.

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 19.—Charles B. New, formerly storekeeper for the Canadian lines of the Pere Marquette Railway, with headquarters at St. Thomas, was sentenced to serve an intermediate term of not less than six months and not more than one year at the prison farm, Guelph, on a charge of wife-beating.

In passing sentence, Judge Colter commented that it was one of those unfortunate cases where a man was determined to go wrong. New had become infatuated with a young girl, as many young men of to-day do. They forget everything wise, said the judge, and are foolish enough to believe that the girl thinks they are more than anyone else, and they are led into sin. The prisoner was prepared at all hazards to go against the laws of God and man, no matter what the cost might be.

On the night he assaulted his lawful wife, said the court, he was cunning, no doubt, and his cunning succeeded in the object he endeavoured to obtain.

His Honour said that there was no sentence which he could pass that would make restitution for the woman's heart which had been broken, but New must be punished.

Judge Colter further stated that in this case it was to be regretted that the divorce courts were so far beyond the average citizen. Crown Attorney McCrimmon told the court that Mrs New had offered to forgive her husband for his infidelity and rough treatment, and had gone to Detroit with the purpose, in hopes of getting him to return to the city, and that things might adjust themselves, so that they could live together again.

The prisoner, however, frowned at this effort, and his wife, in a state of depression, reported him to the immigration authorities, who deported him on account of violating the alien labour act.

When New was being led back to the cells he complimingly remarked: "That's a dirty deal—simply rotten."

The evidence went to show that in December, 1914, Mrs. New attended an Eastern Star dance, and was appraised of the fact that a girl was home in the house with her husband. She went home and her husband insisted that she would not go upstairs, and demande her to pass into the dining-room, where he wished to speak with her. Mrs. New, however, fought against this, and tried to get upstairs. It was in the tussle that followed that her husband committed the assault when he bumped her head against the hall seat

RUM RATIONS ONLY BY DOCTORS' ORDERS

W. C. T. U. PRESIDENT IS SO INFORMED BY BRITISH WAR OFFICE.

"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and in reply to inform you that rum is only issued to the troops under the strictest supervision, and when considered necessary by the General Officer Commanding and this only through the recommendation of the medical officer."

The foregoing is a letter received from the Secretary of War by Mrs. S. R. Wright, London, Ont., President of the Dominion W.C.T.U., who have been carrying on an earnest campaign against "rum rations."

Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, Secretary of the Army and Navy Board of the Methodist Church, speaking of the letter from the War Office, said: "This is certainly better than the indiscriminate handing out of the 'rum rations.' Let us hope that the General Officer Commanding may have the views of a Kitchener or a Roberts, and the medical officer the scientific knowledge of a Sir Victor Horseley as to the effect of intoxicants upon the efficiency, the courage and the endurance of the soldiers."

Case of Ptomaine Poisoning In East City

Three Children Were Taken Seriously Ill —A Narrow Escape

An eight cent can of pork and beans freshly opened caused ptomaine poisoning in the family of Mr. Arthur Moffatt, 33 Cricket Place. Three children were taken seriously ill, and but for the timely arrival of Dr. Baker and Dr. Neal one of them would have died. The three children ate some of the pork and beans at dinner time and several hours later one of the children reported to his mother that one of the three was showing signs of illness. Almost immediately another one took sick, and before long the third child was afflicted. Dr. Baker was sent for and at the latter's request Dr. Neal was sent for. With some difficulty the more serious patient of the three was revived and to-day all three are on the way to recovery.

"Ten minutes more and the little girl would have gone," said one of the physicians.

The can was freshly opened and the contents not allowed to stand in the can. The contents was given to the children, mainly because they were so fond of them. The parents did not partake of them, which accounts for their escape.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the plaintiff and Mr. F. D. Kerr for defendant. Judge Huycke allowed Mr. Kerr's motion for a twenty day's stay of execution.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

There was a speedy re-action, however when it was realized that Lloyd George's speech did not shut the doors to peace negotiations altogether. United tates steel the market barometer, which opened at 113 1-4, advanced to 116, but half house later at 2 p.m. had flopped back to 111.

Woes of the Milkman

New York — The troubles of the milkmen were described before the Wicks Legislative Investigating Committee here by Loton Horton, the president of one of the largest distributing companies in this city. He complained that:

"Many persons use milk drivers as alarm clocks."

"Fine, fashionable people, who rent swell apartments here in the winter and leave for Florida in the spring, also leave their milk bills behind."

"A milk driver climbs on an average 324 flights of stairs a day, and twice a week this is doubled because of the bills that he has to deliver."

"No man can climb that number of stairs and last more than three years," he said.

Referring to the "fine, fashionable people who go away without paying their milk bills, Mr. Horton said to follow them to the country, and 'dun' them.

"I tell my boys," he added, "to follow them to the grave."

MORE COMFORTS FOR THE BOYS

Canadian Kitchener League Send Shipment Valued at $115

The Canadian Kitchener League have sent forward another shipment to the trenches. The boxes containing 137 pairs socks, cake, candy, tobacco, lead pencils and literature, valued at $115. These were sent to the following addresses:—Cecil Bennett, 20th Batt., (93rd) France; Norman Batby, 21st Bat., (93rd) France, Lieut. Meredith Huycke, 2nd Howitzer Battery, France.

The League wish to thank everyone who donated or helped in any way to fill these boxes for the boys.

Every letter from the boys in the trenches calls for socks. Although there are a great many pairs of socks going forward still we do not seem to be able to meet the demand. The call comes to every one who can knit to get busy. The Canadian Kitchener League have lots of yarn and will gladly give it to everyone who will sacrifice a little time to help make our boys a little more comfortable in the trenches.

Many a man who isn't satisfied with the life he has pursues drug store almanacs and acquires others to worry him.

Dead Drunk When Police Picked Him From Snow Drift

A young man who tried just "three fingers" paid $10 and $3.75 into court this morning for a fling that left him with all the visible signs, and doubtless invisible pains, of a real knockout. Constables Blade and Deanard picked him out of a snow bank on Reid street, some time during the night into which he had sprawled face downward. "Dead to the world" he might have suffered severe consequences from the exposure had he not been gathered in by the police. He is of the opinion that the "stuff" was the poisonous stuff that some times appears in surreptitious drinking under prohibitory laws.

Failure To Register Cost Austrians $10 After Leaving City

Men Think They Would Become Better Citizens If Instructed.

BARRIE, Dec. 19.—During the time that the collection of the poll tax from the foreign residents of this city was being carried on, several Austrians left for Hamilton rather than pay the $5 tax demanded by the authorities. It now develops that upon their arrival in Hamilton they did not register and in consequence were fined $10 each.

When they were searched by the authorities, the sum of $3,200 was found concealed.

While engaged in making the collections in the city, Inspector Crosbie received a great many complaints from the foreigners, who stated that although they were forced to pay the taxes, they were receiving no benefit from the city in an educational line. They thought night classes should be formed where they could be instructed in writing and reading the English language. Their efficiency as citizens would be materially increased by this scheme, they said, and they thought that a great many of the court cases which arise over petty quarrels and ignorance of the law could be avoided.

It has been suggested that the board of education and city council cooperate in this scheme and a room and facilities secured, where classes could be held one or two nights per week and the ambitions of these foreigners to learn the language could be fulfilled.

ARRANGEMENTS CONCLUDED.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Arrangements have been concluded for a party of Canadian journalists to spend Christmas at the Canadian front in France.

A Hebrew Youth Needed Charity Not Police Court

The Police Court deals with offenders against the law, not with the ill, hence its philanthropy is extremely limited. For that reason, Harry Rothe, a fair complection Hebrew youth who claimed that his only fault was that he was consumptive was released this morning when he appeared on a charge of being a vagrant, and was given his liberty on the condition that he left the city. Roughly and insufficiently clad, apparently emaciated and frail, no friend was present to aid him, although Chief Thompson stated that Mr. A. Low had promised to see that the young man would be assisted to proceed to Toronto. From the outward evidence of his alleged condition his appearance appealed for charity, and he seemed a fit and proper subject for a public sanatation institution.

HUNTER ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Ald. Dobbin Has Solved Problem

Abstains From Bacon and Eggs In Order to Keep Cost of Living Where It Was Two Years Ago

The exclusion of bacon and eggs from the daily menu enables Ald. Dobbin to say that he is living as cheap to-day as he did two years ago. This is one of the claims that he advanced at a meeting of the Legaip Reception, Legislation and Soldiers' Aid Committee of the City Council which was held last night. Mr. Frost representing the Trades and Labour Council was present in the interests of a movement to investigate and if possible, reduce the high cost of living. Mr. Frost reminded Ald. Dobbin that if he was living as cheap as he was two years ago he may not be living on the same scale. This Ald. Dobbin admitted. The latter also informed Mr Frost that cold storage houses were not banished and that the supplies destroyed in the Plavelle fire in Lindsay were destined for the British Government.

WOMEN WERE LAUGHING.

Ald. Edgar told of a case in which three women were seen laughing over the high prices they received for their produce on Saturday last. The women in question thought the prices were ridiculous. Ald. Edgar was of the opinion that the matter might better be left over until the first of the year for the new council to deal with. "If people would refuse to buy the higher priced commodities the prices would soon come down" said Ald Edgar. In the meantime information can be secured as to what is being accomplished in other towns. Mr. Frost did not think that local dealers were to blame. On motion of Ald. Edgar and Ald Duncan the meeting adjourned much to the relief of some of the members who felt that the discussion was getting too deep.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

ANOTHER LIVELY PRACTICE FOR THE JUNIOR O. H. A. TEAM

The Peterborough junior O.H.A. club had another lively practice last night with some eighteen players in line. Jerry Coughlin was in charge of the practice and put the squad through a busy hour. Two line ups were selected and the rubber was chased at top speed through the practice period. A team composed of last year's players with Frost of the Pennants and McFee of New Liskeard on the forward line turned in some nice hockey, while some of the other young sters on the other line up made a good showing. Cherrett of last year's team was an absentie through illness and Scott of last year's Lindsay team was also unable to be present. There will be another practice at Brock street rink to-morrow night at 7 o'clock when the following players and these only are asked to be out:—

Murray Carney, Montgomery, McIntyre, Graham, Cherrett, McFee, Hartley, Frost, Scott, Park, Moore, Wright, Clarke.

Thrills in Air For Carpentier On Firing Line

Georges Carpentier, the heavyweight boxing champion of Europe, who is now in Paris on leave from war service, has written for a London newspaper a little story of his experiences and his prospects. He looks forward to re-entering the ring and is convinced that it won't be long before he is free to put on the gloves for fighting of a different sort from that in which he has been sharing for many months past. Expressing this confidence he says:

"Will I be glad to get out of this hell? A thousand times yes, but not before we have seen to it that the gates of hell have been shut so tight that they will never be flung open again.

"I shall always remember that when I fought your Bombardier Wells at Ghent Belgian people screamed that boxing was cruel and ghastly and must be no more. Then they did not know. A squeamish Belgian can never be again. For Belgians have lived too long in a world of horror."

Sixteen Months on Firing Line.

Relating his experiences at the front, he writes:

"I have seen sixteen months on the firing line as a pilot. Much have I seen. I have had fights high in the clouds. I have been wounded. I have received the war cross (Croix de Guere), and I have been recommended for and shall receive shortly the Medaille militaire.

"I have been lucky, immensely so, for I have been in many tight corners. It may be that some of the charms given to me when I left London instead of fighting Young Ahearn have brought me good fortune.

"But I would tell what the 'order of the day,' which is what you would call your 'gazette,' says about what I did to win the Medaille militaire. It is that I flew over the German lines at a height of only 200 yards and that when I returned to our lines my biplane was found to have received no fewer than fifteen rifle bullets.

No Sense of Danger.

"When flying, if it be that you are chancing your arm, shall I say, you have no sense of danger. I never in all my fights thought or dreamed of being beaten. I always believed in myself. It is so now with my machine. It is so some human. You feel that it knows, see, that it is part of yourself, you come to believe it is invincible, and although in my last big fight, in which I can now well believe I was hugging and wrestling with death all the time, I did not once quake with fear.

"To fly as low as I did was risky perhaps, but the knowledge that it had to be done if I were to be of service to our artillery seemed to fill me with a sense of security. It was only when I got back into our lines and saw the fifteen bullet marks and the holes that had been riddled in my machine that I realized that I was as near being knocked out as ever I have been in my life.

Not Hunting Enemy Flyers.

"These days my duties, though often exciting and dangerous, do not consist in hunting enemy aeroplanes. Indeed, my orders are even to avoid engaging them. But I have been compelled to do so on several occasions, and under a heavy handicap, because of my machine not being fast or handy enough.

"It is my business to assist in the direction of our artillery fire by means of wireless messages and signaling. I like my work ever so much, for its asks that I shall always have my wits about me, very like the boxer, who though he is winning by ever so many points, has always to be on the lookout."

BOWLING

Great excitement was caused all day yesterday at the Water street alleys, where every one was trying to win a turkey in the bowling match. They started early in the morning and continued till the alleys were closed in the evening. High scores were being put on the board all day, only to be beaten by other bowlers. A visit to the alleys will satisfy any one the excitement this match is causing. Mr. Solomon went to the trouble to secure some very fine fowl for these matches and every prize is worth trying for. It is expected that this excitement will keep up all week, as every one that visits the alleys is out to win a turkey.

This week will wind up the league matches till after the New Year owing to the Christmas rush several of the players will not be able to attend the games. Therefore it was found necessary to cancel the remaining games till after the New Year.

MACE'S CORQUEROR DEAD.

For Forty Years He Was Model Saloonkeeper in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19. — Few who watched the modest funeral procession accompanying the body of John Miller to the cemetery knew that he was other than a man who for forty years had been a model saloonkeeper of Chicago. Yet, half a century ago, his name was known throughout the pugilistic world as the conqueror of the famous English prize fighter, Jem Mace. Dr. Robert Stewart, who attended Miller in his last illness, said:

"Miller became English champion by the defeat of Mace. The fight took place in France and attracted much attention. In it Miller lost the sight of one eye, for that was before the days of boxing gloves. In one of his many fights on British soil he broke his right forearm. I asked him if the fracture stopped the fight. No, he said, 'it just started it.'"

MILK PRODUCERS, BEWARE!

Effort to Increase Prices May be Violation of New Law.

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—The Minister of Labour has notified the milk dealers of Sydney, N.S., that if they raise the price of milk from ten to twelve cents they will be liable to criminal prosecution for having combined to increase their price.

Hon. T. W. Crothers was asked to-day if he will also take action against Toronto and Hamilton milk producers over the raise to dealers. "The same case," said the Minister, "was called especially to my attention. We will deal with Toronto and Hamilton when we get around to it. Under the new legislation any agreement whatever between two or more, a body of men, or corporations, to increase the prices of any necessaries of life is a criminal offence within the meaning of the act."

MURDERERS' SACRIFICE.

Shorten Lives to Spare Relatives Agony at Christmas.

SING SING, Dec. 19.—Two youths, sentenced to be executed at Sing Sing prison this week, have voluntarily shortened their lives by at least three days that the grief of their relatives may be dulled as much as possible by Christmas.

They are Stanley J. Millstein, 19 years old, of Utica, who killed a policeman, and Charles Kumrow, 20, who killed a tugboat captain in Buffalo. They were to have been sent to the chair Friday or Saturday. The young men have requested that they be executed to-morrow. To this, it is said, the warden has assented.

WHAT 3 MONTHS WILL DO.

German Financial Agents in New York Make Prediction.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Leopold Zimmerman, head of the firm of Zimmerman & Forshay, personal representatives in this country of German Governmental financial institutions issued a statement, saying in part:

"The most delicate phase of the movement to end the war has been passed. The ice has been broken, and it but remains for the excitement of the situation to wear off, so that the conservative element may prevail. In well-informed circles, where leaders of European commerce prevail, preparations already are in the making in anticipation of an early peace. I think that by the end of ninety days the belligerents will be well on the way to agreement as to the terms of a lasting peace."

MISCHA ELMAN INJURED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Mischa Elman, the violinist, was injured when a taxicab in which he was riding collided with a surface car. His scalp was cut in two places, necessitating twelve stitches. His arms were also severely bruised.

Peel Off Your Rough Skin

To remove roughness, chaps or any complexion difficulty, the first thing to do is to remove the skin itself. This is easily and harmlessly done by the application of ordinary mercolised wax. The wax peels off the defective outer skin, a little each day, gradually bringing the second layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautifully soft, clear, white and young looking. Just procure an ounce of mercolised wax at any drug store and use like cold cream.

Better Cake and Biscuits

In all recipes calling for Baking Powder use Royal Baking Powder. You will get better and finer food and insure its healthfulness

Housewives are sometimes led to use inferior baking powders because of apparent lower cost, but there is very little difference in practical use—about one cent for a whole cake or pan of biscuits—a mere trifle when you consider the vast difference in healthfulness in favor of food made with Royal Baking Powder.

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes—a natural food product, as contrasted with alum, derived from mineral sources, and used in the manufacture of some baking powders because it is cheaper.

Germany May Divulge Her Peace Terms

Neutral Opinion is That Things Look Very Hopeful For a Peace Conference—Asquith Pledges Allegiance to Lloyd George Government

"PLAY THE GAME"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Ultra secret diplomacy will be employed in the next big move of the peace game, officials here believe. Britain probably will be willing that her official answer to Germany, which is expected soon, shall be made public. Officials believe, but there is doubt that Germany, if she accepts the invitation to state her terms, will consent to immediate publicity. The main obstacle to peace as this government sees it, is whether Germany is ready to give "full reparations" as asked by England.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.— Germany will probably give Lloyd George her peace terms on condition that they are kept secret by the allied governments.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.— Neutral opinion is that things look very hopeful for a peace conference shortly.

PEACE TALK FORCED

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Asquith, in the Commons, says that Germany was forced to talk peace by military necessity. Asquith touchingly pledged allegiance to the Lloyd George government. Lloyd George told the Commons that the British people must make food sacrifices and "play the game" to win the war. Drastic laws are coming to cut down excessive profits. Lloyd George cables the Canadian people in gratitude for the assistance in the war.

Appointment Foreshadows A Tightening of The Prohibition Screws

W. D. McPherson as Provincial Secretary of Ontario Will Have Charge of the Administration of the Liquor Laws of the Province—Hon. W. J. Hanna Remains as Minister Without Portfolio.

LIQUOR ADVERTISING BANNED

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, December 20.—W. D. McPherson will be the new Provincial Secretary, Hon. W. J. Hanna remaining Minister without portfolio. Premier Hearst has assumed portfolio of Agriculture, with Professor Creelman of the Ontario Agricultural College as Commissioner of Agriculture. A considerable tightening of the prohibition screws in Ontario is foreshadowed by the appointment of W. D. McPherson, K.C., to the post of Provincial Secretary of Ontario in the place of Hon. W. J. Hanna. This post carries with it the administration of the liquor laws of the province. It is expected that the Ontario Government will shortly introduce legislation prohibiting the publication of liquor advertising in Ontario newspapers. Mail order liquor houses located in New York and Michigan States, and in the Quebec Province have been occupying many columns in the newspapers lately, and the prohibitionists have complained to the Government that this does not help temperance in this "dry province" any. It is significant that the Mail and Empire, the chief Government organ in Ontario, this morning gives notice that it will carry no more liquor advertising. The World, also nominally Government supporting, does likewise. Both carry these notices in columns adjoining the announcement of McPherson's appointment.

SPAIN WRINGS TERMS FROM THE GERMANS?

Safety From Subs. For Spanish Vessels Carrying Fruit is Said to Be Pledged—Supplies of Staples Hoarded, and Government Proposes to Get at Them.

FOOD PROBLEM AGAIN

MADRID, Spain, December 20.—The new Law of Substances, a measure which was first introduced by the Dato Government, has now at last been passed, and constitutes the most remarkable Act of its kind ever carried through the Spanish Cortes. Its object is to guarantee the food and well-being of the people during the war and to prevent the country's resources being exploited unfairly. It withdraws, temporarily, the customs dues on importations of food commodities of the first necessity, and primary materials, imposes transport taxes on the railroad companies, fixes the price of foodstuffs, and gives the Government power, in case of necessity, to requisition the merchant fleet, and to fix the price of coal. If it is necessary, the Government proposes eventually to requisition wheat and other foodstuffs.

FOOD SUPPLIES HOARDED.

The Ministers of Finance and Commerce express themselves as quite satisfied that there exist in many places in the country great stores of wheat and flour which are more than enough to guarantee the food of the population, and these will be discovered and utilized. At the last moment a new clause was inserted in the measure giving power to the Government to proceed on its own responsibility with the acquisition of every kind of product judged necessary to the national economy. This is aimed particularly at the monopolists of coal and corn. Ministers say that the new law will be most rigorously applied, and that the monopolists will be broken without mercy. It is further declared that the Government has it in view to forbid the exportation of iron, thereby acquiring a basis for international negotiations, having for their object to obtain by reciprocity the importation into Spain of certain other articles. The Senate passed the new law when it came from the Chamber, without discussion.

GERMANY TO RESTRAIN SUBS?

The German Ambassador, the Prince de Ratibor, has had a long interview with the Minister of Public Works, Senor Gasset, on the various questions that have been raised in respect of Spanish navigation and exportation, and the interference of German submarines, and the result is that it is announced that Germany will give safe conducts to Spanish ships sailing to England with cargoes of fruit. The ship-owners, however, are skeptical about the value of these safe conducts and the press generally also. It is said that they ought to apply to ships carrying cereals also, and that on the other hand, it is injurious to the moral dignity of Spain to take seriously the propositions of the German Government

Agricultural Meeting Held in Lakefield

A meeting of the West Peterborough Board of Agriculture was held in Lakefield Monday evening. Members and friends prominent in the work of Farmers' Institutes throughout the County, were present. Among the speakers was Miss M. V. Powell of Whitby, Mr. H. Grose, a prominent agriculturist of Simcoe County, and Mr. F. C. McRae, district representative. Mr. J. A. McGregor is president of the Board, while Mr. Allan B. Mann fills the dual position of secretary-treasurer.

Miss Powell spoke of the work accomplished by the Women's Institutes, and the necessity of providing for the physical development of the children. The quarter of a million children in the public schools who never attend a higher institution of learning must be given every opportunity.

Mr. Grose dealt with the question of seeds and ways and means of testing them. The large kernels should be sown and the smaller ones fed. The value of the latter for feed exceeds that of the other, so nothing is lost by adopting this method.

Testing Seed.

Mr. Grose's method of testing the seed is to place about three inches of sawdust in a box, cover this with a cotton cloth, mark the space off into four squares, plant 100 seeds in each, cover that with another layer of cloth, add a few more inches of sawdust and keep the whole moist and in a summer temperature near the stove. At the end of eight days examine the seed and count the percentage that has germinated.

Mr. McRae in his tests uses light blow sand instead of sawdust and plants the seed in this. When the seed has grown it is easy to count the sprouts that come through. The idea is that grain that will germinate in blow sand will grow in any variety of soil.

The Deadly Sow Thistle.

The greatest weed enemy that the Ontario farmer has to fear to-day is the deadly sow thistle which is in evidence all over the province. Experience has shown that there is only one sure way to kill it, and that is the old-fashioned summer-fallow. The pest should never be allowed to get a start from the time the ground is first plowed in the spring until it is seeded in the fall. All other farm work must be made to take second place to that of fighting this weed. A hoe crop is one means of overcoming it, but this plan is no longer feasible on account of the scarcity of labour.

REACTION IN THE WHEAT MARKET

Prices Declined Rapidly Towards the Close—The Cattle Markets

Cash wheat situation is strong. Manitoba going up 2c and Ontario 4c. The speculative markets acted very strong at the opening, going up with a rush and gaining 6c to 7c on the December and May options. Anticipation that Lloyd George would reject peace proposals gave strength to the market. Suddenly and towards the close a violent reaction set in and prices declined as rapidly as they had been going up. It was said that Lloyd George had left the way open for negotiations.

BELGIANS ESCAPE IN BARRELS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—Mrs. M. C. Hennenway, who has brought a collection of Dutch paintings here from Paris for exhibition, says a great many Belgians have escaped over the border to Holland by getting into dry wooden flour barrels and rolling under the electrified cable which the Germans have installed along the front. The barrels came from Minneapolis, having been sent by the Belgian relief organizations.

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"Father only plays in amiable little games for the sake of charity, Aunt Hannah," Hamilton smiled indulgently as he enlightened her. "You could hardly call it gambling. It's gambling there is an element of chance. Father merely contributes."

The old lady shook her head. "This town ain't much different from Tyre and Sidon and Babylon, so far as I can see," she mournfully asserted.

They were said to be live towns in their day," he admitted.

Then for the rest of the spare hour he chatted with her and teased her solemnity into laughter, and before he left, because she asked it and complained that his eyes were poor, he read to her a chapter from the New Testament and kissed her good-night. Ten minutes later he was in his own library and was directing that two gentlemen, whom he was expecting, be ushered there to talk business.

The two were alike only in that each had a versatile and executive brain. One was elderly and stout, and though two decades of established success had polished his original crudity into a certain dignity, there smoldered in his eyes the darting shiftiness of glance that had settled there in days when his one asset was an almost diabolical cleverness as a criminal lawyer.

An old trick of badgering witnesses with a brow beating stare from half-closed lids clung unpleasantly to him, discounting his acquired distinction of bearing. This was Isaac Ruferton, of the firm of Ruferton & Willow. From criminal lawyer to corporation-scourge and from corporation-scourge to corporation counsel are logical stages of development. "From clients who need, and can pay for, a mind of unusual resource, as formerly from vagabonds in police court cages, he earned what he was paid.

The second visitor was younger. Mr. Tarring was also a Socialist in ideas and from his confidence of bearing one seemed to derive a snap of electric energy. In many ways Hamilton Burton found him serviceable, and on the smaller scale of his delegated inspections he operated as Hamilton himself did along the broader front; with dash, determination and the belief that nothing is impossible.

"Gentlemen," began Burton crisply, when the three were seated, "I sent for you this evening to outline a simple matter—but one calling for a nicety of execution. It can neither afford delay nor premature undertaking. It must be done at this instant. When the stock holders' meeting of Coal and Ore is called to order I must be in a position to assume control."

Tarring leaned forward in his chair and fixed his gaze on a bronze statuette. This casual announcement meant nothing less than a making over of a map, the map of High Finance. Ruferton was never surprised. He twirled his shell-rimmed glasses at the end of their broad tape and nodded. "And you find yourself at this juncture short of just the requisite balance—though you know where it is held?" Mr. Ruferton always made a point of anticipating his client's next statement—if possible. It was a small thing but at times valuable. It indicated that he was keeping not only abreast but a step ahead of what was being told him. Hamilton smiled.

"I still need a block held by Henry of the Deposit Savings and a block held by Farley of the Metallic National. These gentlemen think they won't turn loose. To see that they do so is Tarring's work. It must be accomplished by to-morrow evening."

Tarring said nothing. Under his imperturbable gnise he found himself stunned.

Burton turned to the attorney. "You know G. K. Hendricks?"

Mr. Ruterton's answer followed the question with no margin of a pause. "State senator for three terms. At present candidate for the appellate bench: Tammany's choice. Was very valuable when the charter for Coal and Ore was before the assembly. Has increased his stockholdings since he acquired his first block as—as the reward of merit."

For an instant Hamilton Burton eyed the lawyer keenly.

"I must also have his proxy by to-morrow evening. That Ruferton, is your work?"

"Then you did not know that Hendricks is upstate? He is out on his farm on a narrow-gage branch that runs a train a day from Barry Spa. You are cutting it fine, Mr. Burton, too fine, perhaps."

The announcement brought to the eyes of the planning strategist a nonplused shadow but it lingered briefly.

"I have already told you that the moment had to be precisely timed. Hendricks might run to Malone if given a chance of leisure. You can go home and change your evening clothes. Meantime I shall arrange for a special train. Your instructions are to get that stock or the proxy. If you can't handle him bring him to me; have him in this room at this hour to-morrow evening."

"Mr. Burton," he said slowly, "I am where I am in life because I have been willing to undertake various things at various times. Other men would have shied at some of them and even I have my limits. Will you suggest to me how I am, within 24 hours to travel 20 hours by train and compell an unwilling man to deliver, merely because you order it, stock which he has no wish to sell?"

Burton's answer rose to anger as he spoke. "If you can't trade with him—and I have given you carte blanche—I have already told you to bring him here. I'll do the rest."

"In God's name, how? Can I drag him out of his own house and load him like a trussed pig in a railway car?"

"The details are up to you. You are supposed to be a clever lawyer. The man is in a political campaign and you know enough of his record to give weight to your suggestions. You say he doesn't want to sell—make him want to! My plans are rather too large to admit of 'buts' and 'ifs.' Presumably I employ men who can override them."

Ruferton continued to stare blankly. "But—surely—"

Hamilton had already turned to Tarring and he wheeled with a snap in his voice.

"Ruferton," he exclaimed, "in a moment more you will irritate me. I said get his Coal and Ore, or get him. I don't care a continental how you do it. Tell him, if you like that all Tammany can't boost him on to the appellate bench if I go after him. If you prefer, gag him and drag him here. Do what you like except waste time by gaping at me. Succeed and name your reward. Fail and—" Hamilton Burton shrugged his shoulders.

Slowly a light crept into the reserveless eyes of Mr. Ruferton, driving out the vacuity. The matter by its very desperateness began to appeal to him and already a formula of campaign was shaping itself in his constructive mind. This extraordinary man's hypnotic dominance of personality had carried other audacious days and now it swept the lawyer with its tide of confidence. Mr. Ruferton became at once the man who recognizes the value of seconds and minutes. "I will be here to-morrow evening at this hour," he categorically announced.

And I shall bring with me a proxy or a senator or his remains. Kindly arrange for my train. I go direct to the Grand Central."

Hamilton Burton smiled at the door through which his emissary had departed.

"He made so much furore about it, as though I had required him to do something really difficult," he commented to the lieutenant who still awaited his orders. "Now for your part. . . . The Metallic National and the Deposit Savings." Between sentences he picked up the desk telephone and called a private number.

"I want to talk to Mr. Carter. . . . Not at home! Where is he? Doesn't want to be disturbed—he's got to be. Yes, this is Hamilton Burton. At the opera you say? Thank you."

The snap at the receiver under his finger was abrupt and decisive as he again called central, and while he waited he talked to Tarring.

"What funds have we in those bankers? Hello! I want Bryant 1146. yes, the Metropolitan Opera. Hello! Please have Mr. Carter brought from his box to the phone. This is Hamilton Burton talking. . . a matter that can't wait. . . Tarring, I must have the stock those banks hold. You must have them here to-morrow night. Hello, is that you Carter? I need a special train for Barry Spa in thirty minutes and another to meet it there for Lake Mosac."

There was a moment's silence, then Burton's voice came with violent explosiveness.

"Impossible! It seems that every man I talk to prates vacantly about impossibilities. Damn it, when I need a train I need a train. . . . You understand me, don't you Carter?"

Again there was the interruption of the voice at the farther end. As Burton listened his eyes kindled afresh under blackly drawn brows, but when he spoke it was in a clear and cold voice, more unpleasant to hear than a tirade of passion.

"To hell with explanations, Carter! I want action. Do I get my train? You are burning time. . . . Kindly listen, because I mean this to the last syllable. . . Unless you can achieve this highly impossible matter of accommodation," suddenly the voice leaped to a higher scale and shot out its ultimatum like canister—"I will throw you out of the presidency and the damned road-bed into the river inal plan of procedure."

and the shops into the junk heap. All right, please hurry." He clapped down the receiver, then resumed his second thread of thought as if there had been no interruption.

"I want those bankers here. That is your job, Tarring. They need know only that it is of vital importance, and that our meeting must be attended with the strictest confidence. Intimate that my object is the averting of ruinous runs which must follow—unless we stop them—and worse disasters."

Tarring rose. His task, as compared with the other that he had been assigned, appeared to be easy. "Shall I come with them?" he inquired.

Burton nodded. "You are a notary. It may be necessary for you to take acknowledgements."

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—A bill providing for settlement on returned soldiers of Dominion lands will be one of the principal measures to be submitted by the Government in the coming session of Parliament. Those New "Bran Foods"—a new one is born every week—a recognition of the need of food laxatives instead of drug laxatives. The problem of presenting bran to the human stomach in combination with a nutritious, easily digested food was solved twenty years ago by the invention of Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the food that supplies all the body-building material in the whole wheat grain in a digestible form, combined with bran, which is Nature's laxative. AMID RAIN OF SHELLS

Praise For Red Cross—One Canadian's Fine Luck

Driver Charlie Bertrand, of Ottawa, "somewhere in France" with an ammunition column, wrote a snappy descriptive letter to his mother, voicing praise of the splendid work done by the Red Cross Society. His letter in part reads: "I have had some pretty close calls. On one occasion a shell dropped within one yard of me but fortunately it was a dead one, which is not unusual. Of course we wear steel helmets for the shrapnel and it is not nice when the shells are flying about you and sometimes bury you in earth and mud. The roads are very bad here owing to the heavy rains, and as there are no paths or sidewalks it means wet feet every night.

"I will tell you what it is like out here. Not a wall or tree standing; not two bricks together—just a scene of destruction. On good roads we use four teams of horses to a wagon and I have seen seven teams hardly able to move it and into a shell hole about fifteen feet deep we go. There is no way out but to take off all our ammunition and pile it on the road before we can rescue the wagon and then reload again.

"I have seen poor wounded soldiers carrying worse wounded comrades to the dressing stations. I can tell you it takes a man, and a good one, to do that. I cannot write in too great praise of the Red Cross for they do great work in fixing the poor fellows up."

An exempted man who had failed to attend his volunteer drills was sent into the army at once at Wiesbaden, Ems.

THEIR HERO FATHER

How a Twenty-four-year-old Canadian Thought of "Kiddies"

Pathetic indeed, in the knowledge that the young soldier lies in a hero's grave, somewhere in France, is one of the last letters written home to his wife by Private Nelson John Lachance, aged 24, who, while serving with a distinguished Ottawa battalion, was killed in action. Roughly pencilled in the trenches, it was a cheery, brave letter, the uppermost thought in the writer's mind being the health and well-being of his wife and two kiddies, Nelson and Alice, at home. Near the end of the letter, Pte. Lachance asked this: "Does Nelson still think of his daddy, though I know he is kind of young to remember?" He added, "But, Irene, kiss them both for me, and don't forget your Nelson every night, for I want to be with you again soon."

Another part of the letter is as follows: "We have just come out of the trenches. I will call them trenches, but it would not be hard to give them a much more suitable name. It is hard to describe what they are like. Our own parapet has been blown in several times and the shells did everything but hit our sentry group. We were almost buried with earth several times. We had been in four days and came out for 24 hours' rest. We went in again and stayed 24 hours."

CRUEL VON BISSING

Belgium's Hard Master Had Reputation Even Among Prussians

An Englishman writes: Von Bissing, the Slavemaster of Belgium, was notorious in the German army for years before the war as a cruel martinet. He had been in retirement for some time before 1914—in consequence of cavalier treatment of the Kaiser on a certain occasion—but he was considered the right man to bully the Belgians because of his reputation for brutality in Germany.

No man, of course, was so directly responsible for the murder of Nurse Cavell as Bissing, and Huns at home may rest assured that no one could have carried out the deportation outrage more ruthlessly than he.

The enslavement of poor Belgium's men is, I suppose, in furtherance of Governor-General von Bissing's oft-proclaimed ambition to rule the conquered kingdom by "love."

Plea For Alien Patriots

Mr. W. C. Johnson gave notice to move at the meeting of the London County Council an instruction to the Stores and Contracts Committee not to exclude from the list of firms invited to tender the name of G. Schultz and Co. His motion was based on the fact that the two sons of the principal of the firm (who had been naturalised 30 years) had been killed while fighting with the British army in France. The same treatment was asked for the firm of J. H. Nagel and Co., the two partners and sole proprietors of which were serving in the British army.

SERBIAN RHAPSODY

A special edition of the official Serbian newspaper, Srpski Novine, announced the recapture of Monastir in these words: "Beneath the formidable blow of our armies from the east and from the allied armies from the south on November 19, at eight o'clock in the morning on the holiday of Sunday, Monastir, the star of Macedonia, our beautiful Serbian Monastir, welcomed once more the sun of liberty, which will never set again. Our good old King has once again set the diamond of Monastir in his crown. The young Crown Prince of Great Serbia has once more met with glorious success, and a crown of laurels has fallen on the brows of the sons of our veteran soldiers."

Hockey Star and Officer

Better known as Howard, one of the three famous hockey brothers and the bigger of the famous "Dynamite Twins," this powerful athlete became captain in the 228th Overseas Battalion, Northern Fusiliers, which was raised in the Cobalt and Sudbury districts. He was a defence player in the N.H.A. for years.

Woolwich Had Young V.C.

Private F. J. Edwards, one of the English V.C.'s, was twenty-one years old, and was, before the war, engaged in the catering department of the Western Electric Works, North Woolwich. He joined the Middlesex Regiment shortly after the outbreak of war, following the example of his father and step-father, who were both old soldiers. The official account says Edwards, at a critical moment, dashed out alone towards a German gun and knocked it out with bombs.

RAZOR FOR BAYONET; HEROES LEARN TRADES

How Canada Cares For Her Disabled Soldiers—A New Chance For Every Defender

A corner of the cobblers' room in one of Canada's military convalescent hospitals has been turned into a barber's shop. The barber, of course, is a soldier, but, unable to fight, he has exchanged the bayonet for the razor. The cobblers, too, are soldiers in the same situation, who have exchanged the rifle and bomb for the hammer and last.

That busy room, with cobblers and barber side by side, is a good illustration of the astonishing variety of methods employed by the Military Hospitals Commission, to equip Canada's disabled defenders for active service in the field of peaceful industry when forced to quit the field of battle. If a man is found unsuitable for one occupation, there is always another to try; and one of the main objects of the Commission is to discover what each man is suited for.

Self-Help

The barber was a difficult man to suit; but he was suited at last. The records does not state the number of fresh wounds inflicted on his wounded comrades by his preliminary operations; but they cannot have been very serious, for his chair became quite a popular resort. It is a self-supporting business, too. The chair and mirror were loaned by a patriotic firm; but the other requisites of the trade are paid for by the soldiers' five-cent shaves.

It is also an educational institution, this barber's corner, like the rest of the room. Ex-soldiers learn to shave the faces and cut the hair of their fellow-citizens as they learn to mend their shoes, or to act as carpenters and metal workers, draughtsmen and typewriters, bookkeepers and beekeepers, gardeners and engineers.

Need New Trades

A few, quite unfitted for their old trades, will need special training for new occupations, and will receive it freely, as well as money allowances for their families' support while they are being trained. But nearly every man is able to earn a good living when he comes out of the convalescent hospital. It remains for his fortunate fellow-countrymen, for whom he offered his life, to see that he always gets the work he is best able to do.

Prussian Means "Spy"

Spying is just as essential an ingredient of Prussian character as conceit, indifference to the feelings of others, jealousy, envy, self-satisfaction, industry, inquisitiveness, cruelty, veneration for officialdom, initiativeness, materialism, and the other national attributes that will occur to those who know Prussia, as distinct from the other German States.

It was in the Manchurian campaign of 1905 that wireless telegraphy was first used in warfare. At this date it was used by the Russian army.

SELF-SUFFICING EMPIRE

Canada's Minerals Vital in War and Peace, is Expert's Argument

Mr. Arthur A. Cole, President of the Canadian Mining Institute, addressed a Toronto audience on Canada's mineral wealth and war. Besides the world's greatest nickel deposits at Sudbury, he said Canada had also one of the richest silver camps in the world at Cobalt, and the most promising of the younger gold camps on the continent at Porcupine. Our smelters at Deloro and Theroid produce more refined cobalt than all the other refineries in the world put together. With such a magnificent heritage Canadians would be very delinquent in their duty if they did not give the mineral industry the careful attention it deserves. Heretofore there had been too little co-operation between miner and manufacturer, and the lack of organization became apparent when war broke out.

A special committee of the Canadian Mining Institute had been studying the mineral and metal industries of Canada to learn to what extent Canada can supply the requirements of the Empire in order to make it self-supporting and independent of outside sources, and also how to utilize the natural resources of Canada more in building up home industries. We are now exporting much raw material which should be manufactured here, and also importing supplies which we might produce. The speaker appealed to the general public to study industrial problems so as to assist in their solution. Most of the $7,000,000 annually spent in running the Cobalt mines eventually finds its way to Toronto. Northern Ontario will soon be producing $20,000,000 in gold and silver annually, and there are better chances of locating valuable mineral deposits there than in any other country in the world

From All Over Canada

The 244th Battalion, Kitchener's Own, got many men from all over the Dominion—men anxious to be associated with a battalion bearing the name of the great man who brought an army into being. Over one week-end, Kitchener's own enrolled two men from Saskatchewan — Lindsay Caldeck, from Drake, and Harold Cole, from Tribune. The battalion also enrolled Joseph Delanchrey, of Newfoundland, whose brother was killed in the war, while Frank Ernest Caldecot, of Cambridge, Eng., joined up for the same reason. Kenneth McKay, a recruit from Marmora, Que., served through the South African War, gaining the Queen's and King's Medals with clasps.

CHEATING HERR PASTOR

German Government Cleverly Feeds His Hate of England

Although the social position of the pastor in a German village is less than that of a minor Government official, yet he and his wife wield a considerable influence. The leading pastors receive each week many of the Government propaganda documents, including a digest carefully prepared for them by the Foreign Press Department. What purport to be extracts from the London newspapers are in genious distortions. Sometimes a portion of an article is reprinted with the omission of context which entirely alters its meaning. The recipients of this carefully prepared sheet believe implicitly in its authenticity. Any chance remark of a political nobody in the British House of Commons that seems favorable to Germany is quoted extensively

Where Santa Claus Gets his Dolls

It hardly seems fair to give away this secret on the old, chubby, red-cheeked chap who made our youthful days happy and sad in turn, but, in the face of the European war and the closing of the great toy shops in Germany, Santa Claus has been hard put to find help in making dolls for the ever increasing population and, perhaps, since he has found the needed aid in America, he won't mind if America tells on him—just this once.

There was a time when he made all his dolls in his workshop at the North Pole and delivered them personally on Christmas morning, but of late years age has handicapped him and this, plus the increase in demand, has caused him to flash an "S O S" signal to the world at large. To this call, as in every other instance, America was first to reply, and replied with a vim.

If the little girl at home asked that Santa bring her a doll for Christmas, all other things being equal, she got the doll. Mother went to the shop where the prices best fitted her pocketbook and bought the doll. It's an even wager that she never did stop to consider where Santa got this doll or anything about the workers who pass all days of the year, save Sundays, making them. Heretofore this country and, I believe, every other country, looked to Germany as the chief auxiliary to Santa in the doll making industry, but right now America is putting on the market just about the best thing in the way of dolls that has ever been produced.

America has always made dolls, but they were the stuffed body type of doll with the glue composition head; the doll which, if the young "mother" in a rage, threw across the room, lost half a head or an ear or two, or spilled tons of sawdust on the nice clean carpet. From Nuremberg came the doll made of papier mache, with the fully formed body and held together by glue. Left in the rain, the Nuremberg dolly fell apart.

Christmas this year would have been a sad one for many little girls had not the ever ready genius of the American come to their aid and produced a doll which not only defies bad temper but bad weather as well. A visit to a number of fine toy shops in our big cities showed me that there is a scarcity of dolls. I asked about the American doll manufacturers and how they compared with the German manufacturers and was told that since the great import trade in dolls has been cut almost to nothing an American firm has jumped into the breach and not only pulled Santa Claus out of a hole, but has produced a doll that is marvelled.

New York is where Santa Claus gets not all of his dolls but his best dolls. There you will find a complete monopoly in the newest sort of doll and a shop that has no equal in this country. There are thousands of interesting facts in connection with the manufacture of the American doll and it would take a volume to give the complete history of one doll from the time it is a mass of pulp until, dressed, it is placed in the shop window for sale. Six days are required in all to make a doll. In that time it has gone through a dozen different processes and has been handled by a score of workers. It is safe to assert that no doll receives the careful attention after leaving the shop that it receives during the process of manufacturing. Did you know that the doll must go to the oculist, the manicurist, the chiropodist and the hair dresser before the official O. K. is placed on her appearance? It's true.

In going through the workshop we first see the doll in the form of a brown substance which does not look unlike brown sugar. The composition is a secret in this particular case and is called a wood-flour composition. A press containing moulds under which there is a steady gas flame is close by the barrels of composition, and the workmen every six minutes fill a mould and bake it. The moulds make half a body, half a leg or half an arm in just six minutes. When the half a leg leaves the press it is a very rugged looking specimen and when it is placed with the other half does not resemble a leg. From the press the two parts go to the glue pot, where a glue composition fastens them together in such a manner that it is almost impossible to get them apart.

Next comes the butter. After the glue has been given time to dry and set the leg looks like, and begins to take off the rough edges with the buffing wheel. It is rather a difficult task to grind off all the excess material and leave a perfectly formed limb, but all the workmen in the shop are skilled in their line and they perform their labor mechanically. I was informed that very little material is wasted and that there are but few moulds. Once the leg is smooth and in shape a dipping process follows. A white composition which resembles whitewash in appearance is spread over the surface and allowed to dry. This operation finished, the leg is ready for another coating, which is the skin color.

Nothing Poisonous in Composition.

I inquired as to the chemicals contained in the several solutions and asked whether or not the ingredients might not cause trouble if the thoughtless child decided to nibble on the hand or foot. I was told that in all the solutions there was practically nothing that could not be eaten.

The leg of the doll finished, the least of the work has been done. The feet are separate parts and so are the hands. You see, this doll must be able to point in any direction without moving the whole arm and must be able to assume any terpsichorean pose.

Hands and feet are made in moulds. This also is a delicate task. How many dolls have you seen that were minus a few fingers or toes? A solid composition must be had that is not too brittle. To a certain extent this problem has been solved, and the little hand, perfect to the last finger nail, may be tossed around by the child with a certain amount of safety. The assembling of the leg with the knee joint and the separate foot, joined at the ankle, is the work of another department and must be done with accuracy and [illegible] the doll will not stand up. [illegible] are the [illegible] that they do not [illegible] to keep up their [illegible] of several months.

The body, or torso, is done by the [illegible] and it is turned out to appeal

mately six minutes. As with all the other parts, the torso is whitened and smoothed before it is given the dip in flesh color. As a matter of fact, the whole doll when assembled, with the exception of the head, has received two dippings in the [illegible] very much like a young turkey as it hangs suspended on the drying rack. The most delicate work in connection with building a doll is, of course, the forging and care of the head. The doll must be pretty. There was a time when the ringlet was just as much beloved as any other top, but the little lady of today wants the pretty dolly and insists on a particular color hair for her doll. All these things have to be taken into consideration by the manufacturer.

Before we discuss the head, which means the placing of the wonderful moving eyes and the moving tongue and the [illegible] let us go to the manicure parlor and watch a young woman put the doll's finger nails into condition. They must have the real red tinge of the human nail and must look polished. This is work for an artist and there is an artist there to do it. After carefully scraping the place where the nail should be, the surface is glossed. Of course there isn't any nail, but when the manicurist gets through with the little hand it looks as though there was.

A little touch of color, the lightest tinting in, gives the pink appearance and when this is greased over you have the perfect finish. This operation must be performed on ten tiny fingers, and it also goes more or less, for ten tiny toes.

When the manicurist finishes the little doll, as far as her hands are concerned, is ready for the finest drawing room in the country.

And now comes the head. For many years the imported doll, pretty and trim, had a fixed stare in the eyes because the orbs were always in the same position. The doll of to-day eliminates the stare. She does everything but talk. Artistic work is required on the head, because even with the introduction of the sleeping eyes the eyes must fit or the doll loses its beauty. So the head, after having been carefully moulded, is passed along to the dipper and then goes along to the knight of the brush. Lips must be made red, of course, whether the doll eventually is to be a blonde or brunette. Careful hands place the "Cupid's bow," and then comes the chap who deftly paints the eyebrows. In the trade these workers are known as "beauty doctors," and when they have finished it is no wonder that the average fellow likes to call his best girl a "doll."

Shortage of Eyes.

The inventor of the "sleeping eyes" is Mr. A. E. Fountain. He admits that it was not until he was hard pressed that the idea occurred to him, and then he perpetrated a most successful invention. Mr. Fountain also tells an interesting story of how he discovered the method of making eyes when, because of the war, the imported eyes of crystal became scarce and he found that he had a number of dolls in stock but not enough eyes to go around. When the European supply threatened Mr. Fountain knew [illegible] the eyes [illegible] but not least, there is the real hooded [illegible] that the red eyes are the most becoming and turn out the best. The doll purchased with regard to the red headed doll is the same as any other business where [illegible] models are used and where the [illegible] glory is usually a Titian effect.

Altogether it takes six days to finish one of these little toys. What manufacturers want to emphasize most this year is that there is no necessity for going out of this country for the Christmas gift that is nearest to the heart of the little girl.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Parson Frake's Donation

And He Took the Bishop's Advice.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

When Arthur Frake was graduated from the theological seminary before taking his departure he called on the bishop to take leave of him and thank him for various acts of kindness the good old man had favored him with during his period of study.

"Well, my boy," said the bishop, "going out to service in the Lord's vineyard, eh? Sit down. I have a few words to say to you on one subject, and one subject only. You've got all the theology you need in the seminary. It isn't that which I wish to speak to you about. It isn't anything concerning the methods you should observe in your work. It is this:

"We clergymen are apt to be made or marred—as all men are—by the wives we choose. Now, look out whom you marry. Your field is not a worldly field, and if you marry a worldly woman it would be better for you that you tied a millstone about your neck. It doesn't matter where you find a wife, whether in the city or in the country. She should have a sympathetic nature, to feel for those whom it becomes your part to help. Indeed, she should make your work her work."

This was the bishop's advice. Mr. Frake was much impressed with it, but he had his doubts about finding a girl that would fill his adviser's conditions. He had always associated with the upper ten thousand and had not found much unselfishness among them, instead of living for the world he had usually found them disposed to consider the world as especially created to administer to their comfort.

Nevertheless he shrank from taking a life partner except from the class to which he belonged. Would it not be better to be allied with a woman of fashion than with one whose unpolished manners would constantly put him to the blush? Then, too, his own family were to be considered. Naturally they would expect him to marry one whom they might receive as a social equal.

Mr. Frake's first call was to a village wherein dwelt only a few thousand people. His congregation was not at all like those of which he had been a member himself during his boyhood and youth. They were plain people, honest in their way, but as to spirituality, or, rather, humanity, he did not find them any better than those he had known in the city. One day soon after taking the pastorate while writing in his study, looking up from his sermon, he saw his housekeeper standing in the doorway.

"What is it, Mrs. Wells?" he asked patiently.

Mrs. Wells, fat and panting from a morning spent over the ironing board, wiped her forehead with a crisp white handkerchief.

"I wondered what would come next," she groaned. "First, there was the Tuttles making trouble over the distributing of the pews, then the quarrel in the choir, and I knew that there would be a third calamity!"

"You haven't told me what it is," smiled Arthur Frake.

"A donation, sir!"

"A donation," he repeated, aghast. "Dear me, I wish they wouldn't, Mrs. Wells. They mean well, but"—

"Oh, their intentions are all right," interrupted the housekeeper darkly for she had served many ministers and many donation parties, "but they don't realize that by the time they've descended like a flock of locusts and eaten all the food they've brought and more, too, why, I'm left with a house to be cleaned from top to bottom and you're the richer by a jar of Beulah Humphrey's sour pickles and maybe a few bushels of potatoes that we didn't have time to cook for 'em."

Arthur Frake laughed heartily.

"There's a measure of truth in what you say, Mrs. Wells," he admitted. "Still, I suppose we must look at the motive underneath this invasion. They mean to be kind, and we must do the best we can to make it pleasant for them. When is it to be?"

"Tomorrow night and a complete surprise. I wouldn't have known a word of it if Betsy Haskell hadn't warned me. I'm glad to know, so's I can bake some beans and corn bread; then they needn't eat up all the layer cakes and salads they bring!"

She lumbered out of the room and left the minister to resume his sermon. This was his first charge, and he was sincerely desirous of being adviser and friend to his little flock. They were all plain village people, with a large percentage of prosperous families among them.

He had heard of donation parties, but he had believed that they were festivities of the past century. Still, Bayport clung to many traditions, and it was evident that a donation party for the new minister was a cherished institution.

So he submitted with good grace and the next afternoon picked all the chrysanthemums in the parsonage garden to bedeck the immaculately neat but rather severe rooms.

As he wandered about Arthur Frake was conscious that his home lacked the feminine touch. Mrs. Wells was an excellent cook and housekeeper, but she was not a home maker.

He thought rather ruefully that it might be many years before he had a wife. Certainly he had never met the girl of his dreams, and he was not likely to find her in this remote village.

There was not a speck of dust to be seen in the parsonage when the kerosene lamps were lighted. It would be an hour yet before the donation party would arrive, and some one was talking volubly to Mrs. Wells in the sitting room. Their voices reached the minister in his study. Mrs. Wells' wheezy tones were punctuated by another woman's shrill utterances.

"Millie Rhodes says it's the first time they've never been able to give five bushels of potatoes to the new minister, and I says to her, I says: 'Don't cry, Milly. Mr. Frake will understand how it is—your pa being sick so long and your ma dying, and all.' But she only said she wished she had something to give, because she had to stop putting anything into the plate at church. 'Seems to me, Mrs. Smith,' says she, 'seems to me poor folks are just squeezed tight to the wall. The Bible says not to place any value on money, and yet it's the only thing that seems to count in this world.'" The speaker drew a long breath.

"Poor child!" sobbed Mrs. Wells. "I hope she ain't going to stay home just because she can't bring anything."

"I told her she would have to come anyway. Ann Dent is going to stay with Mr. Rhodes for a spell."

The doorbell rang, and Mrs. Wells hurried into the hall. Arthur Frake heard her exclamation of pleasure.

"Why, Millie, child, I am glad to see you!" she cried. "Come right in and meet Mr. Frake. You've never met him, your pa being sick ever since Mr. Frake came. Oh, Mr. Frake, here's the first one, Miss Millie Rhodes, from the Hollow farm!"

In this disjointed fashion Arthur Frake met a parishioner whom he had never seen. Millie Rhodes was a tall, fair girl, with soft blue eyes and a sweet mouth. She was dressed in black, and he recollected that they had said she had lost her mother. Her arms were filled with flowers—chrysanthemums of every color, great branches of crimson dogwood berries, trailing lengths of orange and scarlet bittersweet and a bunch of pink geraniums with sweet smelling leaves.

"It was all I had to bring," she said a little wistfully as she dropped them on the study table.

"And a beautiful donation, Miss Rhodes. I thank you," said the minister sincerely as he took her hand. "Will you add another favor—arrange them about the rooms? No, only in this room," he added whimsically.

So Millie Rhodes stepped lightly to and fro, arranging vases and bowls of flowers on mantelpiece and tables, trailing the dogwood and bittersweet berries over pictures and mirrors and at the minister's request placing the bowl of pink geraniums on his desk.

"Rose geraniums are my favorite flowers," he said gravely. And they were from that instant.

Then came the sound of laughter and a loud ringing at the front door. The house was filled with a merry crowd of the minister's flock, all pushing forward to shake his hand and utter good wishes. Each one brought something—a bag or bundle or basket—and soon the kitchen tables were heaped with bushels of potatoes, apples, dried fruit, bags of flour, jars of preserves and pickles, toothsome layer cakes and pies and all the goodies that farmers' wives know how to manufacture.

Millie Rhodes sat quietly in a corner with a group of friends, and there was a quiet happiness in her face that no one save Mrs. Wells and Sarah Smith and, of course, the minister quite understood.

Millie's donation beautified the minister's own room, and unconsciously her fingers had given the deft womanly touches that the room needed.

By and by some asked her to sing, and she arose and, unaccompanied, sang in a sweet, flutelike voice many old ballads that brought tears to the eyes of the older people.

"I should like my wife to sing like that," thought Arthur Frake as he moved among his people.

This donation was not exactly like other donation parties. Even Emma Wells admitted that. To begin with, there was such an abundance of gifts that the company could not possibly dispose of them at the supper, which was served at 10 o'clock.

Then Mr. Frake was young, and youth creates a different atmosphere. The old parsonage had always been a gloomy place in the pastorate of the aged Mr. Walker, and tonight there was such a feeling of cheerfulness and good fellowship between young and old that the parish was united in stronger bonds of love than ever before.

"Good night," they called as they went away—"good night, Mr. Frake, and good luck."

And Arthur Frake, having blessed them a few moments before, fell on his knees in the fragrant little study and poured out his soul in thankfulness for the kindness that was showered upon him.

And he especially prayed for Millie Rhodes, who had given what she could out of her meager store.

There came a day in the following year, after Millie had been bereft of her remaining parent, that Arthur Frake lingered at the Hollow farm and asked Millie to come and make the parsonage a home for him.

"It will be a donation," he smiled down at her, "the best donation you can make to me and my people. We need you, Millie Rhodes."

And when they were married, why, of course the minister's people must make another donation, and this time the parsonage was cozy and homelike with a woman's touch, the same touch which had lighted the flame of love in the minister's heart.

Was Completely Laid Up With Severe Case of Piles

Sworn Statement From a Man Who Has Unbounded Confidence in Dr. Chase's Ointment

There is no longer any debate as to the best treatment for itching, bleeding or protruding piles But since about one person in every four suffers more or less from this annoying ailment it is necessary to keep on telling the people about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Wm. Shaw, Island Brook, Que., writes: "I am writing this to let you know the benefit that I have derived from your Ointment. I have suffered more or less for years with protruding piles and last winter I got so bad I was completely laid up with them. I went to our local storekeeper and asked him if he had anything that was good for piles and he recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment. I purchased a box and took it home and used it according to the directions and for over one year I have not been troubled with piles. I had tried other remedies before but they only gave me temporary relief and that one box of your Ointment did more for me than all the others, as I have not been troubled since last winter. I consider it to be the best remedy for piles I have ever used and shall always carry a box with me, although I don't think I will need it for piles. We have used it for other purposes in the family, such as burns, and cuts and scratches, etc., and my wife says it is one of the best remedies for such purposes we have ever had in the house. Although you only charge sixty cents a box for it it is well worth $3.00 a box for anyone who is afflicted with piles. Now you can use this letter if you wish or refer anyone to me who wants to know about it for piles. I might say that in my business I am known all over the English portion of Quebec, and am having this statement sworn to before a Justice of the Peace."

KING AS PRESIDENT

Sketch of Novel Imperial Constitution For British Peoples

In a study of "The Problems of Empire," Lionel Curtis deals with the training of a constitution for the future government of the Empire which he prefers to call the commonwealth. Mr. Curtis would provide a great central Imperial parliament, in which all the colonies, and, to a certain extent, the dependencies of the British Empire would be represented, and would give this parliament power to arrange all matters involving the foreign policy of the Empire. The position of the King Emperor in the scheme suggested would be that of "hereditary president."

After considering various proposals, and dismissing them as impracticable, Mr. Curtis arrives at the conclusion that there should be two British parliaments at Westminster, one for the control of the domestic affairs of the British Isles and the other, or "Imperial parliament," for the foreign affairs of the Empire. The colonies are to be fully represented in this second or "Imperial parliament," and every colony is to furnish a minister, with or without a portfolio, to its cabinet. Each colony would continue to maintain its own parliament at home for the management of its domestic affairs, as at present. Mr. Curtis further proposes that the dependencies of the British Empire—such as British India—should be represented in the Imperial parliament.

AMID ACRES OF HORRORS

Unendurable Sights and Sounds But Quick Recovery

Urging never-ceasing attack, a British correspondent writes from France: It is not only the bursting shell and fear of attack that the enemy has to endure. The sights of the battlefield weaken men's fibre even more than the sounds. A German soldier wrote as follows: "Trenches quite fallen in. . . Dead and buried were to be seen in masses in and out of the trenches. . . Six or eight men were lying near piled one on the top of the other. On the way to our 6th Company, which we found after a search of two and a half hours, there were just as many corpses and men buried by shells and men who had not been properly buried. We saw terrible sights."

I have left out the worst passages, but this is enough to hint what the enemy's soldiers have to endure, and the new battlefield reveals acres of such spectacles. A number of men have not been able to endure it. Almost all—I speak of men, not officers—are glad to be prisoners. But this alleged German demoralisation is physical, and the body recovers. When we relax the enemy recovers quickly.

Private, Guest of General

The new armies have destroyed many old traditions, and the passing of such a one is seen (says the Yorkshire Evening Post) in the announcement that Pte. Albert Hill, V.C., of Denton, is staying at Aldershot as the guest of Brigadier-General R. J. Kentish. Pte. Hill was decorated by the King at Buckingham Palace and in the evening met the brigadier-general, who commanded the brigade when Hill won the V.C. Hill was the guest of the general at the Oxford Music Hall and occupied a box. For a few days Hill was the guest of the general at Aldershot, and an officer and private travelled to Denton, where they were met by troops, a regimental band, and there was a civic reception.

This Bush Yields only 2½ ozs. yearly

A VERY small yield considering the size of the bush. It takes about 6½ bushes to yield a pound of ordinary tea—and about 10 bushes to yield a pound of Red Rose Tea, as only the tender shoots and buds are used to produce the distinctive flavor and richness which characterize this high-grade tea.

In sealed packages only. Try it.

RECIPES WORTH KEEPING AT HAND.

Spiced Pear Salad.

Wash and peel the pears, then cut into quarters. Turn into a saucepan with a tablespoonful of finely chopped Canton ginger, sugar to taste and a few drops of lemon juice. Cook very slowly until the pears are tender, then set aside to cool. When perfectly cold moisten the pears with French dressing and chill. When ready to serve place the pears on crisp leaves of lettuce and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Chocolate Ice Cream.

Two ounces chocolate, one quart cream, three-quarters cupful sugar, one-half teaspoonful vanilla.

Melt the chocolate, add the cream and sugar and boil all together for ten minutes. When cold add vanilla, and turn into a pan which has been scalded and cooled. Freeze in the usual manner.

Stewed Prunes de Luxe.

Ingredients — One pound prunes, enough water to cover, one-half pint red wine, one-quarter pound of sugar, cinnamon, one-quarter pint of cream.

Method — Soak the prunes in the water for 24 hours. Put in a saucepan with one-half pint of water and the wine, add the sugar, and a small stick of cinnamon. Stew very slowly until the liquor is reduced to half, then set aside to get cold. Whip the cream quite stiff.—Put the prunes in a glass dish, add a squeeze of lemon and pile the cream on top.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine loosen the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent its spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

Ten years of experience were necessary to perfect the new glass utensils in which food can be both cooked and served.

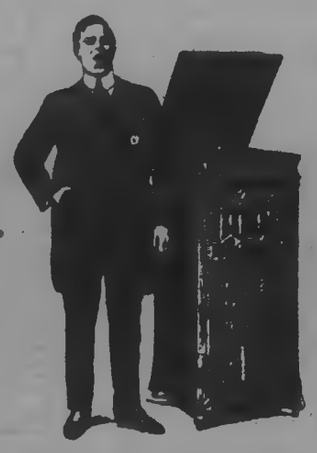
Real CHRISTMAS Music



THOMAS CHALMERS

Famous baritone of the Boston Opera, singing in direct comparison with the New Edison, a test that has been made before, and astounded, thousands.

Let These Artists Sing in Your Home

SUPPOSE Thomas Chalmers came to your house Christmas Eve and sang "O Holy Night." It would be a treat, wouldn't it? And suppose while you were all enjoying Christmas dinner, a famous choir sang carols outside your window—and then in the evening as you settled down by the fireside, Carl Flesch and Marie Rappold and Spalding and Christine Miller all came in and gave you their best music—wouldn't it be a Christmas to remember?

Do you know that the music these artists render is reproduced so perfectly on that you cannot tell which is the human rendering and which the Edison Recreation? That sounds like an extravagant statement, doesn't it? But it has been proven in public. It is a fact. The New York Globe refers to the instrument as "The Phonograph with a Soul," after having heard the Edison and the living artist sing together for comparison.

CHRISTINE MILLER

The great concert contralto.

Miss Miller sang in Detroit in direct comparison with her voice re-created by the New Edison. The Detroit Free Press summed up, "It was not possible to distinguish one from the other."

There will be Joy in Your Home

Will there be Real Music in your home at Christmas? Edison has made it possible. It is for you to take advantage of his genius. Come to our store and hear the re-created voices of the great artists and the music of violin, 'cello, flute, harp and piano. We ask only that you come and listen. A visit implies no obligation to buy.

Babylon Beaten By New York Orgy Of Money-Chasing

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—New York is rolling, revelling, rollicking in wealth.

This is a "never before in history" story.

New York banks to-day held reserves of $816,794,200 and from every quarter of the Globe money is pouring in—actual yellow gold by the million to be changed from the coin of other nations into the coin of the U.S.A.

Wall Street has become a gambling table onto which is being thrown money from the earnings winnings and savings of Americans and money from the coffers of Kings.

While the large majority of New York's six millions are fighting the universal desperate battle with the cost of living, on the surface it appears that everybody has money to spend.

BABYLON IS BEATEN.

Forty or more blocks in Manhattan are given over entirely to that ancient trio, wine, woman and song. War-bride 'dividends have given night-time Broadway a new life. Men whose business is to take money from spenders say they never were able to take so much of it before. Ancient Babylon could be set down inside New York's winter pleasure grounds without being noticed. Nebuchadnezzar would not have a reputation outside his own block.

Cabarets have sprung up like mushrooms and dance halls thrive as in any new gold camp.

"Business is three times as big as the biggest we ever saw before this season," said the manager of the largest cabaret in the city. Hotels are crowded, theatres sold out. Crowds that the "shop early" slogan do not account for, fill the department stores. Warehouses are depleted of stocks and deliveries are far behind. New York is spending its money and getting what it can for it.

But it keeps pouring in. From farmers in the West to at least one monarch on an European throne they are sending their money to New York. The greater part of it is emptied into that section of the city included by the name of Wall Street.

On the Stock Exchange "million-share days" have come to be considered the regular thing, whereas two years ago 400,000 shares made a good day's trading. When, sometimes, the trading reaches two million shares it is scarcely noticed.

Over and round about the floor of the Stock Exchange, they have put a wire bomb netting to ward off any possible eventuality, and on the floor the traders are buying and selling in a frenzy such as they never knew before.

SHARES AT HUGE PRICES.

At least, they so describe it. Nobody who is not a member of the Exchange can see them trade, even the members' guests' gallery having been closed. But last Saturday—the anniversary, by the way, of the re-opening of the Stock Exchange after being closed four months following the beginning of the war—transactions in the two-hour session totalled 669,091 shares.

The prices at which these shares are being dealt in are such prices as the Exchange seldom has known. Steel stocks offered at 42 two years ago, now have a mob of shouting, clamoring men bidding for them at fifteen times that price.

TONIC THAT BRINGS HEALTH

"Fruit-a-tives" Builds Up The Whole System

A RECRUITING POEM.

Won't you Peterboro boys enlist?
Don't you know we want you to go?
If you have a sweetheart here
You may write to her, you know.

Have you forgotten the other boys,
Who have gone to fight the foe?
You are no better men than they,
So get a khaki suit and go.

You would better look in khaki,
And your name would be better too,
Come now don't be a coward,
Come and we will put you through.

Come boys and fill this battalion,
Your King and Country needs you now;
Help to keep the old flag waving,
Like the boys who have gone ahead.

Girls can take your left positions,
So you can't make that excuse,
And you know the girls are proud of the boys
When they get their khaki suits.

Why don't they shut the poolrooms up?
Gambling won't help make a peace.
Then we'll get the slackers to enlist,
Instead of playing pool.

George Street don't need guarding
By boys in civilian suits;
Telegraph poles don't need propping up,
For we've got to have recruits.

West and South Pour in Orders For War Stocks

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—So anxious are the West and the South to dump their money into the New York stock market that the Western Union and the American Telegraph and Telephone Companies cannot provide enough wires to accommodate them. Hundreds of sales go by the board, simply because the wires cannot carry the offers.

When Germany's sudden peace proposals caused the greatest dumping of stocks into the exchange since the "silent panic" of 1907, the selling orders of the western and southern traders did not reach the floor of the exchange until late in the afternoon. These out of town speculators, who generally buy—play the market long—lost in the shakedown, while a large bulk of the professional traders of the Wall Street district had sold short and took profits on the decline.

Girl Signallers Now.

So furious is the trading on the stock exchange that the tickers, supposed to keep every broker's and banker's office in even touch with quotations, are sometimes eighteen minutes behind the market. Even in the cotton and grain exchanges business has become too fast for the telegraph wires, and the tickers frequently lag five or ten minutes behind.

In the open windows of the curb brokerage houses, one to-day could see girls making the wild, mystic signals to the traders on the pavement—that never before were made by feminine fingers, the supply brokers' employees has run short of the demand.

And lambs are so plentiful that a bright young man who started a magazine for their special treatment four months ago, is a full blown publisher to-day with big circulation and advertising.

R. T. Halsey, of the Finance Committee of the Stock Exchange, when asked for an explanation of the six two-million share days and the twenty-one million share days on the exchange during the last month, said: "The people of the West are trading in New York stocks in a way none of us ever saw before. They have money as a result of the big prices for crops, and they are making more of it here, many of them. The good cotton prices likewise have put the people of the South into the market. They are newcomers. Southern business on the exchange in past years has amounted to practically nothing. Now it amounts to millions.

Foreign Business Grows.

Wm. C. Van Antwerp, Governor of the Stock Exchange agreed, explaining that the people in remote sections are trading by wire in the stocks of concerns they know. Utah Copper, Texas Oil and Montana Power Stocks, he said, bring orders from their respective states in large numbers.

"But the influence of the foreign business is more significant to my mind," he said. "South Americans are coming into this market as the result of conditions in London and Paris that have shut them out of their usual market. The volume of business from down here is becoming very big.

"From Europe the cables are carrying on enormous business to New York. The increase in our foreign listing has been largely responsible for the general increase of about 500 stocks handled by the New York Stock Exchange. From 1,200 our listings have been raised to 1,700.

"New York undoubtedly will retain most of this new stock business after the war. In fact, we expect to see it increase and this city to remain permanently the financial centre of the world."

Discourage Speculation.

At least one third of the stock exchange trading is straight investment, Mr. Antwerp declared. As for the speculation, he said the Stock Exchange is exerting every effort to keep the market free of manipulation and every safeguard the Governors can conceive has been thrown about trading.

"The very immensity of the business now being done," he said, "may be expected to bring on a call for congressional investigation. Whether it does or not, the Stock Exchange intends to keep its records clean."

Wm. Shearer, manager of the New York Clearing House, can testify to the prevalence of the speculation bacillus.

"Some gamblers up in New England," he protested indignantly today, are running a pool based on the clearing house figures. They offered me a 'split' on the profits—$50 or so a week—if I would slip them the figures in advance of the public announcement."

Mr. Shearer's official statement on the banks in the clearing house, at the close of last week's business showed the banks to be carrying $73,790,840 more reserve than required by law. It showed also that the total reserve then in the bank's vaults, $347,726,000 was in actual hard money.

NO BATTLESHIP DAMAGED.

Another Report of Injury to French Vessel is Denied.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 19.—A French battleship of the Patrie class was torpedoed and badly damaged by a German submarine in the Mediterranean on Dec. 12, according to an official statement issued in Berlin.

The statement also reports the torpedoing on Dec. 11 of the "armed French transport Maghelan," a six thousand ton vessel having on board 1,000 troops.

Denied by French.

London, Dec. 19.—It was stated by the French Admiralty that there is no truth in the statement that a French man-of-war of the Patrie class was damaged on December 12, and that the loss of the Magheln already has been reported.

Iron Acts Wonders on a Week, Run-Down Nervous System

Puts Roses in Pale Cheeks

Give you pep, vigour, and 100 p.c. more strength in 10 days.

Dr. Mainprise of Saskatchewan, advises people who are weak, run-down, anaemic and nervous, to start to-day to strengthen themselves by taking Iron for their blood. It has always been an understood fact that Iron was an excellent remedy for the blood, but owing to its constipating, nauseating effect it has been eliminated from use. Doctors have overcome this by combining the iron with phosphorus which forms a new iron and at the same time the phosphorus used acts as one of the greatest nerve tonics known to medical science. You now have what is known to your druggist as Bonised Phosphorus with Iron. Dr. Mainprise finds this tonic to be four fold in action. It charges the system with new blood, stronger nerves, greater strength and a new Digestion. Your stomach will now be ready for good, big hearty meals that will be thoroughly digested. Start to-day and take Bonised Phosphorus with Iron if you are thin, pale, weak, tired, run down, anaemic, nervous, etc., and in ten days you will be full of pep, bright, vigorous, alert, attaining the glow of happiness. Stop taking all sorts of worthless patent medicines, cheap laxatives, for what you imagine will cure kidney troubles, stomach pains, rheumatism, etc. What you want is good strong pure blood and strong nerves, making your system immune to all these everyday complaints.

Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, as spoken of here, does not contain one atom of arsenic or strychnine, which is found so harmful in almost every tonic. Arsenic and strychnine act only as a temporary stimulant, making you feel better only for the time you are taking them; while Bonised Phosphorus with Iron goes to the root of the trouble, builds you up, strengthens your nerves, giving you a new lease of life. It is dispensed only by one druggist in each city. Agent for Peterborough is F. C. Weber, Charlotte Street.

Ease Your Wife's Anxiety

"Indeed, I could not sleep last night," said a merchant to one of our insurance agents. "The insurance on my store expired yesterday, and that pesky fire bell reminded me of it. That store is my living, and I could never start another. If the fire had 'snuffed out' my business last night, instead of Smith's, I would be at my string's end."

"Get insured this morning?".
"Yes, sir; bright and early."
"Own the house you occupy?"
"No; wish I did."
"Anybody helping keep the family?"
"Why, no—why do you ask that?"
"Any income besides the store?"
"No, not a dollar—why?"
"Does your wife sleep well?"
"Why yes; but what on earth are you driving at, anyway?"

"I was just thinking how she could sleep, for if your life had been snuffed out instead of your neighbour Jones' yesterday, she would be at her 'string's end,' for I happen to know that you have no life insurance and your income is her living."

Most men sleep sounder when they know that in event of FIRE their property IS PROTECTED BY INSURANCE. Would not your WIFE AND FAMILY sleep sounder if they knew YOU HAD FULFILLED YOUR OBLIGATIONS and made provision for them in event of YOUR DEATH?

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

8020

Very much the favorite of the moment is the yoke effect in separate skirts and the front panel clings with it for popularity. In the design illustrated these features are combined and an unusually effective model is the result.

The accepted length for skirts for fall is more graceful and in better taste than has been seen for a year; the best styles are moderately long and wide and the fullness is either plaited or gathered. In the skirt pictured the front panel is very effective in material of which the yokes are formed. The skirt section is gathered at the back and sides, joining the yokes at hip depth as shown. With very good effect a plait is introduced at each side seam; the left side closing is with snap fasteners.

Roman striped taffeta with velvet has a host of followers and will be suitable for this model if a dressier skirt is desired; also serge and satin, taffeta and crepe and similar combinations are all the material for a conservative dressy skirt. For all its unusual effect the garment is very simple of construction.

The skirt pattern No. 8020 cuts in sizes 24 to 32 waist measure. To make the skirt in medium (26) requires 4½ yards 36 inch material, with 1¾ yards for yoke and panel. Or 4½ yards all one material in 36 inch width.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Even the Mail, which has always demanded extreme measures against Germany says: "There is no obstacle whatever to peace if Germany really wants it. She has merely to withdraw from the occupied countries, and we are willing enough to discuss reparation and guarantees for the future."

THE COMMISSIONERS ARE IN FAVOUR OF ALD. EDGAR'S SCHEME

Proposed to Install Sanitary Conveniences and Spread Payment Over a Period of Ten Years

WILL MAKE REPORT

A meeting of the Utilities Commission was held last evening. Ald. J. Edgar and Ald. G. Evans were present in support of a proposal to provide sanitary conveniences for people who are not in a position to pay for them when they are installed. Ald. Edgar's plan, which was brought to the attention of the City Council some time ago, is to have the sanitary conveniences installed by the Commission and the payment for such work spread over a period of ten years. This would enable nearly every householder to have necessary plumbing installed on a basis that would prove satisfactory to everybody. The Commission would take a lien on the property, which would take precedence over a first mortgage, so that the Commission would be amply protected. Spread over a period of ten years the payments would not come so hard and would put such conveniences within the reach of everybody.

The Commissioners expressed themselves in favour of Ald. Edgars' scheme, and after giving it careful consideration will make a report on the matter.

Memorial Tablet To Late Lieut. Fife

At St. John's church on Thursday evening at eight o'clock a memorial tablet will be dedicated to the late Lieutenant Gordon Stanley Fife, a former Peterborough boy who enlisted with a western university company conforming the Princess Patricias, and was killed in action during the past summer. Lieut. Fife was a son of Mr. Jas. A. Fife, of Edmonton, formerly of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute staff. In his will he expressed the wish that in the event of his death a tablet be placed in St. John's church as a memorial of his association in the church.

It is expected that the many friends of this young hero who sacrificed a brilliant career in the cause of the Empire will attend this service.

LLOYD GEORGE'S MESSAGE TO PEOPLE OF CANADA

OTTAWA, December 19.—A message to the Canadian people from the new "Win the War" Government of Great Britain has been received by Sir Robert Borden from Premier Lloyd George. It is as follows:.

"On taking up the high office with which His Majesty has charged me I send to you on behalf of the people of the Old Country a message to our brothers beyond the seas. There is no faltering in our determination that the sacrifices which we and you have made, and have still to make, shall not be in, and that the fight which we are waging together for humanity and civilization shall be fought to a triumphant issue. We realize that we shall still need every man that we can put in the field, every pound that rigid private and public economy can provide, and every effort which a united people can put forth to help in the heavy task of our soldiers and sailors. The splendid contributions to the common cause already made by the dominions gives me such confidence that their the path to final victory, we shall tread it side by side. the path to final victory, we shall tread i taide by side.

"LLOYD GEORGE."

R. B. Brooks,
Lieutenant and Act. Adjutant 247th Battalion C. E. F.

According to the figures from London to-day in regard to the number of men from the Western Ontario battalion turned down in England the 93rd Peterborough battalion has made a grand showing in comparison. The 111th of Galt had 190 men turned down out of a total of 835. The 142nd of London arrived in England with 561 men, and had 164 rejected. The 160th, Walkerton, lost 130 men out of 977. The 161st of Clinton had 87 out of 749 rejected, the best showing made by the Western Ontario battalions. So far only about thirty of the 93rd men have been sent home from England.

Seven recruits were taken on by the 247th Battalion yesterday, the biggest number in one day since the battalion was authorized. Five of these were attested at the local head quarters and two others at Cox Hill. Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his staff are naturally pleased, especially as only eight men were secured in Toronto yesterday.

It is likely that the 247th Battalion will move into barracks at the Armouries, shortly.

PTE. ARNOLD KILLED

T. R., boarded at the home of Mr. Wm. Stanley, Stewart street, and is the fifth soldier going from that household to appear on the casualty list. His relatives reside in England.

Fire Investigation Opened To-day

Mr. W. H. Denham, Superintendent of "The Quaker Oats Company" Was the First Witness Called—Mr. Denham's Version of the Fire—Explosion Was Terrific.

WALLS FELL OUT

An investigation held under the "Fire Marshall Act" to determine the origin, cause and circumstances concerning the destruction of the plant of the Quaker Oats Company was opened today at eleven o'clock in the City Building. Mr E. P. Heaton, Fire Marshall for the Province of Ontario, presided. With him was Mr. James S. Costigan, B.A., Sc., Vice-President of T. Pringle and Son, Limited, of Montreal, Hydraulic and Mill Engineers and Architects. Mr. Costigan was present as an expert in mill construction to assist Fire Marshall Heaton in the work of securing evidence technical and otherwise relating to the Quaker Oats plant. Mr. A. H. Dickey, special investigator in Mr. Heaton's department, was also present.

Mr. G. A. Peck and Mr. F. D. Kerr of the legal firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, were present in the interests of the Quaker Oats Company, while Mr. F. H. D. Hall, solicitor for the Peterborough Utilities Commission was present in the interests of the Waterworks Department of the city. Mr. Ross Dobbin, Superintendent of the Waterworks Department, was present, and in all probability will be called this afternoon to give evidence concerning the water supply during the progress of the fire. The examination of the witnesses is being conducted by Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton.

Fire Chief W. A. Howard, as deputy fire marshall for this district, was present in his official capacity.

Not a Prosecution.

Fire Marshall Heaton said that the enquiry was not a persecution or a prosecution. It was not even a trial. "The investigation," said Mr. Heaton, "is a simple but honest effort to get at the facts concerning the disaster. The citizens of Peterborough view with regret the sad calamity that has taken place, and the sympathy of the entire community, as well as the province, will go out to the unfortunate relatives of those who lost their lives, as well as to the company which suffered such a heavy loss."

Mr. W. H. Denham.

The first witness called was Mr. W. H. Denham, superintendent of the local branch of the Quaker Oats Company. Mr. Denham said that the local plant was established in Peterborough about 1901. The head office of the Company is in Chicago, with various branches scattered throughout the United States and Canada. The largest branch is at Cedar Rapids, Michigan. Since the Company started operations in Peterborough about fifteen years ago, the production of flour in the local branch has been increased from five hundred to eighteen hundred barrels a day. Mr. Denham cited a number of other extensions that have been made to the plant since it was first established here. Witness has been in the employ of the Company for about thirty-three years. Twelve of these have been spent in Peterborough as superintendent of the local branch.

The Insurance.

Mr. Denham was unable to give any detail figures relating to the insurance or as to the companies with whom it was placed. The total amount of insurance carried was in the neighbourhood of one million two

SOLDIERS' WIVES' AND MOTHERS' CLUB NEED YOUR HELP

Local Organization Which Has Done So Much Unselfish Work For the Peterboro' Boys at the Front to Hold a Flower Day

A CHANCE TO HELP

On Saturday the public of Peterborough will have an opportunity of assisting an organization that has quietly since the war began been looking after the interests of the Peterborough boys overseas. The Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club are holding a Flower Day on Saturday to secure funds to carry on their important work. For over two years these devotal women who have not been satisfied with sending their loved ones to the front, but have settled down to see that they were supplied with comforts, have financed the work themselves with no assistance from the public. Month after month a steady stream of parcels have been sent forth from the club to the Peterborough boys in England and France, and to the local boys who are prisoners of war in Germany. They might have justly said: "We'll only look after the dear ones of members of our club," but they did not adopt that policy. Peterborough boys, impartially, and only Peterborough boys have been looked after since the work began. On Saturday these patriotic women, all of whom are represented on the battle line by their husbands or sons, will be on the street selling flowers. No one should refuse to assist this work. Buy a flower on Saturday and help the wives and mothers of Peterborough's sons overseas supply the gallant lads at the front with comforts.

OTONABEE COUNCIL HOLDS A SESSION

The Otonabee Council met on December 15th pursuant to Statutely enactment.

Eason and Howson were appointed to act for the Skating Company— township, each to pay half the cost of repair. On motion of Messrs. Eason and O'Leary, Reeve W. A. Anderson was awarded $25 for his services in connection with roads flooded by the Trent Canal, as it was entirely owing to his energetic handling of the case in procuring evidence of the damage and ably and persistently presenting it to the Dominion Government that the $35 was procured from the government to the township for damages. The following accounts were passed: For gravel, W. H. Bradburn $19.79; J. Webster $1.00, R. Davidson $4.70; John Kelly $15.00; D. Hayes $42.60; D. McCarthy $7.00; H. Cardwell $10; H. ROUMANIA, EITHER WAY.

It looks a little at present as if Roumania would be severely punished for taking sides against Germany. She may be over-run, looted and harrassed, but out of this will come at last victory, through the victory of the Entente Allies. But no matter what her fate, under her choice, it cannot be as bad as the fate Germany has planned for her. She is intending to plant a Hohenzollern puppet upon the throne, in the person of Prince William, an elder brother of the present Roumanian King, Ferdinand. He is now a Prussian General of Infantry who in 1886, owing to his position and circumstances, renounced all rights of succession to the Roumanian throne, when his uncle, Prince Charles, was elected hereditary ruler of Roumania by its people. Germany is discounting her inability to hold Roumania by force of arms, and is scheming to depose the Roumanian King and set up a Hohenzollern mannikin, who will dance as Germany pulls the strings, and ensure the permanent enslavement of the people. There is a desperate chance of Germany realising this dream, and clinging to her prey in the final readjustment; but it is a straw she clings to and explains in one way why she is shouting "peace." In the remote event of this succeeding Roumania will have placed upon her a worse burden, suffer a worse fate, than otherwise, no matter how badly she is harried, ruined and outraged.

LET ALL OF US HELP.

The proposal to provide a Christmas entertainment for the wives and families of Peterborough soldiers on service is a splendid one, and not only appeals to the city, officially, but to every citizen of Peterborough. It appears that the entertainment proposed will cost $120. With the $50 of Mr. Burnham's bounty, seventy dollars is needed to meet the expected expense. It was proposed, in view of the low state of the city finances, to appeal to the public through the press. Mayor Duffus did not favour this 'village' style of doing the thing. The responsibility was thrown on the City Council. The Mayor was right in one way, and fell a little short of being fully right. The City Council should meet the shortage, for in that way the whole city would share in a small, fractional way, in the recognition that should be given by all to our fighting soldiers by kindness to their wives and families. The provision of the proposed entertainment should not be confined to the city authorities alone. It is the concern of every citizen. The soldiers at the front are fighting for us all, and all should contribute in some way or other. There should be no need of appeal for help except some leading to insure whatever little organization is necessary to give effect to what should be universal desire to cooperate.

At this Christmas season every child will be remembered mostly in the midst of the unbroken home circle. We all know the blank caused by the absence of "daddy," detained by business and other reasons, and not home Christmas day; but for many a home "daddy" is far away in the trenches, under hot fire or shivering with cold; and in many sad cases "daddy" is gone, never to come back. When we think of these things we should all join in the work of remembering them and theirs on Christmas day. We should not delegate our duty to any civic committee. It was proposed that some enterprising citizen will take the lead, and invite the co-operation of the citizens generally, not in an expensive way, but in a way to make the treat to the wives and children more elaborate and more representative of popular interest than the Council Committee with its straitened and limited means can do.

NATIONAL SERVICE ALL ROUND.

One cannot but admire the industry of Mr. Mark H. Irish, Director Department of Labour, Imperial Munitions Board, in keeping the press active with appeals in the interest of speeding up munitions production, one of the most important, next to the provision of men, and indeed, an absolutely necessary matter, if the men are to do any effective fighting. Big guns and little guns are of no use unless supplied with abundance of ammunition. As Mr. Irish says in one appeal:

"We do not hear the sound of the guns, but we cannot fail to hear that urgent, insistent demand that the guns be fed."

But speeding up munitions production is something the public cannot affect, except by moral influence. The factories and the workmen must do their share, and the Government must do its share. But, while no fault is made by factories or workmen, unfortunately, the Government is not doing its duty. Sir Adam Beck says the munitions output is slowed down, lessened by lack of electric power, especially in Western Ontario. We are shipping power to the United States—power developed in Canada—and the munition factories are hungering for it in vain. The moulds for the guns are not being provided. Though "urgently and insistently and imperatively" called upon, the Government does not act. It needs only a scrape of the pen to keep at home the needed electric power to keep our munition factories humming to their full capacity at home available for their use. Why isn't the word spoken, when the lives, the efficiency of our soldiers are endangered and weakened by the delay?

The Government does act in other ways. Sir Robert Borden, the head of the Government, is carrying the fiery cross through the Dominion to call men to the standard; meanwhile his colleagues at home are sitting back complacently in regard to, or rather, in disregard of, the power matter, and refusing to do the only thing that can help effectively make the man worth his salt when he is "signed up"—give him something to put into his gun.

The Government can act when it is stirred up by the Home Government. At a Cabinet meeting yesterday, in response to the Home Government to do something to help solve the French railway situation—our steel plants are too busy making munitions supplies to make rails—it was decided in ten minutes to take up 300 miles of government railway sidings and 220 miles of privately-owned railway to supply material for military lines in France. This is splendid promptitude and shows a proper spirit of co-operation. These war lines, built by dismantling Canadian railways, are to be used for forwarding munitions, etc. To supply the complementary action the Government should take as prompt steps to deal with the export of power in a way to meet the demands of the munitions factories to enable them to keep running to full capacity. It won't do any good, or, at least, the most good tear up our railway tracks and transplant them in France to help the allied cause, unless we supply all the munitions we can for them to carry—to feed the guns.

The dealing with the railway situation shows that the Government appreciates the gravity and urgency of the situation. Why does it not come to a similar appreciation of the necessity of taking measures—drastic measures, if necessary—to retain in Canada the electric power needed to keep the munition factories humming to their full capacity.

While our soldiers are fighting to keep Canada for Canadians, Canadians at home should do their best to help them in the fight. When our troops are needing ammunition badly the Government, by its inaction, or refusal to act, lets the munitions plants of Western Ontario be crippled for lack of the 20,000 horse power, the amount at present needed to keep plants in full woring operation. We must have national service all round. The Government, as well as the people, must do its full share.

MR. HUGHSON JOHNSTONE IS ELECTED PRESIDENT

At a well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Protestant Benevolent Federation in their hall last night, the following were elected to the respective offices:

Pres.—Hughson Johnstone.
Vice.—J. Wm. Worth.
Fin.-Sec.—C. A. G. Spence.
Rec.-Sec.—R. B. McGill.
Treas.—Jos. Stewart (re-elected).
Chap.—G. W. Johnston.
Con.—B. McGill.

Owing to the pressure of other business of importance the election of the other officers, drafting of committees, etc., were left over until the next meeting.

A special meeting is called for Tuesday next, Dec. 26th, at 8 p.m., when a matter of great importance to the older members especially will be dealt with.

Impossible Aspects of The Teuton Peace Proposals

The world has now had an opportunity of studying the official text of the Teutonic peace proposals. It has been a matter of general surprise to discover that these peace proposals are much more vague than the earlier telegraphic reports which were sent out. Put shortly, the German proposals are to this effect: "We are unconquerable, and can pursue the war from victory to victory until final triumph is reached. If you are of the same opinion, will you listen to proposals we have formulated for the establishment of peace?" Austria has sent a note to similar effect, in which the same thought is expressed. Austria says the war aims of the Entente Allies are completely unattainable—"Useless and unavailing, therefore, is the prosecution of the fighting on the part of the enemy." Hence, Austrians want "a discussion with their enemies for the purpose of paving a way for peace." And that is all the peace offer amounts to. It will be noticed that each note is so worded that the very fact of the Allies notifying the Central Powers that they are willing to listen to their peace proposals will be made to imply that they recognize that the objects for which they are fighting the Huns are "completely unattainable." It will also be noticed that while the Huns absolutely refused a conference to prevent the war, they are extremely anxious for one to stop it.

In the note regarding the peace offer which the German Government has sent to the Vatican there are some real gems of hypocrisy. For instance, it says that Germany is "seized with pity in the face of the unspeakable misery of humanity." That is pretty rich from the Government that caused all the misery, from the assassins of the Lusitania innocents, from the authors and instigators of the monstrous crimes in Belgian, Armenia, Poland and Serbia. If they had said they were haunted by the spectre of retribution we could have believed them, but "seized with pity!" They will say next that they are overflowing with the milk of human kindness. Again, the Vatican is informed that Germany is fighting "to ensure the integrity of her frontiers and the liberty of the German nation," which is "determined to defend to the last extremity the inherited treasure of intellectual and economic work and the social organization and sacred soil of the country." The German Government evidently forget that according to their own doctrine fighting to defend the national treasures and the sacred soil of the country is a crime meriting the most appalling and atrocious punishment. Look at what they have done, and are still doing, to Belgium for no other reason than that Belgium defended "the sacred soil of the country." But perhaps what they mean is that they are fighting to defend the treasures they have stolen from Belgium, and to defend the sacred soil of the countries they have polluted by their presence from those to whom it rightfully belongs. That may look meritorious in their own eyes, but it is an argument that is hardly likely to promote peace.

Summing up the whole peace offer, it may be said that it is couched in offensive and insolent language; and that it is full of perversions and insincerity. In other words, it is typically German. But, as the New York Evening Post puts it, "Behind all the boastfulness lies the plain fact that Germany has an intense desire to stop fighting. Coming forward with all the flourishes of a 'Germania triumphans,' she is actually a suppliant for peace. In her attitude to-day stands confessed the truth that the aims and hopes with which the German rulers entered into this war have been frustrated. Germany can neither impose her will upon Europe nor dictate a peace. She has set out to seek the best terms she can get. Let no one be deluded to this essential fact by all the fripperies of German oratory. Beneath all the pretence and all the insolence the eye catches sight of anxiety and fear."—Montreal Herald.

PETERBORO HEADQUARTERS OF CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR MEN and BOYS

FIRE INVESTIGATION OPENED TO-DAY

hundred and twenty-three thousand dollars. The loss has not yet been proved.

Plans of the dry house, in which the explosion was said to have taken place, were then produced by Mr. Denham.

Exhibit One—Was a sectional view of the dry house looking towards the river.

Exhibit Two— Was a plan of the basement, boiler room, pumphouse, shipping room and first floor.

Exhibit Three—Showed the second, third, fourth and top floors.

Exhibit Four—Showed the balcony above the top floor.

Mr. William Walsh was employed as foreman of the oatmeal mill, while Thomas Grant served in a similar capacity in the shipping and packing rooms, with Mr. William Garvey as his assistant. Mr. C. Frost was night foreman of the oatmeal mill, while Mr. Marshall was foreman of the trucking and shipping rooms at night.

Mr. George Edwards is assistant superintendent of the entire plant, while Mr. M. J. Kirn is the mechanical engineer. The chief electrician is Mr. H. A. Fife, while Fred Mealey and Robert Allan were assigned to the duty of looking after the sprinkler system and fire pump. Mr. Mealey was employed in the day time and Mr. Allan at night. Other officials were also named by Mr. Denham.

Heard a Heavy Shock.

Describing the outbreak of the fire, Mr. Denham said he first noticed a very heavy shock followed by a roar. He was sitting in his office at the time. He ran out to the river side of the building and saw the tanks tumbling out of the east side of the dry house. A third of the mill appeared to be enveloped in flames. The falling walls disorganized the water system and rendered the sprinkler system inoperative. The pressure on the water main surrounding the building was also materially reduced, due to a break in the system, caused by the explosion, which left two ends of the main exposed. The plant was equipped with the regular sprinkler system and in addition about one hundred chemical tanks were distributed throughout the building. Weekly reports were made, concerning the fire equipment throughout the plant.

Cause of the Fire.

Asked if he could form any opinion as to the cause of the fire, Mr. Denham said that J. W. Walsh, who is at present in the hospital suffering from severe injuries received in the fire, had stated that there was a fire in the dry house prior to the explosion. The fire might have been caused by a spark from one of the grinders. Witness admitted that explosions had previously been reported in the dry house. Asked by Mr. Hatton if an explosion had occurred in the dry house about three weeks previous to the fire, Mr Denham replied "Yes."

"Was it a serious one?" enquired Mr. Hatton.

Mr. Denham—"I don't think the men in the dry house would regard it as serious."

Saw Fire.

In this particular instance a line of small-sized hose was used to extinguish the fire. Explosions in the dry house were not looked upon as dangerous from the standpoint of explosions. They were only considered dangerous from the standpoint of fire. Explosions of this nature were frequently referred to as "puffs."

Mr. Walsh, who is at present in the hospital, told of a man named Conway coming downstairs a few minutes previous to the explosions, and remarking "I smell fire." Walsh immediately shut down the grinders. He then lifted up one of the 'covers' and saw fire.

To the Crown Attorney Mr. Denham said that the force and propelling power sufficient to cause such an explosion was very much out of the ordinary.

"We don't know of anything that could have exploded other than the atmosphere, which must have been in a correct chemical condition," said Mr. Denham.

Mr. Denham could not tell the direction of the propelling force. Apparently the north and east wall was blown out. "We never expected to experience anything of this sort," said Mr. Denham. We had our dry house well ventilated, and carried all the fire-fighting equipment that was thought necessary.

AFTERNOON SESSION

When the enquiry resumed this afternoon Mr. Ross L. Dobbin, Superintendent of the Water Works Department of the Utilities Commission was called and sworn.

"The alarm I received was the explosion. At my office," said Mr. Dobbin I noticed that the pressure on my gauge dropped momentarily. It registered 45 pounds and returned at once to the normal pressure of 70 pounds. This movement on the guage and recovery was practically instantaneous.

Witness said he ran to the Quaker Oats plant. He shut off the sprinkler connection near the bridge to improve the pressure in the system generally in that neighborhood.

"I saw both Chief Howard and M Denham to ask them regarding shutting off the other connection on Quaker street. They thought it would be better to leave the water on in the sprinkler as long as possible."

SHUT OFF VALVE.

Witness later decided on his own initiative to shut off this other connection. He was unable to locate the valve near the building due to the changed external appearance of the plant resulting from recent construction. Mr. Dobbin shut off the valve on Hunter street, controlling the Quaker street 8-inch main and the other end of it at Murray street was also closed. This completely shut off the company's sprinkler system and concentrated the pressure in the water works system. Mr. Dobbin stated that before going to the fire he had given instructions for the increasing of the pressure to 100 pounds and fifteen minutes later after shutting off the main to the company's sprinkler system, ordered the pressure increased to 120 pounds.

PRESENTED A REPORT.

Witness presented a report of the pressure records at his office and at the pumping station. The latter guage showed the following registration in part on the morning of the fire.

10 a.m.—75 pounds.
10.15 a.m.—70 pounds.
10.25 a.m.—60 pounds.
10.30 a.m.—95 pounds.
10.45 a.m.—98 pounds.
10.50 a.m.—100 pounds.
11 a.m.—120 pounds.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock the pressure was maintained at 120 pounds.

17 LINES IN USE.

To Mr. Hatton witness said the Waterworks could have given all the pressure needed. There were seventeen lines of hose in use in addition to the use of garden hose by residents nearby protecting their dwellings.

The total capacity of the pumping station is sixteen million gallons including steam and water which pumps.

The steam pumps were not used. To Mr. Heaton Mr. Dobbin said he could not recall the exact time at which he closed the valves controlling the factory sprinkler system.

MR. F. L. ROY.

In calling Mr. Roy, Mr. Heaton remarked that he wanted him simply for the identification of the excellent photograph taken of the fire.' During the day and evening Mr. Roy took fourteen exposures of the fire, in addition to assisting some of the burned men.

"I never saw a set of pictures taken of a fire," concluded the Commissioner, "showing so completely and clearly the various phases of the progress of a large fire. They may not help us to arrive at the cause of the fire, but they will be put in with the official records."

CHIEF HOWARD.

When the explosion occurred Chief Howard was in W. H. Hamilton's store and arrived at the Quaker Oats factory before the brigade. "We were troubled with low pressure for a period of 25 minutes. After that we had an abundance of water without the help of the fire engine."

The Chief told of previously ordering out the fire engine and kept it working at the request of Mayor Duffus and Mr. Denham. During the period of low pressure the fire made such headway that it soon got beyond control.

Chief Howard related how he had turned the brigade to protect surrounding property. The roof of the auditorium of the Court House was lost because of the shortage of hose. Sixteen firemen were on duty that day and were assisted by many volunteers and a detachment of the Lindsay Fire Dept., which responded to two calls during the day.

Chief Howard said it was a very unusual fire for a city the size of Peterborough. He could offer no evidence of the cause of this fire.

There were no fire alarms from the Quaker Oats Co. in 1916 and only one in 1915. It was only a small fire on the first floor.

Fire Alarm at 10.15.

Chief Howard stated that the alarm of this fire was received at the Fire Station at 10.15. The call came simultaneously from the fire alarm system and over the telephone. The Fire Department's chart of the water pressure was submitted by the Chief, corresponded with the water works gauge, with but slight variations.

Boost For Service.

The Commissioner asked Chief Howard how he was able to use the Lindsay hose, and was informed that the original couplings were cut off and replaced with local couplings by the use of a hydraulic hose expander.

"I wish more municipalities were so well provided with apparatus to make hose interchangeable. Your equipment in that respect is worthy of special note," commented Mr. Heaton.

Address Letter to Mr. W. H. Denham in Which They Express Their Gratitude For the Treatment Accorded Them by the Quaker Oats Company.

The employees of the Package Department of the Quaker Oats Company have addressed the following letter to Mr W H. Denham.

Peterborough, Ontario,
December 19th, 1916.

Mr. W H. Denham,
Supt. The Quaker Oats Co.,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—We, the undersigned employees of the Package Department wish to place on record to you, first, our sincere regret at the appalling loss of life to some of our fellow employees, and also the great loss we have all sustained in the loss by fire of the Company's plant here at Peterborough. We regret it, when we consider the enormous trade the Company had worked up here in Peterborough. Then again, we regret it from our view point, when we remember the feelings of fellowship that existed between us as workers, to be so rudely broken up just one week ago. Then when we say the announcement in the Press last evening of the Company's spontaneous generosity to all the employees it brought home more clearly than ever how great our loss had been, and we take this means of thanking you personally, Mr. Denham, for your kind consideration of us, when we realise how heavy your responsibilities are just at this time and we also thank the Company of which you represent in this city, for their kind and generous gift to us of the full month's wages.

Trusting it will not be long before the Company will again have their buildings erected on the old site and we shall be able to demonstrate our appreciation in a closer application to duty, and thanking you once again, we remain,

Cable Messages For Overseas

People in Peterboro' Who Desire to Send Messages Should Fyle Them Not Later Than To-morrow

The local branch of the Great Northwest Telegraph Company has received notice to the effect that unless cable messages intended for the Old Country are fyled not later than December 21st, there is likely to be unavoidable delay in delivering them in time for Christmas. People in Peterborough who intend to cable the season's greetings to friends overseas should do so not later than the twentieth or twenty-first of this month to insure delivery in time for Christmas. The inability to get messages through on time after that date is due to the congestion which is inevitable at this season of the year, and more so this year as the cable service is somewhat restricted owing to the war.

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE IMPROVEMENTS AT BANKS' GARAGE

Skates, Hockey Boots and Sticks Having a Lively Run at Banks' Sporting Goods Shop

The recent extensive improvements, which have been in progress for some time past at the Banks Garage, on Charlotte street, have to some extent changed its former general appearance, and modelled it after the designs of the Willys-Overland automobile general offices and warerooms in the larger cities.

In order to carry out the details of the changes, a separate entrance was made to the garage in the rear of the showrooms. This has been accomplished in a convenient and satisfactory manner. A new stock room and business office has been fitted up behind the spacious show room. Here are arranged the parts for the different models of Overland cars in separate apartments, which will facilitate much better service and system. Mr. Banks explains that the policy of the Overland Company, for which he is the local representative is that all their dealers are required to keep sufficient spare parts on hand so as to be able to render prompt service to their patrons. Mr. Banks takes great pride in the Overland car, and wants every owner to know that he is in reach of service in his garage. And it is but fair to state that Overland owners claim that they get comfort in this car—the real comfort of deep, soft upholstering, buoyant cantilever springs, and large tires. The little jolts and bumps of the road never reach it.

McPherson's Lightning Hitch Hockey Shoes are one of Bank's specialties. They are sturdy, honest and thoroughly Canadian. Like the khaki lads themselves, they can stand hard knocks, and are indispensable to the good healthful sport of Canadian hockey.

The Automobile Skate, which Mr. Banks is an agent for, would make a Happy Christmas gift for the kiddies, as well as the bigger boys. How they would simply yell for joy when they found a pair in their stockings. This gift will keep them out in the fresh air, and give them more healthful pleasure than anything that could be bought. Tells Teutons How To Live On Little

In connection with recent reports from Germany to the effect that the restrictions in the consumption of food due to war conditions has had a beneficial influence upon the health of many inhabitants of the Fatherland, especially those who were inclined to overeat before the war began, comes a story telling how the Imperial War Food Bureau is sending Professor Ismar Boas, one of Germany's authorities on food values, through the empire lecturing before women's associations on "How One Can Live Almost on Nothing." The Berliner Vorwarts remarks that, while the learned professor practically proves that a person can live on almost nothing, it seriously doubts if such a life is worth living.

In one of his recent lectures, as reported in the German newspapers and summarized by the London press, Dr Boas declared that his main object really was to dispel the prevailing apprehension that there was any danger of the national health being impaired by under-nutrition. He contended that one could speak of under-nutrition only when the pre-war standard was accepted as normal. As a matter of fact, the pre-war standard was over-nutrition, and if in a vast number of cases war food had resulted in diminishing girth and weight, these results were really blessing in disguise which should not be taken tragically.

It was only permitted to speak of under-nutrition when loss of weight and circumference was accompanied by loss of physical and mental powers, and, for so far, no deterioration in these respects was noticeable. Professor Boas's great authority on the ability to exist on next to nothing is a Danish food expert named Hindhede who for several years has supported himself and his family on potatoes bread and butter, and fruit, at a cost of a trifle over 6 cents a day per person. Herr Boas asks the Germans to follow the example of the Dane and "throw to the winds their idolatrous veneration for certain foods which they falsely regard as rich in albumen."

"Just think," said Dr. Boas, "what we might be able to do were we to get rid of this food idolatry. It would take some time to accustom ourselves to living on almost nothing, but when we have arrived at that point we shall have obtained a striking victory over ourselves, and from an economic point of view the gain will be immense."

The women of the association he was addressing audibly expressed disapproval of this, but the professor had come provided with figures and showed them on the blackboard that the 2,900 calories which the human body daily required might be found in 2,917 grams of potatoes, as well as in 2,857 grams of beef, or in thirty-five eggs. And the price of the potatoes was only 8 cents, whereas the eggs cost $2.60 and the beef $4. Beans were fine, he said. You could get your 2,900 calories in 893 grams of beans, and the cost, even at war prices, was only 35 cents.

One woman in the audience told the lecturer that, according to his theory the less the nation ate the healthier the people would be become. Herr Boas did not think that this was a fair deduction if carried to extremes, a remark which the women greeted with laughter.

The meeting is said to have ended in some disorder, and Herr Boas as he left the platform, had some caustic remarks addressed to him about his food theories.

In the course of an interview with a representative of the local German press, Dr. Frank D. Gorham, who has just returned from a nine months' stay in Germany as a member of the American Physicians' Expedition, which is doing good work in several hospitals in the Fatherland, after asserting that the food problem in Germany had been solved in a satisfactory manner, is quoted as saying:

"But in all this (the food regulation) there is no danger for the Germany of to-day. It is the coming generation that will have to suffer from the consequences of the shortage of food. The young persons are undernourished. This doesn't mean that the children have to go hungry. They have enough to satisfy their appetites. But their food is not made up in a way calculated to satisfy the demands of a growing body. Many of the substitutes, the artificial foodstuffs, fulfill their purpose very well for the moment, but the body is not so strong as it would be under normal conditions."

Dr. Graham confirmed the reports that there was a serious shortage of doctors in Germany.

A FORMAL VERDICT

Returned by Jury That Investigated Death of Walter Holden, Victim of the Fire

DUTY WAS LIGHT

We, the jury sworn to enquire into the death of Walter Thomas Holden believe from the evidence submitted that the deceased came to his death on December 11th, in the city of Peterborough, from shock as the result of burns received while at his work in the Quaker Oats Building.

Such was the result of last night's inquest in the Council Chamber into the death of the late Walter Holden conducted by a jury with Coroner T. N. Greer, M.D., presiding. In view of Fire Marshal Heaton's investigation Dr. Greer observed that the jury's work would be comparatively light. The burden of its work would be assumed by the official enquiry conducted under the "Fire Marshal Act." It remained for the coroner's jury to determine when, how and where the deceased, Walter Holden came to his death.

The personnel of the jury was as follows:—Messrs. Thomas Barrie foreman, William Menzies, H. Meredith, J. W. McDermid, J. M. White, L. G. Dobbin, M. J. Maher, Herb Routley, Reg. Turner, Joseph Stewart, R. J. Kidd, and Thomas Irwin.

NO NEW FEATURES.

The evidence was brief but it covered the points the jury was deputed to consider. The identification of the body was one of the principal details of the evidence.

Mr. Thomas McMahon and Mr. Fred Mesley stated that they helped to carry out a victim from the north end of the plant but could not positively identify the man as Walter Holden. Mr. Mesley later recalled that the man had a stiff arm similar to Holden's.

Herb Johnston of the Fire Department stated that he had driven a fire truck around to the north side of the plant and received a badly burned man. He and Adjt. McElheney drove off to Bellegheen's but on the way met an automobile into which the injured man was transferred to speed the trip.

Dr. Morgan testified that he had attended Walter Holden at Nicholls Hospital. He was burned practically from head to foot and was at times delirious. Holden asked the doctor what had happened. Asked about the fire he could not give a lucid explanation on account of his delirium. He told the doctor his name and address, said he felt he was going to die and begged to be chloroformed to relieve his pain.

Dr. Morgan stated that Holden had died of his burns and the resulting shock to his system.

Mr. W. H. Denham, local superintendent of the Quaker Oats Co., gave evidence had been presented. Mr. Barr showed Walter Holden was an employee and was on duty the day of the fire.

Mr. Roland Hunter, customs clerk of the Quaker Oats Co., said he did not know deceased personally. The books of the company showed that he was present on the day of the fire. Holden was engaged as a sweeper in the drying room.

Crown Attorney Hatton and Coroner Greer felt that all the necessary evidence had been presentid. Mr. Barrie and members of the jury agreed. The jury was out about twenty minutes.

Mr. L. Green who is purchasing horses for the French Government has been depositing in the Bank of Toronto, one dollar for every horse purchased. The order is issued it is said, especially to prevent parents dressing their children of all ages in khaki soldier uniforms of all ranks.

Former Peterborough Boy's Narrow Escape

Bombardier Cecil Clitheroe, who was recently reported wounded, has written from a hospital in France to his father, Mr. Thomas Clitheroe, of Grafton, stating that his wounds were caused by shrapnel through the right hand. The front of his leather coat and other clothing was torn off all the way across his chest, but luckily did not touch the flesh. Cecil was on his way to the ammunition station at the time, and shells were flying fast and furious. The boys' dugout was demolished so that no trace of it could be seen, but all the boys were fortunately out of it at the time. Cecil had to go three miles to a dressing station, all the way through a rain of bursting shells. It was midnight when he reached it. He is making good progress at time of writing.—Port Hope Guide.

Bombardier Clitheroe is a former Peterborough boy.

Election Talk Light In Most Of the Townships Near the City

The prospects of elections in the neighbouring townships are not looming very largely just now. North Monaghan is practically the only municipality that threatens its reeve with a contest, and that may not yet materialize. The general opinion of farmers who have discussed the question of elections in four or five townships is that they are quite satisfied with the manner in which the municipalities have been managed during the past year. Hence an election is scarcely necessary and not greatly desired.

In Otonabee it is understood that the way will remain open to Reeve W. A. Anderson for another term, and that Deputy Reeve Fred Eason will also be unopposed. Reports from Smith are not quite so definite. There has been some talk of Councillor Nicholls coming out against Reeve Fred McKee, but the general feeling is that Mr. McKee has been giving the township good government and that in its present form the Council is very satisfactory. Mr. Charlie Moore has also been mentioned in the election gossip regarding the Reeveship.

The three villages are likely to go by acclamation to the present reeves. Lakefield and Norwood have strong, capable men in Reeves H. G. Fitzgerald and Bert Squire, respectively. Neither are of the type whom it pleases to bask in the public calcium for the peculiar pleasure of the mere basking, and are possibly ready to retire whenever their ratepayers indicate a desire for a change. Certainly, these two men are among the most prominent in the County Council and must be rendering in their municipalities equally satisfactory work in their own bailiwicks.

In Monaghan the township seems to be again approaching the seemingly inevitable climax of division. The farmers in the west half of the township are quite satisfied with Reeve McIntosh. They want no election, but the residents of the fringe on the city's boundary profess to think that the township should follow Mr. Harold B. Rye's blocking tactics against the city's sewage disposal plant. In the fact of the Ontario Board of Health's recommendation of the Scott-Rutherford property it is not very evident what this group hopes to gain by their opposition. Mr. McIntosh is by no means surrendering the township's interests to the city, but has been endeavouring to follow the more harmonious method of discussing the situation before declaring it impossible of satisfactory solution.

The township seems to have split again on the old line of division. Of course this does not mean that the residents of either section would be committed to a man to a certain candidate, but that is the tendency.

Coroner's Jury Donates Fees of $24 To Christmas Entertainment Fund

Whether they were influenced by the Christmas spirit or were moved by the generosity of the management of the Quaker Oats Company, the coroner's jury that inquired last night into the death of Walter Thomas Holden acquitted themselves in a praiseworthy manner when they contributed their aggregate fees of $24 to which they were entitled to the civic fund for the Christmas entertainment of the soldiers' wives and children.

Each member was entitled to two dollars to be paid by the City Treasurer for the two brief sessions of the inquest. At the conclusion of their duties last night Mr. M. J. Maher stated that if it was in order he would move that the jjury contribute their fees to the Christmas fund for the entertainment of the families of the soldiers. Mr. Reg Turner seconded the motion and jury unanimously supported the idea.

Coroner Greer commendd the jurors upon their action, and remarked that Mr. Barrie could arrange for the transfer of the money to the fund.

HEART DIAGNOSIS IN BRITISH ARMY

Before the Present Year Many Were Rejected Because of the System in Vogue

The thoroughness with which the hearts of British recruits have been examined since the beginning of the year before they are accepted to act in some military capacity or finally rejected is dwelt upon by the editor of the Lancet. The most delicate instruments are used, including the electrocardiograph which takes pictures of the movements of the heart and the X-ray machine. The advance which has been made in cardiac diagnosis is considered one of the striking examples of medical military progress. The Lancet says

"One of the most difficult problems in connection with the examination of recruits is the exact estimation of the condition of the heart. If the heart is of the normal size, the sounds clear, and the rhythm regular a satisfactory conclusion can be arrived at promptly; but if a murmur is heard or there is irregularity of the beat then skill and experience are required in order to distinguish between functional and organic conditions. The main point is to estimate, if possible, the amount of cardiac reserve power but this is not the only matter for consideration, and, quite rightly, cases in which doubt arises are now referred to experts for opinion.

"Since last February, by the direction of the Medical Department of the War Office, recruits in the London district whose rejection was contemplated on account of the state of their heart, have been sent to the National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart for examination and report. As up to now over 4,000 cases have been dealt with, it will be of interest to explain the general idea underlying the scheme.

"All recruits are seen in the first instance by the recruiting Medical Board, and those whose hearts are manifestly defective, as shown by the ordinary methods of clinical examination, are rejected or placed in the categories for which they are suitable while those with obviously healthy hearts are passed. It is only when real doubt arises as to whether a recruit's heart is defective, or how far an observed defect is likely to impair efficiency, that the man is sent to the heart hospital and subjected to a searching examination with the aid of instrumental appliances, which could not possibly be available for employment by the recruiting boards without the assistance of some such institution.

350 CUPS FROM A POUND OF THIS TEA.

The increased cost of tea in the country of origin and enormously advanced ocean freight rates have forced up the price of "SALADA" but only five cents a pound as yet. However as "SALADA" will yield 350 cups of delicious tea to the pound, it is still far and away the cheapest of all beverages, and more than that, possesses a unique flavour of unequalled quality.

Two Hundred Scenes 5,000 People

Used in "The Heart of Maryland"

History repeats itself. What was will be again. "The Heart of Maryland," once the greatest of stage plays is now the greatest of motion picture plays and with the original stage star, Mrs. Leslie Carter in the role of Maryland Calvert, which years ago firmly established her as a great emotional actress, leaves nothing to be desired.

"The Heart of Maryland," in two hundred scenes, required the efforts of five thousand people, including twelve hundred soldiers. Herbert Brenon, who produced "Neptune's Daughter," directed "The Heart of Maryland." It was produced at a cost of over one hundred thousand dollars, and was selected by Lee Shubert as the most appropriate production to open the gigantic New York Hippodrome this season.

Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Heart of Maryland" comes to "The Grand" Christmas night for one performance commencing at 8.15. The seat sale opens Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

Food For War Prisoners

Countrymen Everywhere Asked to Aid Prisoners in Germany.

The detailed plans approved by Great Britain for the feeding of British prisoners of war in Germany were received yesterday by an official of that Government in New York. The statement in which the food problem of the British prisoners is discussed says that reports received from the American Embassy in Berlin show that were it not for the food parcels sent from England the British prisoners would die of starvation.

"Germany," the statement reads, "ought to supply enough food for all prisoners of war, but Germany has failed in ttiis, as in many other humane considerations, and to supply her deficiencies there has been organized a Red Cross Prisoners of War Committee. Beginning with December 1st committee will take over the entire control of sending food parcels to prisoners of war in Germany and elsewhere. A scheme called "The Adopters Bureau" has been drawn upon and it will be compulsory, because it has been found by experience that by careful organization through some central authority the unfortunate men who are in enemy hands can obtain most benefit. The conditions hitherto have been chaotic and the results flowing from the kindly thoughts of thousands of sympathisers were not commensaurate with their efforts. There will be, in future, only two avenues through which parcels can be forwarded. Regimental care committees supply the needs of men from their battalions. A Central Committee in London will look after civilians. The two bodies will be linked to-gether by the 'adopters' bureau'. If any regimental committee has under its care prisoners whom it would like to have, as it were 'adopted' or if there are persons in any part of the country who want to have the satisfaction of relieving the hard lot of these men, communication will be established through the bureau. It is intended to keep a complete and detailed index of all the prisoners' names and needs.

"The scheme will remedy many defects of the past. In the first place some men unhappily receive at present few parcels, while others receive many. Again, sometimes the contents of the parcels are not always of the most suitable character. It occasionally happens that they are not as securely packed as they might be. It has only been complained that, for one reason or another parcels have gone astray.

"The Germans are not holding anything like as many war prisoners as are in British hands—not by nearly 14,000; but, still the British naval and military prosiners number over 31,000 of whom 1,079 are officers, and there are also civilians. It is calculated that each officer or man should be sent every fortnight the equivalent of three parcels of food of a gross weight of 10 pounds each, apart from a matter of about 7 pounds of bread a week. Britishers all the world over can help forward this scheme by "adopting' a prisoner of war. An 'adopter' may pay for one parcel of food or bread a fortnight, or more. Even if a relative or 'adopter' can only subscribe a very small sum his or her efforts will have due effect. For instance, a subscriber of, as only a quarter or shalf a dollar a fortnight could be made responsible for the bread portion of a man's supply. The headquarters of the Adopter's Bureau for sending food to British prisoners of war is at 4 Thurloe Place, London.

The Red Cross concert held in the Town Hall on Friday evening, December the was a great success and much credit is due Miss Vance and Miss Williams, who undertook the heavy task of organising the whole affair which kept them busy the past three weeks both night and day. The programme was delightful, the first part represented a court of famous women, all striving for the crown of world opinion, but all, including famous guest of her sister, Mrs. A. Armiston, forced to yield the honour to whom it surely should go to mother.

The various characters forty-five in all, were well represented and splendidly and appropriately attired. A dramatic situation was infused when "German Kulture" stalked in unannounced seeking the high honour, but retired humbled and discomfited under 8th was a great success and much Daughter of the Empire.

The latter part of the programme was a representation of "The Allies" by ten girls dressed in the national colours of the various countries they represented. This part was especially beautiful and it ended in a wonderfully striking tableau of "Canada mourning her dead."

Total receipts amounted to $106.50 which was handed over to the Relief Committee.

ANNUAL ELECTION OF THE Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS

The annual election of directors of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. will occur on Tuesday evening, January 16th, 1917, at 8 o'clock. Every member of the Y.M.C.A. who is also a member in good standing of some evangelical church, is allowed to cast his vote at this election and is expected to be present at the time and place mentioned.

Members of the Board whose term expires are G. A. Gillespie, J. J. Howden, Thomas Barrie and Dr. A. Moir.

In accordance with the provisions of the constitution, the President of the Association has appointed a Nominating committee composed of G. A. Gillespie, H. B. Cowan, M. Lyle, J. E. Smith, Ross Dobbin and Harry Taylor. Members of this committee will meet on Tuesday, January 9th to make nominations, and any member of the Association may submit to this committee before said date the name of any active member of the Association whom he desires to see a member of the Board.

The final meeting of the Board of Directors was held at the Association Building Tuesday evening. The members of the Board first partook of a turkey dinner as a mutual treat, after which the various reports of the Association committees and officers were received and considered. The financial report shows that the Association has run pretty close to the estimated receipts and expenditures during the year 1916, although the original budget of the Association which was made up on the basis of $8,000 will likely be exceeded by about $250, this being the result largely of the increase in the expense of heating the building.

The Association is short on its $5,000 subscription canvass by about $320. The members of the Board will endeavour to secure subscriptions to cover this shortage before the 1st of January next. It would be a great help to the Association, in view of the many obligations which must be met at this time, if subscribers would kindly mail their cheques to the Association office this week.

Reports of the officers show the work of the Association to be in a most healthy condition, gymnasium and Bible classes and Sunday afternoon meetings having a larger attendance than in any previous year.

The social privileges of the Association are being widely used. Three bowling leagues are now using the alleys, and other features are proving equally attractive.

There will be no regular Sunday afternoon meeting held until after the first of the year in view of many conflicting engagements on the part of our young men.

The hose was turned on the skating rink Tuesday afternoon for the first time, and it is expected that there will be skating by Saturday of this week.

Junior hockey players are reminded of the practice to-night at 7 o'clock at Brock street rink. It is important that players should be on hand in time to get on the ice at 7 o'clock sharp. The following players are expected out and a practice game will be played:

	Defence
Montgomery		Moore
McIntyre		Scott
	Rover
Graham		Wright
	Centre
Cherrett		Clarke

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The 93rd Battalion hockey team, which this time last year was preparing for their battles in the intermediate O. H. A series, are nearly all playing the big game in France. Lieut. Dupuy, the defence player, Lieut. Ketchum, left wing, Pte. Percy Windsor, centre, Pte. Harry Blewett, right wing, and Lieut. Sexton, rover, are all at the front, and Capt. Widdifield, the goal keeper, will be there in a short time, if he has not already gone. Pte. Wedlock, Sergt. Anderson and other spares of the team are also in France. Peterborough hockey fans will unite in wishing them the best of luck and a speedy return.

Lieut. Barney Quinn, of the 247th Battalion, who before the war was a member of the Y.M.C.A. Junior City League team, was out at practice with the 247th last night. Considering that he spent the last two winters in the trenches he showed good form.

Sergt. Wm. Lane of the 247th Battalion, better known as "Ajax," is acting as trainer of the soldiers' intermediate team. He knows how to put a team in condition.

Claude Montgomery, the clever little goaler of last year's Electrics, has been selected as goalkeeper with the 228th Battalion (Toronto) Junior O.H.A. team. Montgomery donned the khaki last summer and is a signaller with the 228th.

Leo Derocher, the old Peterborough goal keeper, was a visitor at the rink last night.

Leo Kennealey, who was a spare with the Peterborough juniors last year, and who played great hockey for the Pennants in the City League, is attending St. Michael's College, Toronto, but is eligible to play here. He will be out with the team during the Christmas holidays.

The 247th intermediates had a lively practice at Brock street rink last night with a big squad in line although all the players were unable to get out. Among those in uniform were: Legros, Halpin, Coughlin, Thornton, Shaw, Quinn, McMartin, Jackson, Kennealy, Hayes, Evans and King. The latter hails from Regina.

With a double schedule for the 247th intermediates and a single for the Peterborough juniors, local fans will see six games during January. The Soldiers will play Lindsay twice and Cobourg twice at the Brock street arena, while the juniors will entertain Bowmanville and Oshawa, the first visit of the Lakeshore teams here for several years.

BOWLING

At the Water street alleys, the turkey given for the high score for three games for Monday and Tuesday was won by Mr. W. D. Bishop, his scores being 199, 214, 199—612. J. D. Fitzpatrick held the high score of 598 up till 6 o'clock Tuesday night, when it was beaten by Mr. Bishop.

Owing to the death yesterday morning of Mr. Everett Williamson, of the De Laval Co., there was no league game played last night on Water street alleys. Arrangements will be made to have the game played in the near future.

GAIN IN GERMAN SAVINGS.

Small Depositors Assured of No. Danger from War Loans.

Following the official closing of subscriptions to the Fifth German war loan in October, many of the savings bank depositors who had drawn out their little hoards as to the effect of a rumour that the Government was to force the savings banks to subscribe to the loan if such steps became necessary, began bringing their money back to the banks, and the Berliner Tageblatt reports that during the first half of October the savings banks of the German capital took in $536,500 in excess of their disbursements. The Tageblatt remarks in this connection that "Unfortunately in the meantime a great deal has been spent for useless things, something that would not have happened if nobody had paid any attention to such silly rumours in the first place."

[illegible] part played by the pupils of the German schools in raising money for the loan, the Berlin press points out that even the illegitimate children standing under the guardianship of the city subscribed 180,000 marks, bringing their subscriptions to all five war loans up to 314,700 marks, $74,796.)

$100,000,000 a Year U. S. Cancer Toll

Head of Actuarial Society Estimates Value of Human Lives Destroyed

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.— Cancer is not hereditary, nor is it contagious, according to Arthur Hunter, President of the Actuarial Society of America, who told the Association of Life Insurance Presidents the conclusions he had drawn from an extensive study of life insurance statistics.

"Every one must recognize a serious menace to the community in any disease which resulted in more than 80,000 deaths last year and which in the last decade has caused the deaths of nearly 750,000 inhabitants of the United States," he said. "About one-half of those deaths in 1915 were among persons under 60 years of age. If we assume that each of those individuals was worth potentially $2,500, the community was poorer by $100,000,000 through their deaths, aside from the cost of attending them in their sickness.

"There seems little to support the view that cancer is the result of contagion. Twenty thousand applications for life insurance received in August, 1916, were reviewed, and it was found that in 468 cases one only of the parents of the applicant died of cancer, and in only four cases both parents were stated to have died of that disease. Out of these 402 cases where one or both parents had died of cancer, 42 per cent. of the other parents had died of some other disease, 56 per cent. were living, at an average age of 61, and less than 1 per cent. had died of cancer. There were accordingly 122 times as many cases in which one parent had died of cancer as of those in which both parents had died of the disease. This clearly indicates that there is very little to fear from contagion.

"My first investigation as to possible heredity consisted of cases of persons insured in six companies, both parents having died of cancer prior to the date of application for insurance. I first ascertained, wherever known, the cause of death of the parents of those who died of cancer. Of 472 grandparents of the insured the cause of death was given in 234 cases, of which 2 were from cancer. The cause of death was stated in 184 of these as 'old age,' the average age at the death of which was 82. In 72 of the cases the cause of the grandparents' death was not known, but the age was given, the average being 62. In 155 cases neither the age nor the cause of death was known. It is reasonable to conclude that if only two died of cancer out of 234 parents of persons who died of cancer, that disease is not hereditary.

"My next task was to find the death rate from cancer among those whose parent had both died of cancer. Of 175 sons and daughters who lived beyond the age of 40, 19, or 11 per cent., had died from various diseases at the age of 52. None of these deaths had been from cancer. The remaining 156 were living at an average age of 53. Of the 103 sons and daughters who lived beyond the age of 50 there were 9 deaths, none of which had been due to cancer. The remaining 63 were alive at an average age of 59. As the average age at death from cancer among life insurance policy holders is about 55, many of the progeny of the cancerous parents were within the danger zone, yet there were no deaths from cancer.

"The material that has been presented justifies the belief that cancer is not hereditary, and that there is no hereditary predisposition to that disease. Certainly the statistics show that a man or a woman, one or both of whose parents died from cancer is no more likely to die from that disease than those whose family history was free from that blemish. Strong proof should be presented in the future to justify asking the public to take any other point of view. Men and women who are in anxiety of mind on account of the appearance of cancer in their ancestry or immediate family may dismiss such anxieties as there is no statistical evidence at the present time that the disease of cancer is transmitted by inheritance in mankind."

DEUTSCHLAND NOT BLAMED.

Mistake of Tug Captain Responsible For New London Tragedy.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Dec. 20.— A mistaken [illegible] signal given by Capt. John H. Gurney of the tug T. A. Scott, Jr., when that vessel and the German submarine Deutschland were drawing close together in the swirling water off Race Rock, in Long Island Sound, was responsible for the collision between the two vessels on November 17, which resulted in the loss of several members of its crew, according to the finding of Federal steamboat inspectors, made public yesterday.

Captain Koenig of the Deutschland is exonerated from blame.

TORONTO MAN WAVED THE FLAG IN BOSTON

But It Was the Union Jack and the Hub Nearly Mobbed Newton Wylie

Scenes at a Billy Sunday Meeting Quieted When Starry Banner Was Lugged Out.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 20.— There was a new kind of excitement in Billy Sunday tabernacle, opposite the Boston Opera House, Monday, when Newton Wylie, of Toronto, billed as the man who put Ontario on the water wagon, was asked by Mr. Sunday to mount the platform and tell the vast audience something about it.

The request came at the close of one of Sunday's famous booze sermons, which he gave especially to have its influence in Tuesday's Boston election, when the city is making the greatest fight in a half century to go dry.

Mr. Wylie mounted the platform and started to tell those assembled what he had done for Toronto and other Canadian cities, and as he talked he in some mysterious way drew from his clothes a small British flag, which he started to wave. There were evidently Germans in the audience, for at once a yell went up from many quarters, and in less time than it takes to tell, a small sized riot was on. Men were struck down and some women fainted and had to be taken to the rest room in the rear of the tabernacle.

As things began to assume serious aspects, Mr. Wylie very craftily and also in some unknown manner, probably by a trick of Black Art made away with the British flag and produced the Stars and Stripes. This quieted the audience, and quiet was resumed. Brewster and Matthews struck up "America," and most of the audience arose and sang.

Dropped Bag of Hams When Police Asked Questions

Rude Little Jolt for Man Who Sought to Reduce Cost of Living.

MONTREAL, Dec. 20.—Having more respect for liberty than for high-priced eatables, some one who was afraid of police scrutiny, dropped an eighty pound bag of hams and a side of beef when he was asked to give an account of himself and the bag, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

Constable St. Amour saw the man and the bag together for a few minutes. When the 'Cop' asked a question the man and bag moved away. Several questions were asked while the men were some distance apart, the bag carrier increasing his speed after request for information. Finally the policeman ran, then the prowler, with eighty pounds handicap, looked like a 1 to 20 shot. He discarded his surplus weight and put on full steam. He outdistanced the bluecoat, and seemed quite immune from whizzing bullets. With no one else on the street, the constable fired to hit. He let six shots ring out after the stranger before the latter turned off Craig street to Wolfe. A blind alley at that point had no terrors for the pursued, who scaled a high fence and made his escape. The meat was taken to No. 3 police station, where it awaits an owner.

TO FIX PRICE OF WHEAT

British Government Will Regulate the Home-Grown Article.

FLORIDA UNDER EXPERIENCED PERSONAL ESCORT

With the advent of Winter, the questions arise, "How shall one escape the cold winds and snows of February and March," and "Where shall one go?"

Florida is the nearest summerland, being only 36 hours distant by luxurious trains. Travel this winter promises to surpass all records, and Europe being still "closed" railway and hotel accommodation to Florida will be at a premium.

Because of such conditions, the tour under experienced personal escort with consequent relief from worries and the certainty of good hotels, reserved long in advance, is attractive. To independent travellers, hotel accommodation will be well nigh impossible to secure since many places report that they are booked full now.

A party limited to 20 members, arranged and conducted in a high grade manner, leaves Toronto on Feb. 14th to spend six weeks in leisurely travel down the fascinating St. John's River, and in motoring extensively over the finest roads through picturesque and romantic Florida with nearly two weeks stay at Daytona, St. Petersburg, DeLand and a few days at St. Augustine.

This tour will appeal to the discriminating travellers for the details are as far removed from the commonplace as the itinerary. The most desirable features of Florida travel are included, and the requirements of each member receive careful attention. Leisure, Comfort and Consideration are thereby effectively secured.

Full particulars with descriptive itinerary and booklets furnished by Miss Florence Withrow, B.A., 130 Hazelton Ave., Toronto Phone North 7610.

Sure To Get a Fountain Answer. A judge—a colleague of Lord Chancellor Ellenborough—had acquired the habit when delivering judgment, of putting by way of argument to himself the question, "I ask myself," so and so. On one occasion he began as usual—"I ask myself," so and so. "Yes," quietly remarked Lord Ellenborough, "and a d—d foolish answer you'll get."

Women would be happy if they could live long without getting very old.

AWARDED THE D. S. O.

Colonel G. T. Denison of Heydon Villa, Dovercourt Road, Toronto's senior police magistrate, has received word that his son, Maj. Garner W. Denison (brother of Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, Peterboro) has been awarded the Distinguished Service Order for his splendid work during the attack on and capture of Thiepval. The award follows a letter from the officer commanding Maj. Denison's division thanking the Major for the work of his company at that engagement and asking that the men of that company be congratulated.

Maj. Denison's career has been distinctive in the military history of Canada. He graduated at the head of his class from the Royal Military College, Kingston, after establishing the highest record ever made at the institution up to that time. He immediately entered the Royal Engineers and since that his work has been one of the shining lights in the engineers service. He sat on the Boundary Commission between British and French Nigeria, and was later engineering officer in Africa. He later served in Somaliland, and in India.

His work during the war has been equally distinctive. He was wounded at Gallipoli, where his five officers were killed, and he was left to command the company alone. He later saw some fighting against the Arabs in Egypt, and was mentioned in the despatches for his fine work at the front. Recently he has evidently done excellent work in strengthening the lines before Thiepval, and it is evidently for this work that he has been honored.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—A raid by bears on the Stock Exchange shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon drove prices off to nearly 12 points from the high quotations of the day. U. S. Steel broke to 108 1-4 under an avalanche of selling orders as compared with a high to-day of 113.

Dow Jones, financial news ticker, in explaining the break, said the street had confidential reports that the administration will address to the belligerents "some suggestions or proposals in regard to peace," in the near future.

New York, Dec. 20.—Airbrake 155, Atchison 104 3-4, 104 1-4; B. and O. 85, 84 1-2, C.P.R. 165, Erie 37 1-4, 36 1-2, Reading, 108 1-4, 107 5-8, Rep., 80 1-2, 78 3-4; U. Pac., 148 3-4, 148 1-2; U. S. Steel, 112, 108 1-2; Int. Nickel, 43 1-2, 43; Anaconda, 87 1-2, 85 1-8.

LONDON, Dec. 20. — The Stock Market opened to-day with a general strong tendency following Lloyd George's speech before Parliament, reflecting confidence.

MARKET OPINIONS OF NEW YORK HOUSES

Shearson, Hammill & Co.—We would continue to advise liquidation on the rallies.

E. & C. Randolph—There are a good many lame ducks waiting to get out of the stocks. Bull confidence has had a shock from which it will take it some time to recover, and I believe that stocks are a sale on strong spots.—Evans.

J. S. Bache & Co.—We would not be in any hurry to buy stocks. Better pay a little more for them when the present uncertainty has passed.

Bryant, Dunn & Co.—It would be natural to expect trading to become more and more professional for the time being at least.

Laidlaw & Co.—The matter of new engagements appears to call for discriminating judgment in order to avoid a repetition of the over-extension which was only partly corrected when the market received its first "peace shock."

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—Live stock receipts fair, prices steady, prices unchanged.

Mother of pearl should never be washed with soap, for it discolours and destroys the brilliancy of the shell. The right method of cleaning is with whitening and cold water.

Tea kettles would last longer if after use they were turned upside down to drain dry. It is the little drop of water left at the bottom which starts the rust that ends in a leak.

If your gas burns unevenly, low at one side and with long flame at the other, you may be sure there is dust in the tip. Run a piece of thin cardboard through it and you will remove the dirt.

If your wash boiler should rust make a lining of unbleached cotton to fit it. Use cover to cut pattern of bottom. This is a splendid way to keep clothes from getting spots of iron rust on them.

Old-Fashioned Things.—An old but clever doctor was noted for his grotesque manner and old-fashioned methods. One time a lady called him in to treat her baby who was slightly ailing. "But, doctor," protested the young mother, "castor oil is such an old-fashioned remedy!" "Madam," replied the doctor, "babies are old-fashioned things."

Lemon juice whitens and toughens the hands without making the skin look hard. Raw potato rubbed on the hands after peeling potatoes and before washing removes the stain splendidly.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION IN ENGLAND

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Within forty-eight hours of Premier Lloyd George's first speech, England has been unprecedently awakened to the actualities of war.

Revolutionary changes have come in rapid succession. If national prohibition of liquor was announced this afternoon it would not be surprising. It is reported that liquor will soon be entirely banned in Scotland in order to increase the output of shipping. Such a move would also increase the output of shells and foodstuff in various ways if applied rigorously to the entire country.

VON BISSING'S REPLY TO BELGIAN PROTEST

But He Says That Belgian Labourers Abandoned Work ---What Belgians Say--"German Authorities Opposed Resumption of Industry"---History Will Speak.

GERMANS TO BLAME

HAVRE, Dec. 21.—The reply of General Von Bissing, German Governor-General in the occupied portion of Belgium, to the protests of Belgian Senators and deputies now living in Brussels, against the deportation of Belgians, has been received by the Belgian Government.

In it the German Governor repeats the defence of his actions, so often given, saying that "a large part of the Belgian labourers have abandoned work"; "that the long continuance of this situation began to be felt in evil effects"; that, "in collaboration with competent Belgian ministers, decrees against idleness were issued," and that "the decrees were founded upon considerations of health and conform to the right which without doubt subordinates a conquered people to the army of occupation."

DOES NOT DENY BRUTALITY.

The Belgian Senators and Deputies, replying to General Von Bissing's note, say that he does not contest the brutality of the deportations and the scenes of despair resulting therefrom. They deny that the idleness of the Belgians is attributable to the isolation of the country by the act of the allies, and recall that England agreed to facilitate a supply of raw material for industries as well as food for the population under diplomatic supervision.

"This was a guarantee," said the Belgian rejoinder, "too natural to be rejected, but it was refused, and the project was necessarily abandoned under pressure from German manufacturers, who, without doubt, anticipated the complete ruin of Belgian competition."

GERMANS TO BLAME.

The reply says that if there are idle workers in Belgium it is because the German authorities used every means to deprive them of work and opposed the resumption of industry provided by private and public enterprises. After recalling the proclamation of General Von Bissing at the outset of his administration in which he promised to restore peace and economic prosperity to the occupied regions. The reply concludes:

"History will say what that restoration was and also that the dismantling and depopulation of our occupied provinces for the profit of belligerent Germany has not been accomplished without cries of revolt. The imprecations of the deported and their families and the protestations of public conscience have echoed throughout the world."

GERMANS WERE READY TO SURRENDER TO CANADIANS

Hundred Were Found Lined Up and Ready to Surrender --Rifles Stacked, Coats Buttoned--Germans Were Absolutely Demoralized When Canadians Took Desire Trench.

GERMAN FOOD RIOTS

LONDON, December 21.—A major of the Canadian Grenadiers, among the officers who are in London for Christmas leave, gives more details of the attack and capture of Desire trench. The German infantry had no fight left in them when the Canadians broke through the barrage and leaped into their first trench. A hundred were lined up all ready to surrender. Rifles were stacked without bayonets being fixed and the Huns even had great coats buttoned up ready to file back to Canadian lines.

CAUGHT MORE GERMANS IN TRAP.

The second trench at the place where the company attacked was completely obliterated and they went on to Grandcourt trench, thinking it must be the Desire support which was the objective. With thirty odd men the major captured nearly a hundred more prisoners and found more Huns were in the same trench right and left of him. He blocked these ends and put machine guns on the parapets and gave Fritz the most uncomfortable time. The Germans were absolutely demoralized and the Canadians sent back word that if they could get fifty reinforcements they would be able to reach the outskirts of Pys.

However, the section of Grandcourt trench had to be abandoned to keep the line straight, and it was while coming back that the party were caught by a cross-fire from machine guns.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

CHAPTER XV.

When the two emissaries had left the library Hamilton Burton sat before his hearth and shook loose the reins of his imagination. He burnt driftwood in this room and as his eyes dwelt on the shooting tongues of blue flame that licked around the logs his dreams absorbed him. Yamuro, his Japanese valet, slipped in to see if his master required him, but his tentfall was noiseless, and when he had tiptoed close enough to study the face he departed without speaking. The lips in the yellow face parted in a grin that bared a spread of strong, white teeth. The eyes between high cheekbones glistened in dark slits and in his throat, too low to be heard, a little grunt voiced Yamuro's fanatical admiration. Had Hamilton Burton been an Emperor in the field Yamuro would have asked no greater privilege than to interpose his body between his idolized master and all danger. Such was the power of this wholly selfish but dominant personality. Outside the Oriental chuckled to himself, "No worry—Him got great thoughts."

Yet Hamilton was after all only planning an entertainment. When he had captured the control of Coal and Ore he would stand within grasping distance of his ideal of one man power. He would have rocked the temple of money and snatched out of Malone's teeth Consolidated Narrowstone. That would be prime for celebration. It could be vastly amusing to shake the hands of the vanquished and see them bite back the curses that were welling up in their hearts. While pocketing only the loot he would in reality be the victor—exacting tribute.

That his victory depended on undertakings yet to be accomplished, and beset with gigantic hazards did not disquiet him. Over him shone his star.

His revery snapped like a punctured balloon at the sound of the doorbell and when Harrow ushered in his father, Hamilton rose with a smile of welcome on his lips.

The elder Burton entered with heightened flush on his full cheeks and the son for just an instant studied him with a shrewd appraisement. A man who has by the custom of decades spent each day from sunrise to sunset at hard labor cannot find himself idle without seeking an outlet of some description.

If Tom Burton were to decay here in inactivity he might as well decay genially, taking his pleasure by the way. He was doing it. Like a gentleman and an officer he tippled the evenings out. Rarely was he drunk beyond a genteel limitation—and after an advanced hour he was rarely less so. In slow and mellow fashion he was ripening into slothful and comfortable atrophy. His well shaven face was beginning to reveal those small discolored spots that are the subtle brands of Bacchus. Under the eyes that had once been like the eyes of a hawk, small and puffy sacks were now discernable.

"Well, damn it," Hamilton exculpated to himself, "it was a long time before he had any fun." Then aloud he inquired, "Whose coffers did you fill this evening?"

Tom Burton straightened up a shade pomposily.

"I think my game is—er—on a par with that of others—for luck, as hardly be controlled."

"The question is," suggested the son, "whether you enjoyed yourself."

"Reasonably well, thank you." The elder man looked about the room and spoke complainingly. "I don't see any whiskey and soda about. Will you please ring for some, Hamilton? I'm thirsty."

"It is there on the side table," Hamilton followed the other with his eyes and noted the greedy unsteadiness of the fingers that grasped the decanter. "Do you think you need that drink, father?" he inquired.

The elder man glanced up while the liquor spilled out of the poised bottle and missed the glass. "Why not?" he demanded. "It's about time for a nightcap. I haven't had anything to speak of this evening."

Hamilton nodded with a shrug, but his brows drew themselves in a pained wrinkle. He would not willingly admit doubt of his father's truthfulness, yet the statement lacked all quality of conviction.

The son did not reflect that of the dry rot in old Tom's soul this deception was of a typical symptom. He knew that in the old days Tom Burton's word had been a synonym for inflexible honesty; that it was as good as collateral at the bank.

Then sitting at ease, the well groomed old gentleman held his glass before him and gazed at the colors which the firelight wakened in its amber contents. His face wore the contentment of one whose mood has been artificially mellowed and whose thoughts are more glowing than reliable. He cleared his throat and began to speak importantly.

"My boy, a great idea has come to me—a splendid conception, I may say. I have for all of these years been of very little service to you, but I now see the way to make amends—to, as I might say, become an asset rather than a liability—a sharer in your activities."

Hamilton Burton was standing by the table, studying the face of his father, and at the words his eyes darkened. His question was by no means freighted with pleasure or expectancy as he coolly inquired, "Indeed?"

Tom Burton nodded with much gravity.

"Yes. The other day you were relating to me some matters of business which were quite—er—interesting. I have since given them mature thought and I find that I have evolved a method by which you may, with my suggestions, even improve on your original plan of procedure."

"Stop!" The son wheeled and faced the elder man with a face grown suddenly wrathful. As Tom Burton looked up with surprise, Hamilton went on rapidly and dictatorily. "I never quarrel with my family. It is my pleasure to regard them first in all things, but some thing I will not permit even from them. It is the first time it has ever been necessary to say this to you, sir. I hope it will be the last!"

"Why, what is the matter, my son? I was only about to suggest that—"

"Well, don't do it. The one thing I will not permit is business interference. I need no collaborator. Once—just once Paul made that same mistake. He presumed to offer a suggestion. Paul—who could not figure compound interest—offered me, Hamilton Burton, a financial suggestion! I told him then as I tell you now that any human hand which sticks itself into my affairs will be promptly broken off at the wrist—no matter whose hand it is. That is the one possible thing that could drive me to unkindness to any one of me own blood. In that I am unmistakable. I will have no interference. I am the one financier in this family, and I will submit to no trespassing upon my own field of empire. Let us have that plainly understood."

He ended, and Tom Burton gazed dumfounded at the anger which was slowly dying out of his son's pupils, and which had wrung through his son's words.

"You astonish me!" he said slowly. "I had no idea or trespass—only of assistance."

"Thank you. I have never yet felt the need of any man's assistance. In my own jurisdiction, I admit no peers. I am sorry that you forced me to speak so strongly but candor is best. Until I ask it no human being must volunteer advice or criticism. Go on and play cards and amuse yourself and spend what you like in doing it—but don't annoy me by trying to make money. I won't have it. No—leave that whiskey alone." He peremptorily stretched out his hand, as his father reached again for the decanter. "You have had enough for this evening. In another moment you will be rendering additional useless information."

Again the bell rang, and in his library door he saw Mary Burton, radiant in evening dress and the ermine of a long opera cloak. Her smile was as luminous as sunshine. Behind her it suddenly struck Hamilton that the sight of that particular face across her shoulder was becoming a chronic accompaniment—about Jefferson Edwardes.

Both of them were laughing with a note of mutual understanding.

"Mary," announced her brother, "I want to have a dinner and a dance next week. I want it to be the most memorable affair of the season. Are you in for it?"

She looked at him with sudden amazement, and then her merriment broke out in a series of silvery peals. She turned to Edwardes and repeated in a mockery of awed surprise.

"He wants to have a dance! Do my ears deceive me? Hamilton, whom we can't drag to a party with a truant officer, wants a dance!"

Edwardes smilingly lifted the cloak from her shoulders and held out his hand. "Good-night." Try to get me an invitation, he begged. "Mr Burton, can't I drop you at your house?"

If you don't mind. The elderly gentleman rose and made his way toward the hall, with a step that wavered from the liquor. When they had gone, Hamilton accompanied his sister to the stairs with an arm about her waist.

"Mary," he suggested, a question has just occurred to me. What has become of your duke?"

She turned on the landing and laughed.

"When I came back from abroad, you begged me rid myself of foreign affectations," she announced. "He was one of them, and I took your advice."

"I only begged you to drop your affectations of speech. What I called your pidgin English," he assured her. "I did not seek to hamper your young affections."

"Then I will reply to your question in very colloquial American," she retorted. "As to the duke—I rest a can to him." She turned and ran lightly up the stairs.

Paul had sat through the opera that evening with his customary intensity of interest—but the chatter in the box had irritated him. He had been of late seeing a great deal of Lorraine Haswell, and he thought she at least might have sympathised with his mood and refrained from disconcerting small talk. Their intimacy had so ripened that she should have understood how the things he had to say in how the things he had to say in their tete-a-tetes could not be uttered in company. So when she invited him to join her supper party he declined with the very poor grace.

Paul Burton took the opera seriously, almost religiously, and as he strolled in the foyer during an entr'acte, his annoyance grew. Was there no place where one could enjoy the art of fellow-artists without having one's spirit jarred out of all receptiveness?

Then he remembered the high perches of the less fashionable devotees. He had never been up there but he had heard that the occupants of these upper galleries frowned on noise and even refrained from applause, drinking in the music as though it were too sacred a thing to treat as a mere evening's entertainment. Following a momentary whim he went out to the box office and bought a fresh ticket. Holding it in his hand he mounted above the parterre boxes and the grand-tier boxes, to the highest and cheapest of the galleries where silence and an almost awed concentration reigned. And there, when the lights came on again, he saw a slender figure in a chair near him, leaning forward with her chin resting on her hand, in an absolute fervor of interest. It was Miss Terroll and again she was alone. Once more she impressed him as someone purring with pleasure, and when the performance ended he found himself on the sidewalk whimsically waiting for her to come down from her dollar seat among the gallery gods.

When he caught sight of her, she was slipping as quietly and unobtrusively through the crowds of jewelled and fur-wrapped women and men in evening dress as though she were a mouse vanishing from a ball of banqueting to which she had surreptitiously crept for her crumb. She did not look at the people about her. She did not seem to see them, for her eyes were still languorous with memories of Tristan and Isolde. As Paul touched her arm, she started and he hastened to say: "My car is here—won't you let me drive you downtown?"

She let him lead her to his machine and lay back dreamily against the cushions, as they shot down the avenue between twin threads of electric opals.

For a while they talked of the opera, of the music and the voices, and the musician found himself expanding with a warmth of appreciative contentment, because he had a companion whose understanding and enthusiasm kept step with his own, and a step like that of a classic dance, attuned to harmonies.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRLS' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This illustration shows a little dress of simple loveliness for a child up to 10 years of age. It is just the thing for wear at home or school.

The body part is in long waisted effect, with side front closing to denote smartness and with the lower edges gathered where a wide belt of contrasting goods covers the joining of the skirt, with seven plaits in each half and a neat panel front.

The always fashionable contrasting goods for the collar and cuffs makes other trimming unnecessary, but adding a bow tie takes nothing from the excellent lines of such frock. A pocket may be inserted if you like or a patch pocket placed in the left or right front above the belt.

Linen, St. Nicholas cloth, cotton poplin and the like make satisfactory tub frocks. Plaids, checks, serges and wool mixtures are fine for school dresses. The development of this dress is easily possible in a couple of hours at most.

The dress pattern, No. 8,034, cuts in sizes 4 to 10 years. To make in size 6 requires 2⅞ yards 36 inch material, ⅛ yard 36 inch contrasting goods. Or 2⅝ yards all one material.

To obtain the pattern send to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

REBELLION IS SQUELCHED.

Portuguese Government Now Entirely Master of Situation.

MADRID, Dec. 21.—El Imparcial's Lisbon correspondent telegraphs that the Portuguese Government is entirely master of the situation resulting from the revolutionary outbreaks in various parts of Portugal. The attempts of Machado Santos, at the head of a small band of rebels, to enter the town of Abrantes, eighty miles northeast of Lisbon, resulted in no casualties. Machado Santos, who is a naval officer, will be tried by court-martial, made up of former naval and military officers of rank higher than his.

RHEUMATISM AFTER HIS DAY'S OUTING

Hunting Trip on a Wet Day Brings Painful Results

Once upon a time Charles Mullen, of Philadelphia, went gunning. It was a dismal rainy day, and long exposure to cold and wet brought on a severe attack of rheumatism. He was confined to his home.

A friend recommended Sloan's Liniment, citing his own case as evidence of its effectiveness. Mullen bought a bottle and applied it to his aching limbs. Soon improvement was noticed and he was able to return to business.

Mr. Mullen writes "Since that experience I have never been without Sloan's Liniment in the medicine chest." You will find it soothes bruises, sprains, toothache, and relieves lame back, neuralgia, in fact all external pains. At all druggists, 25c., 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS HAD CHANCE FOR REVENGE

Eagerly They Took It—Fierce Hand-to-hand Work—The Somme Method

An English correspondent writes: A great little fight was fought by a company or two of Newfoundlanders, and the tale has this human and historical value that it will give the exact likeness of a thousand and one struggles engaged in by unnamed platoons, companies, or battalions in the Somme battle. The appointed time for the attack was three in the afternoon. The goal had the exciting name of F39C2.5 to 40A132 or some such hieroglyphic of the map-makers which the regimental officer must translate into a recognised object of the landscape. What mattered most was that the objective, whatever it might be—a strong place, a string of holes, a topographical term, or a smoothed trench—lay at a distance of 4[illegible] yards.

In the waiting hours the enemy's gunners proved suspicious and restless. They dotted the assembly trench with whiz-bangs and crumps. But there is nothing better to add venom to a charge than preliminary shelling, and the Newfoundlanders "went over the lid" in a streak. They expected a quarter of a mile course, but had gone only half the way when they came upon a strong trench that had escaped the notice of airmen and map-makers. It proved formless but far from void. It was indeed full of Germans, to the real delight of the storming party. A hand-to-hand fight was all their wish. It was denied them before, and ever since "Remember July 1" had been the battle-cry.

One of the two officers who then escaped was leading this charge; and as he reached the unexpected trench he knew that he and his men held vengeance in their hands. For a minute or two bayonets and bombs were busy; and then the garrison had no more spirit left in them. Their weapons were thrown down and their hands held up. Seventy prisoners were taken. The trench was won.

CANADA'S BIG LEADERS

Fine Qualities of Generals Overseas Are Praised

It is interesting to have a neutral view of some of the Canadian generals at the front. Several of them are winning high place and may yet rise to high rank as military leaders. Will Irwin, the well known newspaper writer, said some pleasant things to a Canadian correspondent in regard to some Canadian generals.

Of Major-General Turner he said: He is a leader of men. Everyone I met, officers and privates, and even batmen, stood by General Turner like a talisman. The best description I had of him was from an American captain who had been with him since the first contingent came over: "He is always there and never afraid."

Of Major-General Watson he expressed this opinion: He is the coolest proposition I have come across. He told me the night before exactly what he expected to do in the attempt to capture the trench, and showed me while it was happening how it was progressing, just as he had planned. Yet this was no minor operation, and a trench which the Germans had captured and recaptured several times from the British. General Watson, to my mind, is nerve absolute. He has a cool, grey eye that always looks like business.

Major-General Currie made a very favorable impression upon him, as will appear from the following: He has horse-sense and is a born commander. There has been no military evolution ever constructed in Germany that could fool this astute commander.

"EATING MELONS"

How a British Company Advanced Against the Bulgars

An officer who was wounded in the fighting on the Salonica front has written to his parents as follows: "We started on our 'show' at 5 a.m., and advanced all day, taking the village we wanted. Then, about 5 in the evening, when an attack on another village was held up, we were ordered to take it. It seemed a hopeless sort of job, but we determined to have a good try, and ordered the pipers to play. We went steadily on for a mile under very heavy fire, the men laughing, joking, and eating melons.

"Then we caught sight of the enemy's first line trenches, and went for them with a yell, but the Bulgars would not face us, and threw up their hands. I got $4 with my little lot. Then we went on and charged their second line, with the same result. By this time we were all done, but as there was another trench we had a go at that, and then I got hit.

"That was Saturday night, and I was passed on from one ambulance to another until I arrived at Salonica on Sunday night. The men were really splendid, and once they got going the trouble was to prevent them going too fast. Three of my subs. were hit, so my company suffered heavily, but none were killed. I took a rifle and bayonet when we charged, and felt rather disappointed when the Bulgars put up their hands."

Fights For the Strong

Arguing in a speech at Edinburgh against a peace which would restore the situation as it was before the war, Lord Rosebery said: "We are fighting for every neutral nation. We are fighting for one [illegible] for the United States; for, if we were vanquished in the war—which Heaven forbid!—the United States would be the next to suffer from the aggressive and unscrupulous power of Prussia."

"We must be prepared to give up every man who can bear arms."—Mr. Joynson-Hicks, M.P., at Twickenham.

From local harvest thanksgivings 1,500 eggs have been received by the Mayoress of Faversham, Kent, for the wounded.

One Man Applauded.

Camille Saint-Saens was present when Verdi's "Hymn of All Nations" was rendered for the first time at the opening ceremonies of the world's fair in London, and he gave this reason for the "failure" of the composition: "The hymn was arranged to introduce the national anthems of the various countries, and, not knowing that the 'Marseillaise' was at that time in bad repute, it was used as representative of France. The Emperor Napoleon when he heard the strains turned pale, and the knowing ones in the audience were so mortally embarrassed that no one in the great throng dared applaud. Yes, one man did applaud, and that was I. Napoleon arose in his box and directed his opera glass toward me, and I looked at him through my glass. After a few moments the emperor hurriedly departed."

Pretty Good Method.

A famous clergyman tells of a lay preacher's conference in which a veteran described his method of sermon preparation.

"I take my text," he said, "and divide my sermon into three parts. In the first part I tell 'em what I'm going to tell 'em. In the second part—well, I tell 'em. In the third part I tell 'em what I've told 'em."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Only Used For Shaving.

"Sam, here is an account of a man who owns a razor that has been continuous service for 150 years. It was bought in England by his grandfather."

"Well, all I has to say, boss, is dat he must belong to a powerful peaceful family."—Yonkers Statesman.

Eye of a Submarine.

The great fault of the early submarines was that they could not see once they were below the surface of the water. The invention of the periscope altered all that and gave the modern submarine a marvelous eye by means of which it could see over the surface of the ocean, though the body of the submarine is completely below the waves. The eye of the submarine is a straight, hollow tube starting from the steering chamber of the vessel and projecting above the surface of the waves when the boat is submerged. As the periscope is only a matter of six inches in diameter and only projects some eighteen inches above the waves, it is a most difficult thing to see by an enemy. Its total length is about fifteen feet. The submarine's eye is really a combination of telescope and camera obscura. At the top is a powerful lens, and inside at intervals all the way down is a series of mirrors which carry the reflection of what is above the surface to the watcher in the submarine fifteen feet below.—Pearson's Weekly.

When Boys Were Taught to Smoke.

The habit of juvenile smoking in England in the seventeenth century was practically universal. Jorevin de Rochefort, a French traveler of that period, in an account published in 1671 gives a description of an evening he spent at Worcester. He was catechized by one of the townsmen as to the habits of the French people.

"While we were walking about the town," he writes, "he asked me if it was the custom in France, as in England, that when the children went to school they carried in their satchels with their books a pipe of tobacco which their mother took care to fill early in the morning, it serving them instead of breakfast and that at the accustomed hour every one laid aside his book to light his pipe, the master smoking with them and teaching them how to hold their pipes and draw in their tobacco, thus accustoming them to it from their youth, believing it absolutely necessary for a man's health."—St. James' Gazette.

Recruiting in Queen Anne's Day.

Serve your queen or find work! That, in brief, was the rough and ready sentence passed on ablebodied unemployed men in the days of Queen Anne—a period of almost incessant warfare. When the recruiting officer—described at the time as a compound of "canting, lying, impudence, bullying, swearing, drinking and a halberd"—failed to beat up recruits fast enough for Marlborough's wars an act was passed to enable justices to compel all ablebodied men "as have not any lawful means for their own maintenance" to join the army. Parish officers were encouraged to hunt up food for powder and received 55 for every man sentenced to be a soldier, but the result was disappointing. Thousands deserted, and England relied mainly on volunteers. These were offered the bait of a twenty dollar bounty and a discharge after three years—"if they deserved it."—London Mirror.

PARIS TOO WELL LIGHTED.

"Dimmers to Government Officers" Are Given as an Excuse.

Ever vigilant, the Police Prefect of Paris, M. Laurent, likes to assure himself that his orders are carried out with proper accuracy, knowing the tendency of his fellow-citizens to "honor them in the breach" if not regularly controlled.

As the evenings are drawing in, to say nothing of the fact that the clocks have been put back an hour, the police regulations for keeping blinds down after lights are lit are necessarily once more to the fore. The other evening M. Laurent during his nocturnal ramblings noticed that in several quarters the rule was being infringed, so he took occasion at the next weekly convocation of the city Police Commissaries to draw his subordinates' attention to the fact.

"Gentlemen," he remarked, "probably owing to the fact that we have been spared visits from enemy aircraft for some time, there seems to be a tendency to relax the regulations about lighting in the streets and houses. I fear we may one day have a disagreeable awakening, and we—that is, to say, I—will be blamed if there are accidents. Last night, for instance, as I was passing along the quays, I noticed that the windows of a well-known restaurant were brilliantly lighted."

Then, turning to the Commissary in whose district the restaurant is situated, he asked for explanations.

"Monsieur le Prefect," was the answer, "I am fully aware of the slight infraction in question, but as Monsieur X., Minister of ———, happened to be dining there with some friends, I did not feel it incumbent on me"—

The Prefect did not press the point and turned to another colleague. "Can you explain, Monsieur, why in a certain restaurant of the Champs-Elysees quarter, in your district, the windows were yesterday flashing like beacon lights?"

"M. Y., former Minister of ———," rejoined the Commissary of the quarter referred to, "was giving a dinner to some shareholders, so I naturally hesitated"—

"I understand," put in M. Laurent. "At the same time there can be no reason why a bar, such as I remarked yesterday in the ——— quarter, should make light of my regulations." But the Commissary he had turned to had his answer ready:

"The Under-Secretary of State for ——— was holding an informal meeting with some of our leading manufacturers."

"Very well," remarked M. le Prefect, "but can you explain what joyful occasion the Hotel X., overlooking the Seine, was celebrating last Thursday, for from various reports floods of lights were pouring from its windows across the river?"

"The only occasion I can think of," replied the official in whose jurisdiction the hotel lies, "was a banquet offered to Monsieur le Prefet de Police."

Brilliant Irishman Dead.

Irish Nationalism has lost one of its most brilliant younger leaders by the death—he was killed in action on Sept. 9—of Professor T. M. Kettle, professor of economics at the Irish National University.

It is reported that the first time he came to London was when, in 1906, East Tyrone sent him to Westminster as its M.P. But he very soon had a circle of admirers extending very wide of St. Stephen's. To a full share of native Irish eloquence and wit he united an extensive academic knowledge, and his speeches in the House of Commons, though full of the cause he espoused so sturdily, yet sparkled with a genial satire and a whimsical humor that made him friends in every part of the House. He left Parliament in 1910 to take up the university professorship.

Son of a farmer, who was also a pioneer of the land movement in Ireland, he was born in 1880. When the war broke out he answered Mr. Redmond's call to enlist with enthusiasm. He threw up his chair at the university and obtained a commission, and his appeals to his countrymen were the most rousing made during Mr. Redmond's recruiting campaign. He had no sympathy with shirkers, and his condemnations of the German atrocities were among the most caustic and scathing indictments of kultur that the world has heard.

Wonders of Science.

A camera man, working for the educational department of a film company, met an old farmer coming out of a house in one of the middle states and explained his presence on the place thus:

"I have just been taking some moving pictures of life on your farm."

"Did you catch any of my laborers in motion?" asked the old man curiously.

"Sure I did."

The farmer shook his head reflectively and then said:

"Science is a wonderful thing."

Cloudy Ammonia.

To make cloudy ammonia, get twopennyworth of best ammonia, break up, and put into a jug, adding also just a very little baked soap. On to this pour a pint of really boiling water, and then stir till the ammonia and soap are dissolved. When slightly cooled, bottle, and keep tightly corked.

Expert Diagnosis.

The physician had been called in haste to see a small negro who was ill. After a brief examination the doctor announced: "This boy has eaten too much watermelon."

"Oh, doctah," expostulated the parent of the ailing one, "dey ain't no sich t'ing as too much watahmillion. Dat nigger jus' ain' got 'nough stomach."

Honduras' Cotton Future.

Experiments have indicated to Honduras that it may become an important cotton-raising nation.

A HANDSOME PAIR.

Lady Pole Carew Most Distinguished Looking Woman in England.

That the distinction of being society's most beautiful woman belongs to Lady Pole Carew, whose husband has retired from politics, is the opinion of many people in England. Furthermore, General Sir Reginald Pole Carew has been declared the handsomest man in the British army. And "Polly Carey," as he is often referred to, is as popular as he is handsome, while he has a splendid record for service behind him.

He is one of Robert's men, accompanying "Bobs" on his march to Kandahar. In the Boer War, Sir Reginald earned distinction.

He is rather fond, by the way, of telling the following story illustrating the energy of the British soldier. A German attache in the South African war was amazed at the spectacle of the British soldiers, after a fight, staggering into camp, but rushing instantly after a football which was thrown on the veldt. Said the attache to Sir Reginald:

"Well, you are the most extraordinary people in the whole civilized world. I have been with your men all day. I know what they have done. I know they have had scarcely anything to eat or drink, and I know of no other troops in the world that would not have been lying down asleep."

Lady Pole Carew is the eldest daughter of the famous yachtsman and sportsman, the Marquis of Ormonde, and shares her father's love and enthusiasm for the sea. She is also a great lover of foreign travel, and some time ago made a tour of the world. It is fifteen years ago since she married Sir Reginald. Caring little for society life, she divides her time between Antony House, her Cornish home, the gardens of which she has made famous, and her beautiful estate in Tipperary.

He Didn't Know.

"John," said Mrs. Atwood, thoughtfully, "everybody in society appears to think an awful lot of genalogy these days."

"Jennie what?" exclaimed John, as he looked up from his evening paper.

"Genealogy," repeated Mrs. Atwood.

"What's that?"

"I don't exactly know," replied Mrs. Atwood, "but I think it's a tree of some kind. At least, I heard some ladies refer to it as a family tree."

"Well, what of it?" he asked.

"Why, it seems to be a sort of fad, you know, and every one who is any one has to have one, I suppose."

"Buy one, then," he said, irritably. "Buy the best one in town and have the bill sent to me, but don't bother me with the details of that affair. Get one and stick it up in the conservatory, if you want one, and if it isn't too large."

"But I don't know anything about them."

"Find out, and if it's too large for the conservatory, stick it up on the lawn, and if that ain't big enough, I'll buy the next garden in order to make room. There can't be any of them fly any higher than we can, and if it comes to a question of trees, I'll buy a whole orchard for you."

Still she hesitated.

"The fact is, John," she confessed at last, "I don't just know where to go for anything in that line. Where do they keep the family trees, and all such things?"

"What do you suppose I know about it?" he exclaimed. "You're running the fashion end of this establishment, and I don't want to be bothered with it. If the florist can't tell you anything about it hunt up a first-class nurseryman and place your order with him."

A Sporting Offer.

Melbourne Inman, the famous billiard player, who has recently joined the Volunteers, was touring in the Antipodes a little while back, and found himself stranded at Perth, Western Australia, with two days to wait for a boat.

Strolling up to the principal hotel in the place, and making first, as was his wont, for the billiard-room, he found it deserted save for the marker, a likely-looking youth of seventeen or thereabouts, who promptly invited him to have a game.

"No, thanks!" replied Inman.

"Oh, come now, be a sport! I'll give you fifty in a hundred."

"No, thanks!" came the answer once more, repeated this time with considerable emphasis. "I'm Inman, the champion!"

"Oh, well, sir, if that's so I can only give you thirty in a hundred!" was the quite unexpected reply of the juvenile marker.

The Reason.

At the Caledonian banquet in London a Scotsman who had settled in the metropolis made a speech in which Scotland and all things Scottish were so fulsomely praised that an Englishman who sat next him said when he had finished:

"If Scotland is all that you Scotsmen say it is why don't you stay there instead of coming here?"

"Weel," answered the Scotsman, "Ah'll tell ye hoo it wis wi' me. When Ah wis in business in Fife Ah fand a' the fowk wis just as cliver as meesel', an' Ah cudna gar the two en's meet. Sae Ah came awa' seeth, an' ain' syne, noo, Ah've been deein' tae wust."

Tainted Meat.

If meat gets just slightly tainted in hot weather before it is cooked, cut off the tainted part, and wash the remainder of the joint in strong vinegar and water, sponging it all over with it. Such a joint should always be roasted. Boiling or stewing accentuates the tainted flavor.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Playing the Police

A Story of an American Who Protected a Russian Girl.

By ELINOR MARSH

While the last Russian revolution was coming on, Alan Thorpe, a young American, in what was then St. Petersburg was walking on the street one day when suddenly he felt a hand on his arm, a soft, small hand, evidently belonging to a woman. Glancing sidewise, he saw a girl seemingly about twenty years of age. Looking up appealingly, she hurriedly spoke a few words in the Russian language in a low tone. Thorpe was connected with an agency of an American business house in St. Petersburg and had lived in Russia long enough to speak the language pretty well.

"Give me your protection," said the girl. "I am followed and may be arrested."

"What do you wish me to do?"

"Say that I am your wife."

"Why do you fear arrest?"

"I am supposed to be a revolutionist."

"I am an American. You being a Russian, I doubt if"—

"All the better," said the girl in broken English. "You being a foreigner, the police will be all the more careful in arresting your wife."

"Where did you learn English?"

"I speak several languages. I have been in England. I once spent some months there."

The girl withdrew her hand for a few moments, and Thorpe felt something drop in the side pocket of his overcoat.

"What's that?" he asked.

"Never mind what it is. If it is discovered there and you do not know what it is you will be really surprised. The police will thus be the more readily convinced that you did not put it there yourself."

"Suppose I refuse to acknowledge you?"

"In that case, if they arrest me, I am lost."

"What do you mean?"

"I shall spend the rest of my life in Siberia."

This surely was an unfortunate position in which to be placed—an attractive girl pleading for a chance to avoid a lifelong imprisonment, endangering the liberty of the man she asked to help her. Thorpe was an American, full of chivalry. He knew that the sensible thing for him to do was to disengage himself from the girl and leave her to take care of herself. But he could not bring himself to do this. It flashed through his mind that if he became involved he would find a way out of the trouble. He had the rights of any foreigner, and he was not interested in the revolution. He might suffer imprisonment for a time, but he would eventually be able to prove that he was not a revolutionist. It needed only this reasoning, in addition to the pleading face turned up to his and the feeling of the little hand on his arm, to win him to the girl's purpose.

When his mind was made up he began to talk volubly in English to his companion, pointing out various objects as he passed them with his cane, as though he were conducting her through the city as a stranger. Occasionally he used the words "my dear," but it is doubtful if the two were under surveillance or, if so, whether they were understood, for a Russian police officer is not supposed to know English. The girl, too, played the part of a visitor to the city, regarding with interest the objects pointed out and remarking upon them.

"Are we going toward your home?" asked Thorpe in a whisper.

"No; take me to yours."

This staggered the American, but he remembered the great stake of a life imprisonment in the Kara mines for the girl he was aiding, and he led the way to his lodgings. He was about to pass into the house where he lived when an officer stepped up to him and said very civilly in the Russian tongue:

"Have you your passport with you, sir?"

Thorpe, who was never without his passport, took it from his pocket and handed it to the officer, who looked at it and from it to him. Seeing that the description tallied with the original, the officer handed the document back to its owner, then asked:

"May I see madame's passport?"

"What does he say?" asked the girl of Thorpe, pretending not to understand.

"He wishes to see your passport."

"Oh, it is in my trunk. Ask him to come in and I will show it to him."

By this time the officer was convinced that the pair were American travelers. He went into the house and remained with Thorpe in a reception room while the girl ascended the staircase ostensibly to go to her room to get her passport. Thorpe, who knew that she would not come back, engaged the officer's attention by asking him questions. The man wished to stop the girl, but refrained from doing so until it was too late. Thorpe, who knew that when the officer was convinced that his supposed wife would not return he would take him into custody, was in agony. He remembered the girl's slipping something into his pocket and knew it would be found there. All this seemed too much to do for a woman he had never seen before, and he was tempted to free himself at once by declaring the deception; but, whether it was wise or unwise, it was now too late, and he refrained.

For awhile after the girl had gone upstairs Thorpe talked volubly to the officer, intending to give her as much time as possible to make her escape. During this period Thorpe was thinking how she could get away. There was a rear staircase by which she might descend into a back yard and thence gain another street. But it was likely that there were others on the lookout, and it was possible that her flight by this route would be intercepted. Other houses about the same height as the one they were in flanked it, and she might escape by the roof. In any event if she succeeded Thorpe would be left to the mercy of the Russian government.

What was his amazement to see her re-enter the room.

"My dear," she said, "I wish you would go upstairs and see if you can find my passport. I thought I left it in my trunk when I went out, and, though I have turned everything upside down, I haven't found it. I think that I must have placed it in your trunk, but it is locked and I could not open it. Go and see if it is not there."

What could her return mean but that she had found that she could not sacrifice her benefactor and had come back to permit him to escape instead of herself? He was not to be placed in the position of accepting such a sacrifice from a woman. Taking a bunch of keys from his pocket, he handed them to her, telling her to go herself and look for her passport in his trunk. She demurred at first, but when he handed her his overcoat, asking her to take it up with her, she consented and again left the room, with the coat on her arm.

If the officer had any suspicions they were lulled by the woman's return. And when she left the room a second time with Thorpe's coat there was a great relief in her heart. The moment she was out of the officer's sight she put her hand in the pocket of the coat to assure herself that what she had placed in it was still there. She felt it and hurried on, transferring it as she did so to her own person. During her previous absence from below she had investigated the route of escape by the roof and now kept on till she reached it. Emerging from the scuttle, she ran to the next building, which was but a few feet lower, jumped down on to it, ran over several buildings of the same height and disappeared down the scuttle of the fifth house from the one from which she had started.

When some time had passed and the girl did not return Thorpe began to show signs of impatience. He proposed to go after her, but the officer interposed. Thorpe waited a little longer, then said:

"I fear that if I do not go up at once I shall lose my valuables."

"Why so?" asked the officer. "Surely your wife would not steal from you."

"She is not my wife. I never saw her before today. She joined me on the street. I presume she is"—

The officer waited not to hear the rest, but, springing up, ran to the door, gave a shrill whistle, then ran upstairs, followed by several other men.

Every room in the house was searched, including Thorpe's apartments. Besides his overcoat, several articles of value were missing. He was astonished, thinking that, after all, he had been robbed by a woman who had worked on his sympathies for the purpose. But the police disabused his mind of this theory. They knew better. They had been on the track of a woman they knew well. This one they did not know, but while chasing the other had come to suspect her. She had fooled them by placing herself under Thorpe's wing and pretending to be his wife. But Thorpe was believed to be entirely innocent in the matter and was not troubled even to make an explanation.

One day Thorpe was accosted on the street by an old woman who asked for alms. He was turning away from her when she said in a low tone:

"I am the girl you saved from Siberia."

Thorpe scrutinized her and saw that her white hair was a wig; the wrinkles in her face were skillfully painted. He asked her to give him an account of herself since he saw her last. After telling him how she escaped she continued:

"The article I slipped in your overcoat pocket was a bomb. I had received it a few minutes before I joined you from a worker in the cause of Russia's liberation. When I was permitted to go upstairs for my passport I could have escaped, but I was unwilling to leave you, my benefactor, with the bomb in your overcoat pocket. Your asking me to carry your coat upstairs solved the problem. I robbed you of certain articles that it might appear to the police that I was a common thief who had deceived you. This would avoid implicating you in protecting a revolutionist. When it is safe to do so the articles will be returned to you."

"Who are you?" asked Thorpe.

"I am the daughter of a noble. My home is in the province of Vologda. I came into the revolutionary party through teaching the children on my father's estate. I am now a steady worker for the cause. But I expect to be taken in time and sent to Siberia. I have made many narrow escapes and should have been taken when I attached myself to you had it not been for the stupidity of the officer who demanded my passport. I have stopped you to thank you for what you did for me and to say that your property will be returned to you. You are henceforth while in Russia under the ward of the revolutionists and have nothing to fear."

She turned away from Thorpe, and he never saw or heard of her again.

Believes She Was Saved From Stroke of Paralysis

All One Side Was Cold and Powerless, when She Began Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

A dead nerve cell can never be replaced. In this way it is different to other cells of the human body. But feeble, wasted nerve cells may be restored, and herein lies hope.

In this fact is also a warning to take note of such symptoms as sleeplessness and loss of energy and ambition, and restore the vitality to the nervous system before some form of helplessness results.

Nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis are the natural results of neglecting to keep the nerves in healthful condition. The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when you suspect there is something wrong, will soon restore vitality to the nervous system, and thereby, prevent serious developments.

Mrs. Merritt Nichols, R. R. No. 3, Dundalk, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you the great benefit I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was so nervous I could not sleep, and found it hard to get my work done at all, but, having no help at the time, had to do the best I could. Finally my left arm became powerless and cold, and this continued to get worse until my whole side was affected, head and all. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the first box helped me so much that I used several, and believe that this treatment saved me from having a paralytic stroke. It has built me up wonderfully, and I can recommend it most heartily, believing that if more Nerve Food were used there would be much less sickness."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures in nature's way by nourishing the feeble, wasted nerves back to health and vigour. Fifty cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THREE MEN IN A BOAT.

Police Officer Thought He Had Smuggling Party at Sarnia.

SARNIA, Ont., Dec. 21. — Sergt. Coulter saw three men land from a rowboat at midnight, coming from Detroit, and thought he had caught a party of smugglers. He saw them enter a barn, and arrested one, Wm. Syphers. The other two jumped from a loft doorway and got away. A search of the boat revealed a quantity of whiskey, including a half-gallon jug, some glassware, and some cloth.

One of the best things in the world for an aching tooth, as proved by experience, is tincture of benzion on a bit of borton and inserted in the tooth if there is a cavity large enough to put anything in. The relief is almost immediate. The remedy is pleasant and cheap, as ten cents' worth of benzion will last a long time.

GERMANS WERE READY TO SURRENDER TO CANADIANS

GERMAN FOOD RIOTS.

There are scores of officers from the Canadian divisions returned from the front for Christmas. All are cheery and optimistic. In a recent raid by a Montreal battalion a letter was captured which throws light on the Hun peace proposals. It is dated from Hamburg, and written by the wife of a soldier who was taken prisoner. "Here there have been frightful riots to-night," the letter said. "Women and children have broken into the shops and robbed them. What is going to happen? People have nothing to eat. There are no potatoes left. Fat and bread are scarce. Soldiers with bayonets were behind us. Green grocers and grocers' shops were quite wrecked. Mother has just come in and told us that mounted troops were on Musienburg. What an awful life. They were after us with their sabres right up to our doors. I will give you no further details as I believe letters are opened."

On another prisoner was found a Socialist petition addressed to the German Chancellor, demanding the speediest possible ending of the war.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

This week's market was characterized by the usual seasonal activity. Trading was active despite the prevailing high prices. The mid-week market, which was held to-day did not bring out a very large quantity of produce. Turkeys predominated, likewise the prices which ranged from 30c to 35c a pound. There is no ignoring the fact that turkeys are scarce, and will scarcely be more than sufficient to supply the demand even at the present prices. Geese sold at $2 while a few of the larger species brought $2.25. Ducks sold at 85c and a dollar each. The few that were offered this morning were quickly bought up. It is safe to say that both ducks and geese will take precedence over the turkey on many a Christmas table unless the prices take a big slump, which is very unlikely.

Butter continues firm at 45c a lb with a fair demand. There will hardly be much change in the price of butter until after the New Year when higher prices are looked for. More people are using peanut butter and other substitutes than ever before. A further increase in the price of butter will only serve to swell the number of people who are economising in this way.

Eggs have reached the prohibitive price of 60c a dozen. They are now in a class where it is difficult to secure enough for invalids and children. There is little hope for easier prices in the egg market until after the New Year when the worthy barnyard hen may terminate her vacation and relieve the scarcity of that particular product.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

An Idaho farmer tells The Breeders' Gazette that he had an average of fifteen bushels of alfalfa seed per acre on fifty-three acres.

American packers have this year been killing thousands of thin steers that ordinarily go to the country for a finish. This explains why this year's slaughter will be 500,000 or so in excess of that of 1915; but there will not be a corresponding increase in weight of meat produced.

Nine out of the ten silos visited by Kansas farmers in a tour taken for the purpose were underground. Ensilage two and three years old was found in perfect condition in these "pits." They are easier to fill than the ordinary silo, but they are a good deal harder to feed from.

The war has given a boom to the Hackney in England. The enforced limitation in the use of autos has led to an increase in the demand for Hackneys for pleasure purposes at home, and one of the allied nations is buying English Hackney stallions for the breeding of military mounts.

Where the efforts of an entire community are combined towards the development of a particular type of farming all will require the same supplies, the same type of implements, and the same kind of labour. This affords opportunity for co-operation in purchasing supplies and obtaining buyers for products.

It is no uncommon sight in France to see women ploughing and harrowing the land, carting produce, marketing, loading manure and spreading stover the fields, and in fact, doing a hundred and one jobs done by the stronger sex in normal times. As a result the acreage uner wheat and other cereals is very little less than in normal years.

"The high egg-producing qualities of a flock are transmitted by the male bird," says Rose M. Sherwood, acting head of the department of poultry husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural College. "A male bird that has come from parents of medium production cannot produce a high-producing individual when crossed with even the best of hens."

Recent tests conducted at the Ohio Experiment Station indicate that slag from blast furnaces is not as efficient as limestone and lime for correcting acidity in the soil. Basing his statements upon these tests, J. W. Ames, Station chemist, in the December Monthly Bulletin, advises farmers not to substitute slag for any form of lime except in an experimental way.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

For a greasy skin make a paste of seven parts of carbonate of zinc, one of borax, and sufficient cold water. Apply at night before going to bed. Rub it well into the skin, then wipe with a soft cloth.

RUSSIA'S REFUGEE PROBLEM.

Thousands of Roumanians Have Crossed the Frontier and Need Help.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 20.—The passage across the Russian frontier of thousands of Roumanians who have abandoned their homes and property in the face of invading Germans and Bulgarians has cast the shadow of a new refugee problem on the Russian Empire. These refugees have been pouring into Odessa, Kiev and other southern Russian cities in a destitute and helpless condition.

The magnitude of Russia's economic burden is appreciable when it is considered that the country has received already since the beginning of the war a refugee population far exceeding the combined citizenship of the Scandinavian countries, while the resources of the country have been taxed to the utmost to provide for the wandering peoples whose homes have fallen within enemy lines. Refugee committees, looking beyond the immediate necessities, are succeeding in distributing the migratory population throughout the interior, encouraging their colonization in fertile agricultural districts, and giving them work in making boots, all sorts of clothing and other immediate marketable articles.

The refugee ranks have been inevitably thinned by disease and many have fallen victims to cold, lack of proper food and clothing and unsanitary conditions.

WILSON'S NOTE MAY MEAN ENTRANCE OF U.S. INTO THE WAR

That is What Washington Officials Draw From President's Message and the Statement of Secretary Lansing ---"United States Drawing Nearer to the Verge of War" Says Lansing in an Official Statement--To:day's Cables From the Battle Fronts.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., December 21.—A quiet but firm intimation to Germany that the entry of the United States into the was as a result of the submarine could no longer be delayed. This is the opinion of officials here, reading between the lines of President Wilson's note and Secretary Lansing's explanatory statement this morning.

Underneath all this diplomatic exchange, it is thought here in authoritative circles, is the United States determination not only to suggest peace, but compel it by entering the war on the side of British allies, definitely balancing the scales, and quickly bringing peace. It is not thought, however, that Germany will permit things to go that far. It is hoped and anticipated that Wilson's note will draw from Germany such peace terms as will be acceptable to the Allies as a base at least of early and quick negotiations.

WASHINGTON, December 21.—Show down by belligerent countries became [illegible] the United States drawn nearer to war and because this nation feels this cannot go on long, is the real purpose behind President Wilson's note despatched to the warring powers, Secretary Lansing said to-day.

Lansing authorized the following as being the real purpose behind the Wilson message: "Our rights have been invaded and the situation is becoming so intolerable that it cannot go on long. More and more our rights are invaded by the belligerents on both sides so that the situation is becoming increasingly critical. I mean by that, that we are drawing nearer to the verge of war, and therefore are entitled to know what each belligerent seeks in order that we can regulate our conduct in future.'

LEGISLATIVE BUILDINGS, TORONTO, December 21. — In Ontario Provincial Government circles, President Wilson's peace move is soundly condemned. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson says Wilson's note is gratuitous and goes at an inopportune time. Hon. H. F. Mcdiarmid declares it is most untimely and will be strongly resented. Lesser officials say it is impertinence and unwarranted interference.

TORONTO, December 21.--Under the heading "President Wilson Starts His Knitting," the Toronto World interprets the President's peace move as merely to safeguard the interests of the United States, which feels that the Allies in ending the war, will make far-reaching trade deals among themselves, "barring out neutral nations who did not play a part in maintaining the liberties of the world."

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 21.—The failure of Dr Von Spitzmuller to form new Austrian cabinet was reported to-day in Vienna dispatches. According to the Emperor Charles has asked Clom Martinitz to attempt the formation of a New Ministry to succeed that of Von Koerber.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Four German aeroplanes were brought down on the Somme front to-day's official statement asserted. Otherwise there was lull in the fighting. On the Saloniks front the statement reported snow and rain.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 21 —Hearty endorsement of President Wilson's note to the belligerent nations was made here to-day by William Jennings Bryan former Secretary of state.

"By William Philip Simms" With the British armies in the field—"Delayed." Once again the notorious Ypres salient has earned a place on the wars score board.

The German official wireless on December 14th gave the impression of an important local victory scored there by German troops and said they stormed and occupied "British second line trenches south-east of Zillebeke, the garrison of which fled." Here's exactly what happened. At 9:05 at night on December 14th a strong German attack was launched against the British southern part of the salient. Expecting the attack the British got the stormers under a deadly fire so that when the Germans reached the British there were only ten of the attacking party left. They immediately scurried back.

The whole action lasted just ten minutes. The enemy losses were believed to be severe. The British casualties were very slight. All advantage remained on the British side, and valuable information was obtained from the bodies of the dead Germans.

"On the following day the Germans again attacked, this time at Hill Sixty near by a heavy barrage fire completely wiped out the attack, not one man reaching the British lines. Months ago and Ypres salient was the scene of some of the hottest fighting of the war. The Germans burling attack after attack against the Canadians there in an attempt to crumple their line."

PARIS, Dec. 21 —Lieut. Nungesser brought down his twenty-first aeroplane to-day. On Wednesday the official statement says French aviation squadrons bombarded the railway stations at Amay, Brieulles, Sur Meuse, Charleville, Mezures and Nesles. On the Struma front, in the Majada sector, there were intermittent artillery firing, growing violent in some places.

LONDON, Dec. 21. —Claude Grahame, of the Royal Flying Corps, one of England's first aviators, to-day was married to Ethel Levy, the divorced wife of George Cohan.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—German Ambassador Von Bernstorff, when told of Secretary Lansing's statement on the President's note, was obviously and plainly disturbed. He gave a strong impression that he attached considerable significance to Lansing's remarks on the purpose back of the President's note and did not seem to relish the suggestion of a possibility that the United States might become involved in the war.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—The Toronto Star, referring to Wilson's peace proposals, says "While we naturally resent any interference by outsiders with the course of the war and feel incensed that the American President is playing the game of Germany, it is just as well that we recognize that under cover. Wilson may have been bringing great pressure to bear on the German Government."

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—A months' truce between the belligerent nations during which time peace negotiations can be entered into, was advocated by Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore in a statement printed in the New York Evening Mail to-day.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 21.—Clem Martinitz has formed new Austrian Cabinet despatches here to-day from Vienna said.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The National prohibition bill was reported favourably by the Senate Judiciary Committee to-day.

Mayor Duffus' Message

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, — I have been urged by many representative citizens to become a candidate for the office of Mayor of the City of Peterborough for the coming year, and hereby offer myself on re-election.

My record for the past year is before you, and I am willing to be judged by it as to my qualifications for serving the city's interests another term.

It is becoming that I should express my opinions of policy and the more pressing needs of the city.

CITY FINANCES

The finances of the city have been as carefully safe-guarded during the past year, as was possible under the circumstances. The policy of the new Council must continue to be one of strict retrenchment, and, that no large expenditures be undertaken. We met with unforseen and difficult propositions, particularly due to the cancellation of taxes for licenses, together with the cancellation of certain taxes hitherto forming part of the city's annual assets, as well as considerable unusually heavy expenditure being incurred through litigation. It will be found, however, that the city is to be congratulated upon the manner in which its finances have been handled this year, credit for this is due to the care and diligence of the chairman and members of the Finance Committee; and it is a matter of pride to the whole Council that every department has co-operated in the laudable desire of cutting down every possible expense.

every possible expense. The details of the financial situation will be issued by the City Treasurer in a few days, and I am assured that when the figures of the year are completed, there will be a balance on the right side.

BOARD OF WORKS DEPARTMENT

During the present exceptional year, it was the policy of the Board of Works to do only such work as was esentially important and urgently necessary to keep faith with ratepayers and prevent undesirable deterioration and disrepair of roads and streets.

The same applies to surface drainage, which will have to be taken up systematically and in a comparatively elaborate manner. But having regard to financial and labour conditions, this is work that as far as at all possible and prudent, should be deferred till after the war. However, a more rigid inspection for the prevention of floods, particularly in spring, will have to be carried out.

Likewise, the matter of permanent pavements seems to be out of the question for the present.

In regard to sewers, I contend that on streets where they maybe petitioned for by ratepayers, in the regular way, and where they are required, as on Romaine, Prince and Princess streets, in the south, and other equally needed streets in other sections, they should be built, since, they are very largely paid for by the property owners by a frontage tax.

There are some stretches of sidewalk which will have to be built, but as sidewalks add to the debenture debt, only such as are urgently required should be constructed at present.

The foot-bridge to East City, to be attached to the C.P.R. bridge over the river, will be completed the coming year, and will meet a want long felt by the residents of the Southern and Eastern portions of the city, particularly those who live on one side of the river and work on the other.

The oiling of the streets to keep down dust is no longer an experiment. It is effective not only in exterminating the dust nuisance, but an important factor in preserving the street surfaces in good condition, and additional streets will have to be added to the oiled area.

FIRE PROTECTION

In regard to the Fire Department, a subject that is properly engaging a good deal of public attention, I may say that I am convinced that it is not adequately equipped in every respect—some of these very important for a city of the size and importance of Peterborough. It is evident that the day of horse-drawn apparatus, and the matter of one or more pieces of motor-driven fire-fighting equipment, must be practically considered, more particularly on account of the present horses being unfit for much further useful service.

We have many valuable factories and buildings the loss of any one of which would be a serious one for the city. They are entitled to the most adequate protection from fire the city can provide. The distance of some of these is so great that good service in the matter of fire-fighting cannot be given with our comparatively slow-moving apparatus and equipment.

For the mercantile section of the city, I would favour an inspection even more rigid than the present, of back yards, lanes, alleys, hallways and basements, with a view of securing more prompt and thorough response to the demand to lessen the accumulation of dangerous, combustible material.

With such indicated improvement provided and with the new force main and auxiliary steam pumping unit, installed and completed in 1916 by the Utilities Commission, would provide reasonably complete facilities for dealing with fires, and for better protection to life and property.

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE.

Great as seemed to be the need of a new bridge last year, the need seems to be still growing; the present bridge may be safe enough but its traffic capacity is inadequate to the requirements and deserts of the residential and business interests of East City. I am yet strongly of the opinion that one of the first large undertakings to receive attention is the construction of a new bridge, as soon as the financial circumstances of the city warrant.

Next year the city may have to take over the street railway in accordance with the understanding with the Hydro Commission; and then the extension of street car service across the river will inevitably involve the construction of a new bridge. These conditions may, unwilling as we are to face new expenditures, justify practical consideration of the problem.

During the past year I have faithfully tried to serve the interests of the city and the citizens, and respectfully submit that in view of my past services, and in view of the fact that my experience of the past year will fit me for giving better service another year, and that, conjoined with my assurance that if given the opportunity, I shall devote my best ability and efforts to giving Peterborough faithful and honourable service, justify me in claiming your vote and support in the coming election.

WATER FOR NORTH SECTION.

The question of city water for fire protection and domestic use in the northern parts of East City, is one I have long been interested in, and one of the requirements spoken of in my message of last year. While this has not been completed a good beginning has been made, and had it not been for the large amount of work on the new force main for the western portion of the city, would have been carried out. Now, however, that a start has been made, no doubt the work will be completed the first thing in the Spring. One hydrant has already been placed and as soon as the Utilities Commission can get to work there will be no cause of complaint.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH

It gives me pleasure to congratulate the Board of Health on what it has accomplished during the past year, and, especially, the good services given by the present Health Officer, Dr. Ames. Cases that have required prompt attention have not been neglected, and the conservation of the general health has received adequate attention. One of the new features in this connection has been the inspection of school children.

NIGHT SOIL COLLECTION

A satisfactory solution of the collection of night soil is one matter which interests a large portion of the community. This matter was not satisfactorily handled during 1916, owing to certain recommendations and adoptions not working out satisfactorily. It must be taken up vigorously by the new Council and a plan worked out which will ensure satisfaction. I feel confident that the work could be handled efficiently for a sum equal to about twenty cents per month or less.

THE SEWAGE DISPOSAL PROBLEM

The completion of the sewage disposal plant will require the careful consideration of next year's council. During the present year much time has been spent endeavouring to settle the question of a suitable location. The Provincial Board of Health, through its chief engineer, recommended what they claim to be the suitable location, having regard to all the circumstances, and gave the City an order and sufficient authority to take possession. Those living in close proximity to the location offered certain objections and the Council has been taking precautionary steps to overcome the objections.

Manufacturers Emphasize The Need of Better Equipment

Motorized Apparatus For Peterboro' Fire Department Suggested by Majority of Manufactures--A Number Express Opinion That Present Department is Undermanned---"Should Be Paid as Much as They Can Earn in the Shops" Writes One Manufacturer.

In response to an inquiry as to an expression of opinion in regard to better equipment for the Peterborough Fire Department in order that its efficiency may be kept at the highest point possible, the Examiner has received the following replies from manufacturers who are vitally interested in the question:—

ANYTHING LESS THAN THE BEST EQUIPMENT IS FALSE ECONOMY

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir, —Replying to your favour of 18th inst., we certainly think that our fire department should have the very best and up-to-date equipment in keeping with the population and business interests of our city. Any different policy from this would be false economy.

Yours truly

WILLIAM HAMILTON CO., LTD.
J. C. SMITH, President.

READY TO BACK UP ANY DEMAND MADE BY THE FIRE CHIEF

Peterborough, Dec. 19th, 1916

The Peterborough Examiner, City.

Gentlemen,—We acknowledge your favour of the 18th, inviting an expression of opinion as to what we consider necessary to obtain more effective fire protection for our city.

We are unable to express an opinion, but are prepared to back up any demands made by our efficient Fire Chief, as he makes this matter his business night and day, and is best qualified to know what is required.

Yours respectfully,
J. J. Turner & Sons,
Per J.

Best Protection is the Cheapest in the Long Run

Peterborough, Dec. 20, 1916.

The Peterborough Examiner, City.

Dear Sirs,—The recent serious fire here has pointed out that too much attention cannot be given to the fire fighting apparatus, or too much money cannot be spent in procuring for our brigade an equipment that will not only be effective, but save the greatest amount of time in arriving at a fire, and we believe that the electric motive power will do a solution to most of the difficulty as a fire of this nature, superior not only the immediate vicinity but the city, and if the apparatus prevents the loss of life it will have paid for itself. The best is the cheapest in the end.

Yours truly,
Auburn Woollen Co., Limited.
T. H. Kendrey,
Manager.

LARGER FORCE AND BETTER EQUIPMENT ARE REQUIRED IMMEDIATELY

The Peterborough Examiner, Limited,
City.

Gentlemen:—Replying to your favour of December 19th, soliciting my opinion as to what is needed to place Peterborough's Fire Fighting Facilities on a modern basis and in keeping with a progressive city.

In the first place, the strength of the brigade should be one man per one thousand population, which would mean a force of about twenty-two men, while at the present time there are only, I believe, sixteen men and at least one third of these are fresh recruits or unskilled in fire fighting.

Moreover, I think the equipment should be motorized throughout especially in view of the fact that a number of the large manufacturing concerns are a mile or more from the central and only station, and I believe this should be done at once; in fact, I have been in favour of such a move for some years and while my views on the matter were not prompted by the terrible calamity which happened last week, I am free to admit that it impressed me very forcibly with the idea that such a move as I have outlined would be perfectly justified and is worthy of prompt action.

Yours respectfully,
G. WALTER GREEN.

THE VERY BEST AND VERY LATEST NOT TOO GOOD FOR PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough, Dec. 19th, 1916

The Peterborough Examiner, City.

Dear Sirs,—Your favour of the 18th to hand, asking for my opinion as to what is needed in the way of apparatus to permit of more effective fire fighting. I am not in a position to say just what kind of apparatus is needed, but I do think that the very best and very latest machinery is not too good for a city the size of Peterborough.

It might be a good thing to take this Department out of the hands of the Council, and put it under a commission similar to that of our Water and Power Commission. I think this would be one way of stopping the haggling over small things, which we have seen the last year at different times in the Council.

I think that a penny wise and pound foolish, in this direction.

Yours very truly,
The Bonner Worth Company, Ltd.
Per E. Worth,
Secretary.

CITY NOT ADEQUATELY PROTECTED BY ONE FIRE HALL IN CENTRE

Peterborough, Dec. 19th, 1916

The Peterborough Examiner, Limited,
Peterborough.

Dear Sirs,—Replying to your favour of the 18th inst., with reference to the city's need in the way of apparatus to permit of more effective fire fighting, the writer's opinion is that the City of Peterborough with its large area, and its large values located in various parts of the city, is not at all adequately protected by one fire department, located in the centre of the city.

There should be located in the south end, in the north end, and possibly in East City, subsidiary fire halls with motor driven chemical engines and hose wagons with a sufficient staff to operate them until such time as relief could come from the central station.

I would hardly care to say definitely what equipment the fire halls should have, feeling that the fire chief is more competent to judge of this, but it does appeal to me that all the apparatus should be motor driven and that there should be sufficient so that the city may be in a position to handle more than one fire concurrently.

Yours truly,
Canadian General Electric Co., Ltd.
E. G. Patterson,
General Superintendent.

ANOTHER VETERAN OF THIS WAR FOR 247TH BATTALION

Sergt.-Major A. E. Britain, Formerly of Princess Pats, Transferred to the Peterborough Unit With the Rank of Lieutenant

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The 247th Battalion has gained another veteran of the present war in the person of Sergt.-Major A. E. Britain, formerly of the Princess Pats who has been transferred to the Peterborough unit with the rank of lieutenant. Peterborough citizens who remember Lieut. Britain when he was drill instructor of the Peterborough Rangers will share Lt.-Col. Ackerman's satisfaction in the acquisition of such a capable soldier. Lieut. Britain held that position here for a number of years, and then went to Toronto where he occupied a similar post with the Queen's Own Rifles. When the present war broke out Lieut. Britain joined the original Princess Patricia's Light Infantry, and saw much hard fighting with the famous Pats before he was finally wounded. Since being invalided home he has been acting as Sergeant-Major of the Bombing School at Camp Borden, and more recently at Toronto. The 247th Battalion now have a list of six officers who have seen service in the present war.

THE TRUE AND THE FALSE SPIRIT.

A Montreal journal on its "Christmas Page," prints a little poem addressed to children, which is in quite the wrong spirit. It sets forth that goody goody boys and girls will get a Christmas box; and that naughty children,—"they'll not get a Christmas box." This shows at once a bad spirit, and is bad theology. It sets up parents as judges and makes them the executioners of their findings. It is quite contrary to the spirit of Christmas. Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance. He came as the Friend of the friendless; he came to give mercy, not justice; to set up the kingdom of kindness, not alone to the deserving, but to the undeserving, the bad, the sorrowful and suffering. If we get only what we deserved in relation to our Creator, it would be a case of mighty short shrift and "short commons" with the best of us. If we have hope only in our own merit "we are of all men most miserable." The Christmas spirit, as well as the Christian spirit spells "Gift"—everything free, everything gratis. We cannot in our Christmas dispensing of kindness sit in judgment; we must give in freeness and fulness of spirit. We may not look the gift horse in the mouth. If this is good manners, it is good morals, not to consider the objects of our giving in any other spirit than the love that goes with the act, without reference to merit or character or condition. If we can venture to make distinctions in giving we must prefer those whose need is most. But at Christmas time the opposite spirit is too much shown. Those that have most of this world's goods get most in the way of gifts—is it cynical to say because they can respond in kind? Christmas-giving to be true, to be Christian, must partake of the character and meaning of the Great Gift that came to earth 1916 years ago.

NICKEL AGAIN.

The Nickel question will not down. The public of Canada is not satisfied with the assurance of the Government that Canadian nickel is not reaching Germany. The Government has not explained or shown, as national and imperial interests demand, that the nickel, known and admitted to have been shipped in the German submarine freighter, Deutschland, was not, as suspected and believed to be, Canadian nickel, or nickel refined from Canadian ores. There is a disquieting uncertainty about the whole nickel situation, and an uneasiness in the public mind, that will not be allayed by assurances that do not assure, that there is an "arrangement" by which Canadian nickel is prevented from reaching the enemy. There is only one certain way to provide that Canadian nickel should not be used for enemy purposes and against Canadians; and that is to provide that no nickel should leave Canada in an unmanufactured—unrefined — condition that Canada, through its Government, should have full control of its disposition, and that only under conditions of knowledge that assure against any possibility of nickel refined in Canada from our ores being diverted from its proper and patriotic use in making armaments or munitions for the use of Canada or Britain, or our allies. Home refinement is so obviously the right measure, not only in respect of loyalty to national and imperial interests, but of loyalty to Canada's practical monopoly of advantage from the home treatment of our national resources, that our largest commercial and industrial interests, and all thinking Canadians, demand on the part of the Government of Canada action that will give effect to a policy of home refinement. Indications of the character of this feeling—a feeling that is more generally entertained than expressed, is furnished by the following resolution passed at a meeting of the Duncan, B. C., Board of Trade

Whereas 80 per cent. of the world's supply of nickel is mined in Canada, and

Whereas, almost the whole of the remaining supply is mined in the French colony of New Caledonia, thus leaving practically the whole of the world's known nickel deposits in their natural state in the control of the allied governments, and

Whereas, owing to the fact of there being no nickel refinery in this country it is necessary to export nickel ore to a neutral state for treatment, and

Whereas, nickel is largely used in the manufacture of armaments, projectiles, and other military and naval requirements, and

Whereas, large supplies of this metal have been and are still being exported from the said neutral state to our enemies in Germany, and

Whereas, even more serious consequences would result from the foreign treatment of nickel ore in the event of the before neutral state becoming involved in war with this country,

Be it therefore resolved that the Canadian Government be urged to take immediate steps to insure the erection of Canada of a nickel refinery at the earliest possible date, and that pending the completion of such refinery, the Canadian Government take such action as will best assure control of the Canadian nickel supply for the sole benefit of the allied nations, and

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, to the Honourable the Minister of Militia and Defence, and to the representatives in Parliament from this province, and

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to other Boards of Trade throughout Canada, to other influential public bodies, and to the Press, urging that they endorse this resolution and do everything possible within their power to further the object of this resolution

The Examiner on its part heartily endorses the spirit of the resolution—its demand that the Government shall take such action as will ensure absolute and unequivocal control of Canada's nickel output—that will be indisputable proof that not an ounce of Canadian nickel shall find its way to the enemy except as component parts of munitions fired by Canadian, British or allied guns. One can't feel that the Government of Canada lacks interest in the cause of Canada and the allies; but one cannot repress the feeling that in view of the tremendous interests at stake, this interest is subordinate to some influence that obstructs effective action — either the deadening inference of official indolence, or some other influence: but whatever it may be is not in the interests of Canada, Great Britain, the Empire or their cause, as associated with that of the allies of the Entente

ROYAL BANK SHOWS RECORD STRIDES FOR PAST YEAR

Expansion on Larger Scale Than Ever Reported—Total Assets Now Over $253,000,000—Deposits Jumped by Over $45,000,000—Percentage Liquid Assets 53.24 Per Cent. Against 49.03 Per Cent Last Year—Connections Help Foreign Business of Canada.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Montreal, December 21.—The Annual Statement of the Royal Bank of Canada, which goes forward to shareholders, reflects in a striking manner the great strides the Royal is making among the leading Canadian banks, and the enormous benefits it is evidently obtaining from the strong and effective banking organization it has built up throughout the Dominion.

For the first time in the history of the Bank, total assets are reported in excess of a quarter of a billion, the increase for the past twelve months being $50,000,000, total assets amounting to $253,261,427, compared with $198,299,128 at the end of last year, and $179,904,054 at the end of 1914.

The general character of the Bank's deposits makes a gain of over $23,000,000 in deposits bearing interest a notable one, and is especially gratifying in view of the manner in which the Royal during the course of the year, recommended to its depositors investment in the large Dominion domestic loans. The gain in total deposits for the year is over $45,000,000, at the rate of close to $3,750,000 a month.

While the main features of the annual statement indicate that attention has centred on co-operation with customers and the maintenance of a very strong position in order to be continually prepared during the war period, there is a healthy increase in the profits for the year, these amounting to $2,111,307,65, equivalent to 17.87 per cent. on the average paid up capital, compared with $1,905,576.57, or 16.48 per cent., in the previous year.

GROWTH OF ASSETS

The general statement of assets and liabilities shows that of the total assets of $253,261,427, the amount maintained in the form of liquid assets is $121,127,063, equivalent to 53.24 per cent. of liabilities to the public as compared with $84,804,162 last year, and $71,244,677 at the end of 1914, a gain of approximately Fifty Million Dollars in two years. The principal accounts in the liquid assets are as follows: Current Coin, $16,072,763, compared with $15,946,289. Dominion Notes, $14,249,110, against $12,977,-790, while the Bank's deposits in the Central Gold Reserves has jumped to $6,500,000, up from $3,000,000 at the end of last year.

LARGER ACCOMMODATION PROVIDED.

The much larger accommodation the Bank is providing, notwithstanding the general tendency to pay off loans, is shown by a gain in total current loans and discounts to $124,864,838, compared with $106,552,634 a year ago.

The policy of service and co-operation always followed by the Royal is undoubtedly one of the reasons for the steady gains in deposits, deposit bearing interest having gained to $140,862,199, compared with $117,519,-330, while deposits not bearing interest have advanced to $39,365,396, up from $37,450,997 this resulting in the total deposits crossing the $200,000,000 mark, compared with $154,976,327 a year ago.

The profits for the year amounted to $2,111,307, equivalent to 17.87 per cent. on the average paid up capital, against $1,905,576, or 16.48 per cent the previous year. The profits added to the amount carried forward from profit and loss, brought the amount available for distribution up to $2,-787,779. Of this amount the regular dividend at the rate of 12 per cent., required $1,417,207; transferred to officers' pension fund, $100,000; written off Bank premises account $250,000; war tax on Bank note circulation, $118,220; contribution to Patriotic Fund, $50,000; leaving the amount to be carried forward to profit and loss, $852,346, compared with $676,472.

The annual meeting of the shareholders has been called for Thursday, January 11th

The local branch of the Bank, under the managership of Mr. V. Eastwood, will move into their handsome new premises on the first of January next.

OTTAWA HOUSE RECESS FOR THE CONFERENCE?

Parliament May Adjourn to Allow Premier to Attend—Election Is Off.

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—In Government and political circles at the capital there is a good deal of speculation as to the probable date of the Imperial conference. The most likely time is in the spring, and the Government may ask Parliament to adjourn for six weeks, from March to May.

It will be recalled that Parliament adjourned during the reciprocity debate in order to allow Sir Wilfrid Laurier to attend an Imperial conference. The Opposition will suggest that any proposal for the extension of the life of Parliament be deferred until Sir Robert has attended the gathering and made his report.

The holding of the conference will probably make it quite impossible for the Government to bring on an early spring election, for which it is understood here the preliminary plans have already been laid

Manufacturers Emphasize The Need of Better Equipment

In Favour of Best Appartus the City Can Afford

The Peterborough Examiner, Limited,
George St., City.

Dear Sirs,—Replying to your favour of the 18th inst., re more effective fire protection of the city. We are not well enough acquainted with our present equipment to give an opinion that we would consider of any value. We are certainly in favour of procuring the best apparatus for fire fighting purposes the city can afford. We are,

Factories in the Outskirts Need Better Protection

Peterborough, Dec. 21st, 1916.

Peterborough Examiner, City.

Dear Sir,—Referring to your inquiry as to our opinion of the fire fighting apparatus of the City of Peterborough, speaking for our own plant, we feel that on account of its location, the present equipment is ample protection. We do feel, however, that the manufacturing plants located in the outskirts of the city have by no means the same protection and for the benefit of the entire city, we would be glad to see the Fire Department furnished with motor equipment.

Curtailment of Expenses is a Very Expensive Experiment

Peterborough, Dec. 21st, 1916.

The Editor, Examiner Printing Co., City:

Dear Sir,—Replying to your inquiry of the 18th inst, we feel that Peterborough should have fire apparatus equal, if not better, than any other city having a population of 25,000. The Fire, Water and Light committee, or Commission having charge of the Fire Department should know what apparatus is necessary at all times.

If it has not been done, we would think it would be money well spent to have an independent expert go over the apparatus of our Fire Department and make a report of its efficiency. Not being experts, we do not feel confident to advise what additions if any are necessary.

Curtailment of expense in the Fire Department by way of insufficient equipment, or a cut in wages, as a rule is a very expensive experiment, and does not tend toward efficiency.

Yours very truly,
The Colonial Weaving Co., Ltd.
A. E. Coulthard,

Equipment of the City's Fire Department is Totally Inadequate

Dec. 21st, 1916

The Peterborough Examiner,
City:

Dear Sirs,— We are in receipt of your letter of the 18th, asking us for an opinion as to the city's needs in the way of fire fighting apparatus.

It would be very difficult for us to offer an opinion on this subject, as the apparatus that should be provided is more a question for an expert on fire fighting.

As manufacturers we feel that proper and sufficient appliances should be provided to protect the industries of the city from such disastrous fires as the one recently at the Quaker Oats Company. On this occasion it was proved beyond question that the equipment of the City's Fire Department was totally inadequate, and should stop for all time the discussion as to whether further equipment is necessary or not.

While we can readily understand that a fire of this magnitude might well tax the resources of any fire brigade, we feel that had this plant been situated in a closely built up section of the city that a large proportion of the city would have been wiped out.

If the Council consider that the future development of the city depends upon the location of new industries, and the extension of the present ones, proper and sufficient public service will have to be provided on a very different scale to what they are at present.

In our own case, there are no overground fire connections in the vicinity of our plant, there is no public lighting, we have no sanitary sewage connections, and we practically have to maintain our own police force. The one thing that we do get with a regularity and promptness which is commendable is the tax bill.

It is very difficult to anticipate that any large industries will locate in Peterborough under such conditions.

We do not offer the above remarks in any spirit of criticism, but we feel strongly that the future development of Peterborough will be greatly helped by a serious consideration being given to the proper equipment of the city in all departments.

Yours truly,
Henry Hope & Sons of Canada, Ltd.
Per. Richardson

MORE FIREMEN, BETTER PAY AND MOTORIZED APPARATUS REQUIRED

I am sure that it is the opinion of every manufacturer in the City of Peterborough that this city must have, and is going to have, without delay, a fire fighting machine in men and apparatus which the importance of its industrial development demands.

Councils that have come and gone, and the one that now is, have had no proper conception of the insignificance of the expenditure necessary to secure this protection of the property in this city, as compared to the inevitable losses which follow a course such as has been steered. Twenty-five efficient firemen is not too many. We now have sixteen. These men should be paid at least as much as they may earn in the shops. Their pay is now eight cents an hour. Motorized apparatus will save their cost every minute they save in getting to a fire. We now have an obsolete horse-drawn, time-losing outfit. The city may not hope to attract other industries to its precincts while it depends on, or defends, a semi-volunteer organization of fire protection.

Every aspirant for the position of mayor or alderman for 1917 should be requested to state his position on this supreme question and be given to understand that definite action and prompt acquisition of an efficient department in men and material is imperative, and that we do not want evasion, or damnable negligence of this factor of safety, and further, that it will not be tolerated by the citizens of Peterborough.

In so far as it goes, it will be many times less if these improvements are adopted than it will be to continue to take liberty with property and lives, and pay the toll of high insurance and an undesirable civic reputation.

Let us say to the incoming mayor and council, "Gentlemen, come across with it right now."

De Laval Dairy Supply Company.

Motorized Equipment Should Supplant the Horse-Drawn Vehicle

Peterborough, Dec. 20th, 1916.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

In reply to your enquiry as to my idea of fire equipment for the City of Peterborough, I wish to state that I have always been and am now in favour of the very best equipment the city can afford. I think everything that can be motorized should supplant the horse drawn vehicles. We have everything but equipment to give entire satisfaction. I think a moderate expenditure would place our fire department in good shape and make it the equal of protection given other cities of similar size to Peterborough that have the proper equipment.

There is no doubt that those who know absolutely the requirements and have the authority will provide the city with what it requires.

Yours truly,
G. A. Gillespie.

Congestion Makes Coal Mines Idle in South Wales Fields

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The Chronicle says that owing to the shortage in ships for the transportation of coal an extraordinary state of congestion exists in South Wales.

Miles of the sidetracks at Cardiff and Newport are chocked with coal-laden trucks which have been accumulating for many days, with the result that there is now a shortage of trucks.

Some of the pits are consequently idle and there has been a loss in production of a million tons in three weeks.

The Chronicle claims that the exportation license system has resulted in some ships sailing from coal ports in ballast.

MAYOR DUFFUS' MESSAGE

so as not to antagonize any one, at the same time safe-guard the City's interests.

A number of meetings has been held and the sewage question discussed from every angle in order to arrive at a satisfactory solution, which I believe if carefully handled, will terminate satisfactorily and in the best interests of all concerned. If the whole proposition could be deferred for a year or two, looking at it from a financial standpoint, it would be in the interests of the city. However, the present system of depositing sewage in the river is objectionable to the adjoining townships and the Provincial Board of Health, will cannot reasonably allow these conditions to exist more longer.

NEW INDUSTRIES.

The question of securing new industries will need the most careful consideration of the new Council. From now on, this is a matter upon which considerable time and energy must be spent. More advertising of the advantages of the City and all the influences that can be brought to bear should be exercised for the purpose of the City getting its full share of new industries that are likely to locate in Canada, to manufacture goods which were formerly manufactured in United States and in European countries.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, our Industrial Commissioner, has worked faithfully during the past number of years and a great deal of preliminary work and negotiations with different firms have been going on, which should be followed up, and no stone left unturned to secure as many industries, on as favourable conditions as we possibly can do.

In wishing the electors and the city a New Year of happiness and prosperity, I trust that you will give me the opportunity to co-operate with you and your city council in giving effect to this wish, as Mayor of the City of Peterborough.

Yours faithfully

REDUCING HIGH COST OF LIVING

At a recent meeting of the Legal and Reception Committee of the City Council at which the high cost of living was discussed, Ald. Edgar pointed out that one way of reducing the price of foodstuffs was to refrain from buying them. This is a plan that has been adopted in Toronto, Montreal, New York, and many other places including Kansas City which reports the following.

PRICES DROPPED.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 21.—Slowly but surely the Kansas City restaurant men's egg boycott is working. A. B. Crader, secretary of the organization declared.

Fresh eggs have dropped in price from 43 to 35 cents a dozen, and storage eggs from 37 to 31 cents, since the beginning of the boycott, eight days ago, Crader explained.

OFFICER ARRESTED AT BORDEAUX

QUEBEC OFFICER ARRESTED ON LANDING IN FRANCE—$40,000 FORGERY CHARGED.

QUEBEC, Dec. 21.—Chas. F. Rheaume, former lieutenant in the 167th Battalion, C.E.F. wanted here on a charge of forgery to the alleged amount of $40,000 was arrested yesterday at Bordeaux, France, just as he disembarked from the steamer Espagne from New York. He is said to have traveled across the Atlantic under the assumed name of Robert Probert. He had little money on him when arrested says the cablegram.

Deportation proceedings have been instituted. Rheaume is said to have gone to Montreal thence to Toronto, where he made large deposits of the money in various banks.

Before coming to Quebec, Rheaume was employed by newspapers in Montreal.

NOMINATIONS TO-MORROW

Nomination day, to-morrow, will find the automatically retiring aldermen back in the field.

Ald. Dobbin may have opposition in the Centre Ward, but it has not yet appeared.

The same applies in the North Ward where Ald. McIntyre has to face the electors. Mr. G. O. Cameron's name has been mentioned on the street as a possible candidate.

Mr. Edgar Worth will likely be nominated for the West Ward vacancy, and his is the only name thus far mentioned.

Over in the East Ward Mr. J. H. Smith will oppose Ald. Evans, and in the south Mr. W. H. Taylor is coming out to contest Ald. Edgar's stronghold.

The Mayoralty prospect will have to await to-morrow's developments. As yet there has been no mention of serious opposition to Mayor Duffus.

Four vacancies on the Board of Education will be filled from the following payable candidates. Messrs. Ackerman, Eastwood, Denne, Gordon, A. A. Fowler and F. W. Doan.

Mr. Robert Hicks will likely be unopposed for the vacancy on the Utilities Commission.

FORD FACTORY TO CLOSE FOR NEXT TEN DAYS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—As a means of relieving the railroad congestion now threatening all industries of America, the Ford Motor Co. will suspend operations completely to-morrow, and remain closed until January 3. Thirty thousand employees probably will be affected by the order. None will receive pay during the suspension.

Police Visit the Farmers' Market and Warn a Number of Women—By-law to Be Enforced

The police are taking steps to see that the market by-law is enforced. Yesterday a visit was made to the upstairs section of the local market and a number of women were warned that they must display a weight ticket on all fowl offered for sale. The by-law also calls for a tag on the basket showing the name of the vendor. This by-law must be carried out or prosecutions will follow. All poultry, dead or alive offered for sale on the market, must bear a ticket showing the exact weight of the fowl. The name and address of the owner must also be displayed.

MISS ANDERSON IMPROVING NICELY

LINDSAY, Dec. 21. — The many friends of Miss Olive Anderson, nurse-in-training at Kingston General Hospital, will be pleased to learn that she is progressing nicely, and that she is free from the pain at first experienced as a result of the accident sustained in that institution Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Anderson have received a letter from Kingston in which the heroic conduct of Miss Anderson received the highest praise. In pushing the carriage containing a patient into the elevator cage, the brave nurse fortunately moved a pillow with her arm, so that when the steel top of the door crashed down upon her hand, a portion of the pillow under the member undoubtedly saved it, as otherwise it would have undoubtedly been cut off.

No bones were crushed, and the hand will be saved.

Mrs. Anderson will go to Kingston to bring Miss Anderson home for Christmas.

Many a man who attempts to blow his own horn comes out at the little end of it.

Christmas Dinner To Cost More

Everything is Away Up This Year, From Turkeys to Nuts—Rice is About the Only Thing That Remains Near the Former Level, While Coffee is a Little Cheaper Than Before the War.

ORANGES AND APPLES

Although the rumors of peace proposals spread abroad, the impression that a slump in the price of foodstuffs would follow, it may be safely concluded that the Christmas dinner this year will cost just as much as if there had been no such proposals. There is no reduction in the cost of living, except that perhaps sugar may be a little easier on the market, and Christmas festivities may have to be curtailed among the poorer classes because the prevailing prices of much of the produce which is associated with Christmas are almost prohibitive.

In the wholesale market there has been a slight reduction in the price of sugar, but it remains to be seen whether that reduction will be felt in the retail market. Dried fruits may be placed in the luxury class owing to the fact that the supplies from California have come to an end, but a cargo of Australian currants is expected to arrive before Christmas, and this might have some effect on the price of currants. So great has been the demand on currants, and so small has been the supply, that some wholesalers have been entirely out of stock, but it is expected that the arrival of the new cargo from Australia will loosen conditions to a large extent, although prices will remain firm. Rice puddings may be regarded as a safe investment, and housewives may still go into the stores and ask the price of rice without getting a shock, for market reports say that rice "is reasonably priced." But tapioca is short and there is prospect of a still further increase in the price of this article.

NUTS VERY HIGH

Who could spend Christmas without nuts? Yet many people will do so this year for Valencia almonds are increasing in price, a cent a pound advance being recorded this week, and the fact that ships are now being held up in Liverpool, and that the Atlantic freight insurance rates are up, give the idea that there will be at least a 10 per cent., and in all probability a 20 per cent. increase in the price of nuts.

But coffee is the hero of the day, reports say that "except for the import duty upon it coffee is to-day cheaper to buy in quantity than it was before the war," but tea and cocoa remain unchanged, and the Christmas tea and cocoa will cost just as much as it ever did.

Oranges and apples are showing a slight shading upwards, with the exception of navels, and the season's increasing supplies are responsible for a slight reduction in prices. Cranberries will decorate the turkey this Christmas for the Cape Cod brand are reduced $2 per barrel, but grape fruit have advanced. Lemons are down, but bananas are unchanged.

Although the prices of the brand of fresh goods remain so high, there is a possibility that canned goods may be reduced by the importation of large quantities of canned tomatoes from Spain. For the first eight months of this year, Spain's shipments of canned vegetables totalled 7,009 tons against 5,631 tons for the same period last year. There has also been a large increase in Spanish sardine industry, and this importation from a new source may be one solution of the high cost of living problem.

ONLY SIXTY CENTS TO THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

Incredibly Low Cost of Administering the Canadian Patriotic Fund—Of Every $100 Subscribed $99.40 Goes Into the Pockets of the Soldiers' Dependents

No other Canadian Fund of the size and multiplicity of detail of the Canadian Patriotic Fund has ever been administered at so small an impairment of the contributed amount.

It is almost incredible but it is true, that of every one hundred dollars subscribed to the Fund, approximately ninety-nine dollars and forty cents go into the pockets of the dependents.

There is no middleman between the giver and the receiver to exact toll. When you contribute to the Fund you know that your money goes, practically intact, to relieve the wives and families of our citizens soldiery.

This great and unusual result is due to two main reasons: one, that bank interest on deposits brings in a handsome revenue available for administration expenses; the other, that nearly all the work of administering the Fund is performed freely by patriotic men and women.

In every town in Canada where there is a Branch of the Patriotic Fund, are to be found public-spirited men and women devoting without remuneration, their time and energies to collecting funds, visiting dependents, working for them along many lines of service, and carefully distributing the moneys allotted by these wives and children of our soldiers.

Think of it! Of the sixty cents deducted for administrating each $100, about 25c goes for stamps. The Fund sends out approximately 60,000 cheques a month, and each one requires at least four cents in postage and war tax.

The very basis of the Fund's existence is public confidence. Every man who has examined the workings of the Fund gives that confidence in fullest measure. Every man who has any doubts is urged to study the Fund, and make himself acquainted with its operations. The officers invite always the closest scrunity. It is their object and their pride to administer the Fund at a cost far below that of any other great national undertaking.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In the Examiner one evening it was suggested giving the entertainment for the soldiers' wives, mothers and children in the Grand Opera House. This would be alright for the wives with the elder children but impossible for those of us who have little children under 3 years of age to attend such an entertainment and I think I'm safe in saying that at least half of the 700 families are those with such young children.

Would it not be possible to arrange a Christmas tree in one of the local halls, or even the Armouries, with the old time Santa Claus, still dear to the children, giving each child a small gift a few candies or something like that?

We think most mothers willingly go without any gift themselves, to see the children enjoying themselves with more of the Christmas idea about them than there would be about such an entertainment at the Grand. Motion pictures can be seen any time and are not much of a "treat" to children nowadays. If the entertainment is to cost $125 at the Grand, we, and a great number of others, think that amount could be better spent in this way, or something of this kind, so that all the wives and even the wee tots can go and enjoy themselves.

Hoping you will find space for this letter.

Yours truly,
"SOME OF THE WIVES OF SOLDIERS OVERSEAS."

TEACHER FORMERLY RESIDED IN PETERBORO'

Miss Kate M. Chamberlain Died Suddenly

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—The death of Miss Kate M. Chamberlain, a well-known teacher in Givens street school, occurred at her home, 240 Lauder avenue, on Monday night. She had but recently moved into the new bungalow on Lauder avenue, and on Sunday morning went out to sweep the verandah and a little later was found lying unconscious. She never regained consciousness, and died on Monday evening.

Miss Chamberlain was born in Norfolk, Eng., and came to New York State as a child, and she was partly educated there. The family then moved to Peterborough, Ont., and lived there for about 15 years, when she completed her education for the teaching profession. Twenty-eight years ago she accepted a position at the Givens street school, and had always taught there up to the time of her death.

A man of experience says getting married is about the same as filing a petition in bankruptcy.

UNCLE SAM TO HAVE BIG SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The new United States battleships will cost $24,000,000 each, and will mount twelve sixteen-inch guns, naval chiefs told the House naval committee today. They will be, so far as is known, the largest afloat—and the most powerful—with 180,000 horsepower electric engines. Rear-Admiral Joseph Strauss, chief of the ordnance bureau, told the committee he himself would have selected 14-inch guns for the ships. Bearing out the testimony of Captain W. S. Simms yesterday, Admiral Strauss declared his belief that in a "real fight" the range of battle would be below 12,000 yards—within the fighting range of the fourteen inch guns. In such a case, he said, the fleet with the greater number of guns, other things being equal, would be superior. On the new battleships, he said, from 15 to 18 fourteen-inch guns could be mounted, as against 12 sixteen inch guns.

City Has Big Investment Behind Fire Department That Warrants Modern Apparatus

Consider the Fire Department not as the staff and material at the fire station, but an extensive system patterned for the immediate purpose of illustration on the organism of the human body. For if present and past Councils of this city have erred in their attitude toward the department, a palliating explanation is found in the general tendency to regard the equipment simply as so many men, horses, waggons and feet of hose. This has been the branch of the system for which the Council have been directly responsible, hence, to a certain extent their vision has been narrowly confined and directed to their immediate concern.

But the actual or visible fire fighting equipment is only a branch of the entire system, the heart of which lies at the pumping station; its mains spread like arteries throughout the body of the city, and its electric alarm system represents the sensory nerves.

It is only a few months ago that the local press described rather minutely the details of the almost perfect plant the Utilities Commission erected and completed at the pumping station. The money outlay need not be restated it is an important consideration. The principal fact is that the Commission has provided for the Fire Department a pumping station prepared for every reasonable demand and emergency, and which is ready and capable of responding to every requirement that may be made upon it for fighting fires. Moreover, its capacity greatly exceeds the probable demands for the present and even the immediate future. The Utilities Commission with a vision that has characterized its management has built for the future. In short the heart of the Fire Department is stout and strong beyond the prospective needs of its body.

But the Utilities Commission has not rested there. Having gradually built up its pumping station it has, in the meantime, extended its mains with the same broad object in view, present needs plus future expectations. During the past summer, a new large main was laid out through the north end of the city directed toward the western boundary. Eventually it will pass the Bonner-Worth factory and will loop up with a southern main at the Henry Hope factory.

This work will necessitate a pipe line down the boundary road and it should be installed within the next year or two.

Moreover, hydrants are plenty of them, dot the city in every ward. In short, the Utilities Commission has effected the frame, the ground work, for a Fire Department, presenting greater exactions than this city will probably make for years to come.

The Council has not stinted the extension and general equipment of the fire alarm system, quite an important branch with its supervision and control. This sensory system is practically above complaint. It is adequate for the city's needs, and the central apparatus at the Fire Station is modern and efficient.

But for the fire fighting apparatus there's the rub. Probably the less said about it the better, for its limitations are only too well known. The motive and fighting power represent the legs and arms of the Department. This is the equipment that must deliver the punch, but, reverting to the illustration, the entire Department presents the figure of a giant in body with puny legs and under-developed arms. In short we have a million dollar plant or thereabouts, with an actual fighting force so palpably antiquated, that even Lindsay emphasizes our weakness.

The contrast of the strength of our fire fighting base with the inadequacy of our front line equipment can hardly be overdrawn. And in considering the apparatus at the Fire Station, is not this broader survey the proper prospect? When Peterborough has been provided so completely with water pressure and water service, should there not be proportionate efficiency in that branch of the fire fighting organization that must, in the last analysis, "deliver the goods."

WOMEN MINERS IN SILESIA

Their Average Wage 43 Cents a Day in the Collieres.

Women form 12 per cent. of the employees in the mines of Upper Silesia, according to a report appearing in a recent issue of a German industrial publication. An excerpt from the report, as reprinted in the London press, reads as follows:

"The official miners' report of wages in Prussia show that in the Ruhr collieries female labour was introduced for the first time in the first half of 1916, amounting to 1.9 per cent of the total number of employees in the first quarter and 2.7 per cent. in the second. Their average daily earnings came to 70 cents in the second.

"In the Saar mines and the Wurm district women are not employed but in Upper Silesia they form 12 per cent. of the total employees. Their average daily earnings in Silesia amounted to 43 cents in the second quarter of 1916."

An ex-spinster says it is almost as hard to live with a husband as it is to live without one.

ASK 9,000 WOMEN NOT TO BUY TURKEYS AT HIGH PRICE

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—Pass up—not pass—the turkey!

The proud bird's doom is settled. The local Council of Women decided to 'out' Mr. Turkey rather than to cut him up. They'll cut him dead because he is so dear. They passed a resolution calling on their members to refrain from buying turkeys for the Christmas dinner at more than 35 cents per pound.

"No, it's not a boycott," said Mrs. A. M. Huestis, the president of the Council. "Boycotts are against the law. It is merely a recommendation to our 67 branch societies, which have 9,000 members in Toronto. Of course, we do not know yet just how effective our move will be, but if the majority of our 9,000 refrain from buying turkeys there should be a drop in the price."

"And why did the Council take this action?"

"Because we learned that some of the farmers are planning to raise the price even higher. It was 40 cents yesterday. Some of our members at the market heard farmers talking turkey prices, and saying that if the cold weather held out they would keep their turkeys until just before Christmas and get 45 cents a pound for them then. We know that the supply is short and that the past summer was a bad one for turkeys, but even at that, 35 cents is a fair price, and we refuse to pay more."

It is estimated that Toronto usually eats up 40,000 turkeys for its Christmas dinner. That number is likely to be cut down by a considerable margin this year, with the price at 40 cents a pound or more.

"How about a substitute for turkey? What can the housewife do?" said the reporter to Mrs. Huestis, who, in addition to her prominent part in public affairs, holds an equally prominent place in her own kitchen and has a considerable reputation as a cook.

"Well, I would suggest chicken," she said. "You can get a good soup from chicken in addition to the fowl itself. I bought a pair of good chickens at the market the other day for $1.60 and at an uptown shop they asked $2.50 for similar birds. There's a big difference in chicken. The milk-fed variety is, of course, by far the best. A couple of ducks made a good substitute for turkey. As for a goose, it takes more care in the cooking and the flesh is not as pleasing to the taste of most people."

"How about mock duck?"

"The housewife cannot save much that way. It used to be that you could get round steak at 10 cents a pound and with a little dressing one could make up a nice dish, but round steak has been elevated into society and the price has doubled in the last few years. As for pork tenderloin, they make a nice duck, too, but they are also boosted in price so that there's practically no saving in using them as a substitute."

As soil moisture becomes less the acid content becomes greater. Hence one difficulty in getting a clover catch in dry weather. Lime will correct acidity.

Matches can be waterproofed by dipping them in melted paraffin.

EYE-WITNESSES SAW SHEET OF FLAME BEFORE EXPLOSION

Observed Beginning of the Destruction of Quaker Oats Factory From Driscoll Terrace— Precautions Taken to Remove Foreign Matter From the Grinders

INQUIRY ADJOURNED

The Provincial Fire Marshall's investigation of the Quaker Oats factory fire was adjourned indefinitely this morning until some of the injured employees in the hospitals have recovered sufficiently to attend the enquiry. Shortly before noon, after a number of witnesses had been heard, Mr. Heaton said he did not propose to hear any further evidence at this sitting for the reason that it was fully covered along certain lines and he didn't wish to prolong the enquiry unnecessarily. Hence he would adjourn the hearing 'sine die' until those employees in the hospitals have sufficiently recovered to be present. Due notice will be given of the resumption of the investigation, and persons having any further evidence to offer are requested to notify Crown Attorney Hatton or Fire Chief Howard.

SAW FIRE FIRST.

Mrs. Annie Hopcroft, 468 Driscoll Terrace, across the river from the Quaker Oats plant, was the first witness this morning. She said she was on the verandah of her home, about 10 o'clock on Monday, Dec 11. She could plainly see the factory. She first saw flames through the windows of what she believed was the boiler house. Then the windows themselves, blew out, and the explosion immediately followed. The building blew up and collapsed.

Mr. Hatton pressed the witness as to her certainty, of which part of the plant first showed the flames. Mrs. Hopcroft said she was excited by the spectacle and could not remember exactly, but the flames seemed to come from lower storey windows of that part of the factory that blew up. This was immediately adjoining the boiler room.

MR. J. J. CUNNINGHAM.

Mr. John J. Cunningham, stock checker, said he had noticed at times an odour something similar to that of sulphur. He could not tell where it came from, or whether it was from the coke ovens.

Mr. Cunningham said he checked the peanuts and stock put in cases, sacks and barrels. His last checking was on Saturday, Dec. 9. In the basement of the centre section of the warehouse, that part of the concrete warehouse that collapsed, there was a large quantity of 'vim' feed. On the first floor, vim feed, mixed feeds, oatmeal, flour, Quaker Oats, in cases; on the second floor, Quaker Oats in cases, rolled oats in sacks, flour in sacks, (thousands of sacks); on the third floor there was no manufactured goods, except box shooks; on the fourth floor "shooks" and "strawboard" paper rolls; on fifth floor, nothing.

Commissioner Heaton directed his questions to discover the reason why the north central part of the concrete warehouse collapsed during the fire.

Mr. Cunningham said there was considerable more weight toward the north end than in the southern section. The [illegible] were in the front end, but at the rear, the north side, the goods could be piled up without unbroken spaces. On the top floor there were 10,000 sacks of vim feed. The bulk of the merchandise on the top and other floors was toward the north end of the warehouse.

VIM FIRE NOT RARE

Mr. James Packenham, millwright, was next called. The only sparks he ever saw while at work came from the grinders. Three or four weeks ago witness saw a fire that came from the discharge end of a grinder. There was only a flash and it went out. A few sparks of burned vim were blown out on the floor, but they were easily extinguished with chemicals.

Mr. Packenham was the employee who helped out Mr. Walsh from the second floor in the recent fire.

To Mr. Heaton, witness stated that the little fire of a month ago was not an uncommon occurrence in the mill.

SAW FIRE'S BEGINNING.

Mr. Alex. Reid, expressman, was delivering goods to Mrs. Hopcroft, on Driscoll Terrace the morning of the fire. There came a flash like lightning, the windows lit up, then followed the explosion, and the walls blew out and collapsed.

"The fire I saw was in the building that collapsed," Mr. Reid stated. "I heard the explosion right after."

MR. ROBT. STUART.

Mr. Stuart said he had been with the Company twenty-eight years and in Peterborough practically since the plant opened. He was recently engaged as inspector, giving most of his time to the package department. At the time the fire started he was on the shipping floor, about 100 feet from Hunter street.

"We had these puffs at different times, but they were not thought serious. We have magnets in the grinding mills to catch steel, nails, and such foreign matter. Larger articles would be caught in the sieves in the cleaning house."

Witness stated that these magnets caught a great deal of foreign matter.

Mr. Stuart told of the case exercised by the company to keep strangers out of the plant.

There were about 225 girls employed in the factory.

PNEUMATIC CLEANERS.

Mr. Kirn supplemented the evidence of Mr. Stuart to the effect that in the dry house there were pneumatic separators for removing foreign material from the hulls. This machine had been in operation six or eight years and had been successful in catching pins, pebbles, tacks and matter of similar weight from the hulls.

MR. T. B. McMAHON.

The next witness, Mr. McMahon said he could not offer anything more than had been said by other witnesses. He noticed the odour of smoke, on Monday morning, just before the fire. That was not unusual.

NUMBER OF ALARMS.

Chief Howard, re-called, presented a list of all the fire alarms from the Quaker Oats Co. since June 21st, 1909. There were nine alarms from that box and five of these were for fires outside the factory, burning saw dust and grass.

Witness said there was a terrific explosion preceding the collapse of the north end of the concrete warehouse at 5.45 p.m. He had noticed

MR. MARTIN KIRN.

Mr. Martin Kirn, mechanical superintendent, stated yesterday afternoon that he had been with the Quaker Oats Company from the beginning of the construction of the plant. Following the explosion he looked out of a west-side window, and saw flames emitting from some of the windows of the mill. The fire extinguishers had been used the last time about three or four weeks ago, on a small, smouldering fire in the 'dry house.' It was the custom to immediately re-fill the extinguisher tanks whenever they were emptied, and they were returned to their proper places. Mr. Kirn related Mr. Walsh's account of the origin of the fire. Witness knew only what had been told him. Walsh remembered looking into the grinder, but knew nothing after that. He had previously sent a man down to the next floor to enquire about the smell of smoke they had noticed.

Mr. Kirn said he believed that all the apparatus for fire fighting was in good condition at the time of the fire.

To Mr. Heaton, witness said that as far as he remembered all parts of the drier building had the sprinkler system. The entire building was protected in this respect. There were four motor-driven and one belt-driven grinding 'mills,' and one stone mill.

OTHER EXPLOSIONS.

"We had an explosion in the Rachford (Vt.) plant and one in the Cedar Rapids mill. I understood they occurred in the grinding room." The fire in Peterborough, in 1908, burned off the roof and fifth floor of the mill. The supposition at that time was that it occurred in the aspirator. Witness said there was no known device of preventing these fires. "If we knew of them we would have provided them."

Mr. Heaton—"I should think you would have, from what you had already done."
